THE PLAY BEGINS

A hush! A sigh! Hearts now beat fast.
Await we all the Play to see.
The curtain rises. Now, at last,
Begins the drama of Tishri. G.C.

Playgoers all, once more we await the rise of the curtain. Once more the Drama of the Year-to-Be. What lies beyond?

Slowly, slowly, the curtain rises, Time holding the tasselled cord. The stage is set. Israel awaits expectantly.

Certain that

will be a leading figure in the drama. No less certain that the twin spirits of ENTERPRISE and SERVICE will play a leading role.

ROSH HASHANA.

With the passing of to-day there passes another year in the Jewish calendar, and 5685, as the Jewish denomination has it, gives way to 5686. The Festival of New Year among Jews is alike the most sacred and the most joyous of all their celebrations. The traditions that cling to it are legends born of ideas of Life and of Death, of the passing away of the old and of the supersession of the new. They echo with the immutability of what is human and the transcendental Eternity of the Power that governs the world and all that therein do dwell. They bring to our minds how in the midst of life we are in death, and, even more important, tell us how in the very midst of death life may be assured to us. Thus, the notion of Repentance has always taken a prominent part in the day's celebration, bidding us recollect that Remembrance of the past and determination in regard to the future, while the future is—humanly speaking—with us, are the real Jewish philosophy applying not to this celebration only but to every day and every hour we are permitted to live. A striking symbol of all this is afforded by the sounding of the Shofar. It bears for us the unerring meanings of contemplation and of reconciliation. And yet there is nothing of pessimism, nothing of despair in our New Year's Day. It calls forth joyous and hearty wishes, speeding from lip to lip the message of hope for the future, of joy and prosperity. And this with a people whose long history has been in the main one of agony and of care, one in which the ills of this life and not its pleasantness so predominantly prevail. A people that can thus regard personally the going and the coming of the years, and still can envisage them with buoyant trust, indicates itself surely as one in which Religion is endurably fixed, one which, never forgetful of the facts of human existence, is still so reliant upon God—so "God-intoxicated," as one of its foremost children put it—that only thus could it have borne the slings and arrows of its long-drawn tragedy. As we stand upon the brink of the passing of yet another year, our mere existence as a people proclaims to the world that, conscious as we are of all that being a Jew connotes, conscious as we are of those sufferings which are essentially Jewish added to those that are the lot of all humanity, we still place our reliance upon the Almighty that for us as a people, and as individuals He will, in the quaint language of the ritual: "Inscribe us for a good New Year!"

And Now?

In any review of the past year, or any anticipation formed about the future, so far as Jews are concerned, the Zionist Movement takes incomparably the supreme place in Jewish activities. There is all the difference—let it be realised—between the Zionist Movement and the Zionist Organisation. Happily, the one is not so vitally dependent upon the other now that Zionism has passed into the World-policy it has become. Whatever has happened in respect to the Organisation, it is manifest that the Movement, at least from one point of view, progresses and thrives. A large and continuous migration of our people is finding its way back to our ancient home, and, on the whole, is prosperous and happy. And although, on the one hand, we for our part do not regard that as necessarily the triumph of Zionism, and, on the other, we are sure that a virile Zionist Organisation could help immensely in that direction, still it is obvious that for Zionism to succeed there must first be a considerable settlement of our people in Palestine, and that is going on before our eyes. We have more than once explained that to our thinking, and from a national point of view, there is no political security for the new Yishub, the only means whereby the best of its ideals can be fostered and its material interests guarded. We do not intend here to discuss the question whether the Jewish settlement could have been even as gratifying as it is—and it is by no means wholly so—if there had been an insistence by the Organisation upon the Jewish rights which it had won for the Jewish people. Suffice it to say, that that particular point is largely an academic one, and that Time alone will prove whether it is safe for Jews to give their energy, their toil, and their substance for the upbuilding of Palestine, with virtually nothing to secure to them as Jews the result of all their labour and all their self-sacrifice. At the moment, the more important question is the attitude towards Dr. Weizmann and his colleagues which should be adopted by those who find themselves in deep and searching disagreement from his policy. So far as they are concerned, they have done their duty clearly, and in face of all odds, in endeavouring to win over Congress to their views, or at least to some modification of the Zionist leaders' plans. Their failure, to our way of thinking, is largely their merit; because its completeness is positive proof of the hopelessness with which they had to struggle and the courage they brought to bear in their self-imposed task. We have generally supported them not, it goes without saying, in the remotest, because of any personal ill-feeling towards Dr. Weizmann, but because we have no hesitation in saying, during the last three years his policy has grown cumulatively less in accord with the principles of the Movement which he leads. And whatever else may have induced the opposition to him, it at least based itself firmly upon those very principles. But now the Congress is over, and so all sentiment of bitterness which it evoked ought now to be set aside. Congress, by an enormous majority, has given its support to Dr. Weizmann, and that Zionist will be neither loyal to the Movement nor working in its true interests, who, while yet maintaining a keen and watchful look out upon events as they develop, does anything to harass or obstruct him in carrying out the policy he has initiated, and which Congress has confirmed. The manner in which it did so may be open to criticism. We think it is largely so. But the outstanding fact which cannot be gainsaid is that there was no man who stood anywhere near to Dr. Weizmann as a possible or prospective leader. That is a fact which every true Zionist must recognise, and its non-recognition, involving as it would disobedience to the wish of Congress, would be a grave disregard of elemental Zionist teaching. Between opposition and obstruction there is a wide line of demarcation. The opposition has done its best (or its worst); it must not descend to obstruction. In consequence of his letter arriving very late last week we had not the opportunity of replying in more than a footnote to the protest by Dr. Eder at an observation we made concerning the Actions Committee in a Leading Note the week before last. But it ought really to have been clear to our esteemed correspondent that the application of the word we employed regarding the relations between Dr. Weizmann and individual members of the Actions Committee (and to which Dr. Eder objected) was, in the first place, limited and next, that of course nothing morally reprehensible to them was intended or thought. All we meant to imply was the dominating power of Dr. Weizmann's will—that and nothing more. As our readers are aware, we think a grave blunder was committed in deciding to hold the Congress in Vienna, in view of the anti-Semitic threats that necessitated the gathering being held under close police protection. Happily, the threats in the end turned out to be mere demonstrations only; and a correspondent last week pooh-poohed all reports that had come from Vienna of anti-Semitic disturbances, as "grossly misleading and exaggerated." Be that as it may, we have surely much to be thankful for in that anti-Jewish sentiment requiring to be controlled by some six thousand police placed around the Congress building, resulted in mere smoke. And having regard to what actually occurred, Mr. Moss Greenberg perhaps had at least some ground for deeming reports of the disturbances that eventuated, in the way he describes them. As we say, however, the Congress is past. It decided that to Dr. Weizmann should be given an unfettered hand to pursue, on behalf of the Movement, the policy he has adumbrated, and we hope that no Zionist will now try to prevent him from carrying into practice what Congress has ordained, or harass him in his obedience to its decree.

The West London Synagogue.

Mr. H. S. Q. Henriques, K.C., with one of his colleagues on the Council of the West London Synagogue, journeyed to America at the end of last month with the object of finding a Minister suitable to occupy the position rendered vacant by the resignation of the late Rev. Isidore Harris. It is not altogether gratifying to know that in order to fill an important office in the Anglo-Jewish Ministry, such as the one at Upper Berkeley Street, it is necessary to go outside this country. We assume that the salary attached to the office is adequate, and thus altogether it may be rightfully regarded as one of the prizes of our Pulpit. It may be that insistence upon the idea that the Chief Ministership at the West London Synagogue is a matter of rota succession, has something to do with the holding back by men who do not care on such a consideration to accept nominally a subsidiary office. Otherwise, it is difficult to understand why some efficient candidate from this country should not have been forthcoming. To be sure, from the larger point of view, no Jew, whatever his natal origin, should on that account, all other things being equal, be barred out of any Jewish pulpit. Still it does not reflect creditably upon the Jewry of these lands, that when such a post has to be filled the occupant has to be sought in another Jewry, which itself is constantly complaining about the dearth of pulpit recruits. We had hoped that the authorities of the West London Synagogue would have found themselves able to strike out a new departure in this matter. There are at least two members of the Synagogue, either of whom could become admirable Ministers if so inclined. Both of them have been assisting the present incumbent, the Rev. VIVIAN SIMMONS, since the whole burden of the ministerial office fell upon his shoulders. There may be others besides them. But the point is that it would in our view have been a splendid thing if the Synagogue could have enlisted one of its own members as one of its Ministers, and we hope that even now it is not too late for some attention to be given to the idea.

A Home of Rest.

Our advertisement pages this week contain an appeal for funds necessary to complete the £15,000 needed for adding to the Home for Aged Jews, a Home for Rest for those who have passed beyond all human help. When this idea was first mooted, we gave it our instant support, and indeed it has been long enough before the public. The need for such a Home where those stricken with mortal illness may pass their final hours on earth amid the loving care and attention of their own people, has been endorsed by everyone who knows anything of our people's wants and of the added pain and sorrow which approaching death brings to those who are conscious of their nearing end and are divorced from their own kith and kin. Of the £15,000 required, we are concerned to see that less than half—only £6,000—has been given or promised. That is not a brilliant performance, nor is it a telling example of kindliness and consideration on the part of those who stand for philanthropy in Anglo-Jewry. Something better and more worthy will assuredly be forthcoming, unless the community is to belie its reputation and manifest a disregard of the example that has come to it from generations gone by. These are not times when we dare close our hearts and our minds against the calls of the poor, or when we can send empty away those who lack and suffer, merely because we are selfish lovers of pleasure and devoted to no thought other than our own enjoyment. We trust very sincerely that the £9,000 still required will be quickly forthcoming, and that the £2,500 needed for the annual maintenance of the Home will be speedily secured. Few causes can touch all of us more nearly. Death is the common lot, and anything that can assuage its anxieties, or render the passing of life on earth to the life beyond less painful, ought successfully to claim the help of us all.

Sir Herbert Samuel.

LORD PLUMER'S CONGRATULATIONS.

Lord Plumer, High Commissioner for Palestine, has cabled to Sir Herbert Samuel, the former High Commissioner, on his appointment as Chairman of the Coal Commission:

"Best wishes for your success in your new and arduous public service. All in Palestine are sensible of the compliment which has been paid to them through you."

Sir Herbert Samuel returned to London on Thursday in last week from the Tyrol, where he has spent three weeks. He has already taken up his duties as Chairman of the Coal Commission, the first meeting of which was held on Monday morning.

The Jewish Board of Guardians.

An Appeal.

From Mr. Arthur Stiebel (President).

To the Editor of THE JEWISH CHRONICLE.

SIR,—I have once more to make my annual appeal on behalf of the Jewish Board of Guardians. Our figures for donations and subscriptions both show an increase on those for the corresponding period in 1924, but I regret to say that these increases are far more than counter-balanced by a falling off on legacies. Moreover, when we come to the other side of the balance-sheet we find an increase in the sums expended on relief. It is the fixed allowances which are responsible for the whole and more than the whole of this increase, for there is a falling off in other items of expenditure. In other words, the difficulties of the present day are pressing hardest on those least able to bear them—the aged, the infirm, and the widow. In our effort to succour these, our deficit, which stood at over £17,500 at the end of last year, now stands at over £20,000.

The Jewish community have stood by this Board nobly in the past—once more I beg of them to help us to help the helpless.

I ask all to send their gifts to me either at 1, Sussex Place, Hyde Park, W.2, or at the offices of the Board, 127, Middlesex Street, Bishopsgate, E.1.

Yours truly,

ARTHUR STIEBEL.

127, Middlesex Street, Bishopsgate, E.1.

A NEW YEAR MESSAGE.

FROM THE CHIEF RABBI OF THE BRITISH EMPIRE.

On every Atonement Day, in the Temple of old, the High Priest prayed for "a year of blessings and good decrees, a year of peace and tranquillity, a year in which Thy people, the House of Israel, may not be in need of support, one from the other."

Such might well be the keynote of our prayers at this Solemn Season. May it be God's will that in the coming year neither cry of lamentation nor tidings of disaster reach us, and no portion of the Jewish people stand in need of the intercession or help of their more fortunate brethren. A rare, world-historical opportunity is given to the men and women of to-day for the upbuilding of the Holy Land; for the advancement of Jewish learning therein; and for strengthening Israel's children everywhere in the spiritual borders of the Fathers. May the year dawning upon us be a year of tranquillity and good decrees so as to render possible the undivided constructive effort of the whole House of Israel for the realisation of these sacred tasks.

Great has been Israel's agony in the heathen rage of the War and of the years after the War. Thank God, the terrible effects of the earthquake, whirlwind and fire of those calamitous days are passing; and the still, small voice of humanity is beginning to be heard. May men and nations more and more realise that Righteousness and Truth alone are mighty and prevail. That way lies the lasting healing of the nations; and in that healing of the nations shall be Israel's peace.

Ellul 22, 5685. J. H. HERTZ.

The Home Secretary and Commander Kenworthy.

A SPIRITED REPLY.

THE JEWISH WORLD of yesterday contained the text of the reply sent by Lieut.-Commander the Hon. J. M. Kenworthy, M.P., to the letter of the Home Secretary (Sir William Joynson-Hicks), referred to in our last issue, in which Sir William challenged the accuracy of some of the statements made by Commander Kenworthy in an article which appeared in THE JEWISH WORLD on August 20th.

In regard to the Home Secretary's statement that Commander Kenworthy's article was "offensive and inaccurate," the latter replies that it was meant to be offensive to Sir William's school of thought in the the political sense. He admits making, in a particular case, the mistake of confusing thirty with thirteen, but points out that the principle is not altered, inasmuch as thirteen years should surely be long enough for a respectable and industrious citizen to qualify for naturalisation, and adds that the Home Secretary himself had expressed the opinion that an alien should not be naturalised until he had been resident for at least five years in the British Empire.

Commander Kenworthy goes on to cite another case of alleged unjustified refusal of naturalisation, and describes Sir William Joynson-Hicks's attitude as "definitely anti-foreign and contrary to the whole spirit of the League of Nations." In conclusion, Commander Kenworthy extends to the Home Secretary his personal sympathy on the difficulty he must find in satisfying the extreme elements of his Party "who are continually declaiming against foreigners in general, and Jews in particular," and in carrying out at the same time the high traditions of His Majesty's Principal Secretary of State.

The second of Commander Kenworthy's articles, which will deal with "Palestine, the Zionist Programme, and the British Empire," will appear in next week's JEWISH WORLD.

Jewish Lads' Brigade.

STAFF CHANGES.

Important changes in the Staff of the London Regiment are announced this week. In consequence of his continued illness, Major C. W. Tabbush has resigned the command of the 1st Battalion. His illness has occasioned profound sympathy and regret among all ranks of the Brigade, and his resignation, after six years in command of the 1st Battalion, will be deplored by all members of the London Regiment, among whom he was a popular and respected figure. Major B. M. Woolf, the Officer commanding the 2nd Battalion, has also relinquished his command on his appointment as Brigade Quartermaster. Major Woolf's many secretarial duties no longer permit him to devote much time to the office of Battalion Commander. As the result of these resignations, it had been decided to place the command of the London Regiment under a Regimental Commander, whose appointment will shortly be announced. This officer will have Major G. D. Solomon to assist him as adjutant. The two battalions will follow largely on the lineswhich have hitherto been in force. Captain C. L. Magnus has been appointed Adjutant of the 1st Battalion in place of Major Solomon, and his success as commander of the Dalston Company and as sports officer gives confidence for successful achievement in his new position. Capt. J. P. Lazarus, who has acted as 2nd Battalion Adjutant since the marriage of the Hon. Stuart Montagu, will continue in that position.

Col. E. M. Halsted and Lt.-Col. E. M. Joseph entertained the officers of the London Regiment to dinner last Sunday evening at Camperdown House.

As last year, services will be held at Camperdown House during the Festivals, under the auspices of the United Synagogue. The Brigade choir will assist in the choral portion of the services, and a bugler will act as Baal Tokiah.

IN THE COMMUNAL ARMCHAIR.

A Peace Year.

By Mentor.

THERE is a tradition that when Rosh Hashana occurs on the Sabbath, the year which follows will be characterised by Peace. But traditions in these matters are unreliable. Lord Granville, in his memoirs, tells us that when he took office as Foreign Secretary on the death of the Earl of Clarendon, he called the heads of the various Departments together and was assured that the political horizon had not appeared so unclouded for many a long day. In less than a week, however, the Franco-German war burst upon the world. Indeed, as the New Year is opening on a Sabbath Day, war is raging in at least one important centre; while at many another point there is grave uneasiness in case the position there become critical to the degree of warfare. I am afraid, therefore, that the very natural tradition to which I refer, not alone cannot be relied upon, but ought to form rather a warning than otherwise, in case we may be led into the comfortable idea that the peaceful Sabbath nature of Rosh Hashana day will necessarily characterise the year.

o o o

Taking the most optimistic view of the prospects before us, opening out with 5686, there is not much ground for concluding that the year is likely to be a restful one. I am not for the moment thinking only of the Jewish aspect of things. There, there is little anywhere to give us hope that the New Year will yield cause for association with all the delightful things reminiscent of the Jewish Sabbath. For us Jews there is indeed a sorry look-out. Whether we turn East or West, North or South, the story that confronts us is grim and lurid, filled with pain and misery and sorrow. These are words I know, and because they have so constantly been employed for the same purpose of depicting the Jewish position, it is to be feared that for most of us they have lost the full force of their meaning—they have become just conventionalised form. And if we stop to say that the condition of things has never been exceeded in the intensity of its darkness, that too has been said so often that it seems to have become crystallised and appears no more real than the utterance of some compliment. Why, besides, say it now? Mayhap here and there, particularly where things are not so bad (or not yet so bad) for Jews, there are souls actually happy and contented, greeting with a feeling of joy New Year's day with all the gladsomeness the celebration implies. Why disturb their equanimity? Why shatter their festival sentiments before, for them, events come to break them? Let as many of us as will and can wish—no harm in wishing—our neighbours a happy New Year. It can be fully attained, I feel sure only, by a more or less selfish disregard of the true position in which the majority of our brethren are placed. But then, such is the way of the world; and excessive altruism, excessive regard for others, would surely render normal life intolerable. Let those who will, then, "be merry and gay on our New Year's day!" It is a season from every point of view calculated to bring happiness to the Jew and joy within his surroundings.

What I have in mind when I contrast the tradition of a peaceful Sabbath illuminating the year, the first day of which occurs upon it, with what we shall probably find in actual working, is not so much the Jewish aspect of things nor such war operations as are even now proceeding in Morocco. I am thinking of the prevailing feeling of discontent, the eruption of sentiment, that, try where we may throughout Society, we must find all-pervading. Wherever we turn, there is trouble between those who employ and those who are employed, between those possessed of riches and those whose lives are "cabined, cribbed, confined" by having to be lived upon a margin best described as that of the earning of one's daily bread. In every industry there is anxiety, anxiety upon the part of those who labour lest their none too ample wages suffer some attempted reduction which may drive them, out of sheer self protection, into the vast army of the unemployed in this and other countries. And there is anxiety upon the part of those who supply the capital whereby industry alone can be carried on, lest some demand for larger wages will render that capital utterly unremunerative and the industries in which it is employed a failure. And beneath all this ebbing and flowing of an angry sea, there is the earthquake fire of revolutionary economic theories which, propagated as they are, are bound to prove attractive to certain mentalities, and which render it more and more difficult for the sea of industry to become calm. "Dole" in one form or another seems to be the one refuge which statesmanship can find for itself, and "Dole" sets up wherever it is applied a vicious circle of cumulative ills.

o o o

It is not fair to assign all the blame for the present economic condition in this country—and England is in much better case than some, even if it be in much worse case than others—to one or other of this or that section of society involved. If we would understand it and look upon it understandingly, we would come to see how human nature in this, as in so many other matters of life, plays a greater part than we are wont casually to think. We hear desperate railings at the Capitalist. Yet who of us can be reasonably surprised if the man who, having managed to save a few pounds, is anxious not to lose them, or feels that his hard work, his energy, and his toil have given to his capital certain rights, moral as well as legal, which he is entitled morally as well as legally to enforce? On the other hand, who shall deny that the toiler, the worker, has not good ground for anxiety and no little apprehension concerning the position to which Capital may reduce him? We must not forget that these questions are not of yesterday or of the day before. They are the resultant of a long period when, it must be confessed, Capital had largely its own way, for one reason because labour conditions had so vastly improved upon those that prevailed in a previous period. Any Trade Unionist will tell you that working men were forced to combine, because otherwise they could not have resisted the unconscionable Capitalist, any more than the righteous Capitalist in these days can do otherwise than combine against the unconscionable dishonesty urged by certain Trade Union leaders. The other day someone brought to my notice a case which I am sure does not stand alone, but which is well worth telling. In the days when English trade was "booming," consequent upon the world-demand for coal for the work of the iron and steel industries, a young boy was employed in some factory or another to keep turning a wheel for twelve hours per day, for which he obtained the munificent wage of 2s. 6d. per week. At the end of a month his employer called him and told him that he thought his wage was too much and that he did not intend to pay any more than 2s. per week in future! The lad, resenting this terrible treatment, threw up the job, and he now represents in the House of Commons, I am assured, his late employer's firm as part of his Parliamentary constituency. As I say, I doubt not that this ineffable meanness could be matched by many a story of meanness on the part of employers, as I am sure that they would not fall short of examples that could be given of equal ill spirit on the part of many a working man in these days.

o o o

Now, you may ask what all this has to do with the celebration of Rosh Hashana. I refer once again to the tradition to which I alluded at the beginning of what I have here written. And I would say that for the Jew there will open to-night a New Year, the first day of which will be a Sabbath and, notwithstanding what I have said about the New Year prospects, it is given to each of us, here a little, there a little; himself to contribute towards that tradition as regards 5686 failing not. And as the chief foreseen trouble is between Capital and Labour, I would urge that those of us who are Capitalists can do something, each in his little or larger sphere, to prevent discontent and anxiety, real discontent and real anxiety, on the part of those whom they employ. A little consideration, a little sympathy, a little understanding, a little appreciation of the other fellow's position, and beyond all, a little bit of self sacrifice—perhaps a few cigars less during the year, or an "affair" somewhat less gorgeous and less ostentatious—and the money could be found to make it a little easier for the worker to live, and to bring, from his point of view, even luxuries within his reach. By some such means, and in some such direction, all of those who employ can help to make the Peace tradition a reality. And are you a worker? Are you dependent upon your weekly wage? Then show yourself not hostile to, but in co-operation with, the one who employs you. Chase from your mind the evil thoughts of malice and uncharitableness and envy. Do not imagine that because some employers are monuments of brutish selfishness, there are not others with kindly dispositions, really desirous of making life not only tolerable but happy for their workers. I should be the last to counsel any working man to humbly docility and to suffering being misused by any employer. But just as, so I am told, there are some women—I expect men are about the same—who will find some intended cause of annoyance in anything that may be said to them, when that particular mood is upon them, so I know there are working men who will look with suspicion upon anything their employers may suggest, sure that they will find in it some dodge or some plan whereby the worker may be worsted. This may be so in some cases. It is not so in all, and the worker who assumes evil where no evil is intended, is just as silly as the woman (or, as I prefer to think, the man or woman) who in sheer pettiness does the same. To Jewish workers, then, I would urge the thought that the year that will now soon be upon us is traditionally a Peace year, and that they can contribute, each his little mite, to the realisation of the pretty legend. And thus for all of us, carrying the same idea of "neighbourliness" into all our dealings with our fellow-men, there will be at least firmer ground for our hopes being realised, as we wish each other a happy New Year.

I AM STILL SAYING "NINE"!

The public, however, is still saying nein; and I am wondering how long it will be before there will be a nearer approximation between the public and myself. Although I really do not see that there can be any other way than the way I use for spelling the "nine" I am looking for. I, of course, mean the difference between our list-total below and £900. Well, we will see and we will wait; although I have not very long to wait before I see.

This I would say to all our kind donors: "A happy New Year to you"! And if those who have not even yet sent to me wish for a happy New Year for themselves also, I can find no better prescription than that they send me a little more than they can afford for ensuring for the Kiddies of the Slums a fortnight's holiday in the country or by the seaside. Obituary.

THE LATE MR. A. M. WOOLF, O.B.E.

MEMORIAL SERVICE.

A service in memory of the late Mr. Albert M. Woolf, O.B.E., was held on Sunday at the St. John's Wood Synagogue, and was attended by the widow, sons and daughters of the deceased, members of the family, Haham Dr. M. Gaster, and numerous members of the metropolitan Jewish Clergy, Hon. Officers, members of the Council and Staff of the United Synagogue, and a large number of friends. The service, which was fully choral, was conducted by the Revs. H. L. Price, G. Prince, and Ephraim Levine. The Chief Rabbi of the British Empire delivered the following address:

Albert Morris Woolf in whose memory we are assembled to-day in the St. John's Wood Synagogue wherein he worshipped for so many decades, consecrated a life-time to the service of the Community and took a leading part in well-nigh every form of religious and charitable activity in the metropolis. Perhaps I can best epitomise Albert Morris Woolf the man and his influence on his fellow-men, and thus bring home to his generation the grievous loss it has sustained in the death of this faithful son of Israel, by means of the following saying of the Rabbis: אין רוח הקדש שורה אלא על חכם, גבור, עשיר ובעל קומה. "The Spirit of God rests upon him only who is wise, strong, rich, and of commanding stature." Though, at first sight, this saying is strange and paradoxical enough, it will unlock for us the mystery of the personality whose passing we are solemnly mourning to-day. "The Holy Spirit rests upon him only who is wise. . . ." Albert Woolf was wise. Nature had endowed him with extraordinary common-sense and marvellous intuition. He was one of those rare mortals who are never misled by appearances nor swayed in their judgment by mere rumour. He was a חכם and as a חכם he was הרואה את הנולד, "able to foresee the future"; i.e., clearly to visualise the results that would inevitably flow from any proposed course of policy. He was my companion during our visit overseas, and I can testify that in dozens of communities the power that was his of at once seeing the fundamentals of any question—whether of organisation or administration—proved eminently helpful to our Colonial brethren. He was and had the gift of friendship. Laymen and clergy alike came to him with their difficulties, confident of his practical sympathy. And he fully justified that confidence. There is hardly a Metropolitan minister who has not at one time or another been encouraged by his wise guidance. Some years ago, on a memorable public occasion, I spoke of him as "a man with a head full of sense and a heart full of kindness." And this brings us to another side of his character. "The Holy Spirit rests only on him who is wise and strong. . . ." Albert Woolf was strong—because he strengthened many. He was not a man of speech, but pre-eminently a man of deeds; and whatever his hand undertook to do he did with all his might. Totally devoid of sentimentality or of the unctuous self-righteousness of many a professional social worker, he pursued, without haste and without rest, the divine task he had set himself; namely, of helping the helpless, and of saving people from becoming helpless and sinking till they become permanent objects of charity. He worked in quietude, without the blare of trumpets; yet the Governments of both England and Belgium gave official recognition to his invaluable aid in connection with the Belgian refugees at the outbreak of the war. Albert Woolf was a strong man in his labours for others; and he remained a strong man to the end, in the manner he bore his mortal illness during all the weary months before death brought him a merciful release from suffering. The familiar lines of the poet rise to one's lips:

Life is mostly froth and bubble.
Two things stand like stone:
Kindness in another's trouble,
Courage in your own.

"The Holy Spirit rests on him only who is wise, strong and rich. . . ." Albert Woolf was not only wise and strong; he was also rich, in that he selflessly devoted heart and soul and mind to the religious, social, and economic welfare of Jewry. For decades he was connected with the direction of the United Synagogue—the organisation that largely controls Jewish religious endeavour not only in the Metropolis but indirectly throughout the Empire and beyond; and he filled every office to which he was called, from Overseer of the Poor to that of Vice-President, with dignity and distinction. Two causes especially were his thought day and night; and in their advancement he was unsparing of time or energy. One of these was the binding together of "the East and the West" in the interests of the religious unity of Anglo-Jewry. He was a man of deep, unpretending piety; and he had the old-time Jew's feeling for Sabbath and Festival with their sanctifying home ceremonial. And yet for years he absented himself on the High Festivals from his family in order to superintend the free services where so many thousands of our poorer brethren worship, at the Great Assembly Hall. The other cause was

THE RELIGIOUS STABILITY OF THE COMMUNITY.

His religious position was the progressive conservatism of the older English Jew, that golden mean which is equally removed from either extreme wing in Jewry. He was distrustful of revolution in religion; and he was quite undazzled by, and unenvious of, the ephemeral successes that such revolution might be able to show. He clearly realised that violent religious changes were suicidal; and that suicide was no progress. He felt in his inmost soul that even the most magnificent House of Worship, if it be the symbol of a breaking with the Jewish past or a secession from the general life of the community, would prove but a moving staircase carrying its willing or deluded children out of Judaism. Ignorance was to him the root of all spiritual disintegration; and in his eyes there was but one way of stemming such disintegration and that was Jewish religious education. With the years, this conviction fairly dominated his whole being. This conviction led him to join me in my Tour to the Overseas Communities; and at his advanced age, to toil with self-sacrificing zeal for eleven months, enduring tropical heat and endless travel often to the limit of human endurance. When we consider the austere nobility of this man's aims and his single-minded devotion to them, we must behold in him a Baal Komah, a man of commanding stature, an outstanding personality whose life was different from the life of the multitude. In mediæval Jewish books there is a fable that tells of a traveller in a desert who is attacked by a furious maddened beast. To save himself the traveller gets into a dried-up well; but at the bottom of it he sees a dragon with its jaws wide open to devour him. The unhappy man dares not get out for fear of the mad beast, and dares not descend for fear of the dragon; so he catches hold of the branch of a wild plant growing in a crevice of the wall of that dried-up well. He then notices two mice, one black and one white, gnawing at the roots of the wild plant, and alternately and evenly making their way round it. The plant must before long give way, and he must fall into the jaws of the dragon. The traveller sees this, and knows that death is waiting for him at either side; but, while still hanging on, he suddenly notices some drops of honey on the leaves of the wild plant. He quickly stretches out his tongue and avidly licks those drops of honey. What a parable of human life! The traveller is man, the wild beast is sin. The slender branch in the well is the brief allotted time of our existence—constantly, diurnally, gnawed away by the black and white mice, by every day and night that we have left behind us. The dragon inevitably awaiting us as soon as the slender branch of our life snaps asunder, is death. And yet the overwhelming mass of humanity think of nothing else than of the number of licks of honey they can possibly put in, and spend all their energy in seeking the honey and rushing where there is most of it. Albert Morris Woolf was one of the minority, who conceive of life as something more than

A RACE FOR LICKS OF HONEY.

Clean of hands, and pure of heart, he did not set his desire upon vanity. He shall receive the blessing of the Lord, and a righteous reward for his selfless life from the God of salvation. Albert Woolf was among the last of that noble line of men who may be looked upon as the builders of Anglo-Jewry, men of wisdom and understanding of counsel and might upon whom rested the Spirit of God. Alas, these men of strong, constructive faith are passing one by one. אנשי אמונה אבדו we may wail with the Paytan. In the course of this very year, we lost that gentle and noble-hearted man, Sir Isidore Spielmann. Within a few weeks, he was followed by Samuel Henry Emanuel, sturdy in his Jewishness and unbending in his Faith. And now the voice of Albert Woolf will nevermore be heard in the councils of the Community. Oh, that the unfading example of these revered dead become a source of noble emulation unto those that come after them to continue the selfless labours of the Fathers and maintain the sacred institutions which they created. Then will the deeds and aspirations of loyal servants of Israel like Albert Morris Woolf reverberate in the lives of men. We have been taught there are three crowns, the crown of Torah, of priesthood, and of royalty. Albert Woolf could lay claims to none of these. But our Teachers tell us of still another crown, surpassing all the others in excellence; namely, the כתר שם טוב

THE CROWN OF A GOOD NAME.

It must, indeed, be a comfort to his bereaved family, it must be a source of solemn pride to his grief-stricken wife who shared his hopes and ideals, and enabled him faithfully to live for them, to feel that Albert Woolf has departed this life with the imperishable crown of a good name. Wherever the news of his demise will reach—whether in the United Kingdom, South Africa, Australia, New Zealand, or Canada—his coreligionists will mourn the wise and great-hearted English Jew who has been gathered to his fathers, and pray that sweet be the sleep of the labourer who hath toiled so faithfully and so well both for God and for man. It is written in Isaiah the Prophet: ונדיב נדיבות יעץ והוא על נדיבות יקום: "The noble deviseth noble things, and by noble things shall he stand." From his youth upwards even unto old age, Albert Morris Woolf devised and advanced noble things; and through these noble things will his memory stand in this world, while he himself will abide under the shadow of the Almighty, and inherit the day which is wholly a Sabbath and rest in the Life everlasting. Amen.

UNITED SYNAGOGUE TRIBUTE.

A meeting of the Council of the United Synagogue was held after the Service at the Synagogue Classrooms. Sir Robert Waley Cohen, K.B.E. the Vice-President, presided in the absence abroad of the President, Mr. Lionel de Rothschild, O.B.E.

The CHAIRMAN said that Mr. Woolf had been an Honorary Officer of the United Synagogue for thirty years and it was difficult to think of their work in the Council without his guidance. The Chief Rabbi had spoken so eloquently and so truly of him that he felt it was not suitable to add very much to what he had said. In those difficult times the position of the United Synagogue, its firm adherence to traditional Judaism, was constantly assailed, and many of them were often tempted to run away from their assailants and shut their eyes to the difficulties by which they were surrounded. That had not been Mr. Woolf's way. He had been ready to enquire into and unravel every difficulty, and in the end they owed it to him, in the difficult years through which they had passed, that they had been able to maintain the position of the United Synagogue as it had been, as it was, and as they hoped it would always remain. Of his work for the general community that was not the place to speak. The Chief Rabbi had paid eloquent tribute to it. Every one felt that it had culminated in the amazingly generous offer he had made at his advanced age, when the United Synagogue invited the Chief Rabbi to undertake his tour of the dominions, that he should accompany him. He did not think there was any man who was more fitted to convey to the younger communities throughout the Empire the spirit of the Anglo Jewish community that they had built up. For that they might be specially grateful, but he did not think Mr. Woolf would have liked to be remembered for any single act. His whole life, during the many years that he (the speaker) had been in close association with him, had been devoted to the work of the community. He concluded by moving the following resolution:

That the Council record their deep sorrow at the lamented death of Mr. Albert M. Woolf, O.B.E., one of the Vice-Presidents of the United Synagogue, and their profound sense of the loss which they, together with the family and the Community, have sustained. First elected a member of the Council more than thirty-five years ago, Mr. Woolf at once gave proof of that earnest devotion to the United Synagogue that thenceforth marked his whole life, and has caused his name to be enshrined in the annals of the Community. As the protagonist of Welfare work in the East End, and as an Overseer of the Poor for over twenty years, he rendered inestimable service. The Mutual Aid Fund was largely his creation; the Free Services for the Poor were his special care; the rise of the new Beth Hamedrash and Jewish Institute, the reward of his ardour and foresight. Elected a Vice-President in 1916, he brought to the duties of his new office his immense experience, his wide knowledge of the Community, his unflagging energy. No detail of the work was too small for his attention, no sacrifice of time too great, and, withal, he never ceased to make golden use of the opportunities that came his way for helping others. By his passing from their midst, the Council have lost an outstanding personality, a colleague held in affection and esteem. To his widow and the members of his family their heartfelt sympathy goes forth, coupled with the fervent hope that the mourners, in their time of sorrow, may be comforted by the memory of his good name and his countless good deeds.

Mr. W. T. LEVIANSKY, as the oldest colleague of Mr. Woolf, seconded the motion. He said that Mr. Woolf had earned respect by his kind feelings, his human sympathy, and his self-sacrifice. He had retired from business to serve the community, and few knew the extent to which he had helped others.

Mr. GUSTAVE TUCK, in supporting the motion, bore testimony to Mr. Woolf's labours on behalf of the St. John's Wood Synagogue.

The motion was carried in silence.

At a meeting of the Board of Management of the St. John's Wood Synagogue, held on Wednesday in last week, at which Mr. Gustave Tuck presided, the following resolution was unanimously carried: "That the Honorary Officers and Members of the Board, on behalf of the Congregation, in expressing their great and heartfelt sorrow at the death of their friend, desire to pay tribute to the memory of one who had endeared himself to them by his many acts of courtesy and kindness, by his indefatigable zeal in promoting the welfare of the synagogue of which he was one of the oldest of its members, and by his honourable services to the entire community. In the death of Albert M. Woolf a keener realisation comes to them of his many excellent traits of character and the kindly impulses of his disposition. The members of the Board record these sentiments of their high regard for their deceased friend and their profound regret at his death, and in so doing they desire to convey their sincere sympathy to the members of his family."

THE LATE MR. JOSHUA HANDS.

MEMORIAL SERVICE.

On Monday last a Memorial Service for the late Mr. Joshua Hands was held in the Synagogue attached to the Home and Hospital for Jewish Incurables. There were present, besides the inmates and staff of the Institution, the mourners and several members of the Board of Management and supporters of the Home. Rabbi Harris Cohen, Honorary Visiting Minister, conducted the Service and delivered the address. He was assisted by Rabbi Gollop, who read appropriate Psalms. It was a melancholy occasion, said the preacher, on which they had assembled. They had met to pay their last tribute of respect to a life-long devoted friend and active supporter of the Institution. This was the second severe loss that the Home had sustained during the past few months. It seemed difficult to realise in that building that Joseph Ansell and Joshua Hands were no more. Both took the keenest interest in its welfare. Both endeavoured to bring joy and sunshine into the hearts of the inmates. For thirty years their lamented friend was a member of the Board of Management, and for twenty years he was Vice-Chairman of the House Committee. In whatever capacity he acted he performed his task with exemplary devotion and thoroughness. Himself physically afflicted, he knew the better how to sympathise with and toil for his fellow creatures who were afflicted, but less fortunate than he. "And Joshua the servant of the Lord died." Joshua Hands was a true servant of the Lord. He walked humbly before the Eternal and endeavoured to do good wherever he could.

THE LATE MR. MICHAEL E. LANGE.

A FRIEND writes: "I knew Michael Lange for many years of his earlier life, both at college and afterwards. Beneath a rugged surface he disclosed a most lovable disposition. He was reserved and diffident—perhaps too much so—and yet he possessed a singular fearlessness of outlook. He was never afraid of the conclusions to which his reason might lead him, for he had no utilitarianism in his composition. It is but human to weigh even unconsciously the expediency of a standpoint to which one may logically be impelled before committing oneself to it. But he never flinched, ruthlessly crushing the motive of self-interest, if he but half suspected its intrusion. He was, I think, intensely religious; the performance of a Mitzvah was to him a vital joy, an occasion for quiet gratitude, never a meritorious action. I have seen the Sabbath in with him, and it seemed indeed that he was harbouring a guest who brought a wave of peace and tranquillity into his life. Behind his brusque manner there lay an extreme sensitiveness and an almost nervous fear of wounding the susceptibilities of others. With it all he had a sense of humour—he was often his own butt—and a subtle delight in the grotesque and incongruous. He loved to twit me on my conventionality. I remember many years ago going for a riding tour with him. Our nags were perhaps not over well-favoured, and we may not have sat them as knights. I thought I detected a resemblance in him to Don Quixote, and I rashly told him so. He immediately dubbed me Sancho Panza. He loved the beauties of nature, and even trivial things seemed sometimes to give him intense enjoyment. On the other hand, he was acutely pained by the sorrows of others and by the world's troubles. He seemed at times to envy the lot of unruffled and less complex natures. Great happiness came to him later, but, alas! it was not to endure. Yet his memory will live with many of us who knew him, the memory of a straight-seeing man, courageous and selfless in his life, who was governed by high ideals without ever owning, or perhaps even knowing, that he possessed them."

MR. ISAAC VANLEER.

The death has occurred, in his fifty-eighth year, of Mr. Isaac Vanleer, who acted for many years as Assistant Secretary, and latterly as Secretary, to the Lion Hospital Aid Society. A man of great kindliness, he was devoted to the task of alleviating the lot of others, and he never allowed his own bodily suffering to hinder his striving for the welfare of his fellowmen. In his passing the Community is deprived of a zealous and unselfish worker.

MR. LOUIS FREEDMAN (Manchester).

The death occurred last Sunday of Mr. Louis Freedman, who for over a quarter of a century had held the office of Second Reader at the Holy Law Congregation, Manchester. A zealous communal worker and an ardent supporter of the Zionist Cause, his loss will be deeply and widely felt. A Hesped was delivered by Rabbis I. B. Zinober and Dinnerstein, at the Synagogue, and by Rabbi Asher at the cemetery.

MR. DAVID COHEN (Pontypridd).

Mr. David Cohen, of Pontypridd, who passed away suddenly at the age of fifty-five, served the congregation for many years, both as President and as Treasurer. He was also an ardent worker in many other communal causes. A native of Kieff, the deceased settled in Pontypridd thirty-five years ago.

Wills and Bequests.

MR. BARNETT SAMUEL, of 38, Heath Drive, Hampstead, who died in June last, has left estate to the value of £227,719, with net personalty £225,689. By his will he leaves £1,000 to the Jewish Board of Guardians. In bequeathing £20,000, in trust, to his son and a like sum to his daughter, the will stipulates that "should his son or daughter contract a marriage with a person who is not of Jewish parentage and of the Jewish faith, he or she is to forfeit their share."

Among other recent wills are the following:—

MOSES, Mr. RALPH, of 4, Down Street, Piccadilly, W. (net personalty £10,649)	£11,911
LEVY, Mr. ELIAS, of 109, Mile End Road, E. (net personalty £1,012)	£1,061
JACOBS, Mr. MYER, of 439, Green Street, Upton Park, Essex (net personalty £835)	£845

L.C.C. Hebrew Evening Classes.

From Mr. Leon Simon, B.A.

To the Editor of THE JEWISH CHRONICLE.

SIR,—I should be grateful if you would allow me space to draw attention to the opportunities for learning Hebrew offered by the L.C.C. Evening Classes. A minimum of fifteen students is sufficient to secure the establishment of an elementary Hebrew class at any centre, and a smaller minimum suffices for an intermediate or an advanced class. Each student pays a small annual fee, and the expenses are defrayed entirely by the Council. Under this system several classes have been established during the last five years, and have done useful work; but, in view of the large Jewish population in the East of London and in the West Central district, it cannot be said that sufficient advantage has been taken of the readiness shown by the L.C.C. to meet Jewish requirements. There are at present three Classes in existence, all in Stepney—two at the Gravel Lane L.C.C. School and one at Myrdle Street. The teachers are Palestinians, and the subjects of instruction include the Hebrew language (written and spoken), Bible and Jewish history. The classes meet on Monday and Wednesday evenings from 7.30 to 9.30. They will re-open after the summer vacation on September 30th, and it is hoped that a sufficient number of students will present themselves to secure the continuance of the classes. At the same time, would-be students of Hebrew in other neighbourhoods are advised to apply to the L.C.C. with a view to the establishment of Hebrew classes at other centres convenient to themselves. It ought to be a simple matter for some of our Literary and Zionist Societies to organise groups of the necessary number among their members.

I may add that the Classes endeavour to meet the needs both of those who wish to go to Palestine, and of those whose object is to be able to understand Hebrew literature; and that, thanks to the generosity of the Palestine Wine and Trading Co., money prizes are awarded to students on the basis of an annual examination.

Yours faithfully,

LEON SIMON.

South Hackney Synagogue.

Children's Services for the High Holy Days.

From the Rev. Gatchell Isaacs.

To the Editor of THE JEWISH CHRONICLE.

SIR,—For a number of years I have been able, through your courtesy and the publicity given in the columns of your valuable and widely-read publication, to bring to the notice of residents of Hackney and Clapton and the surrounding neighbourhoods, the special services for children which are held in the South Hackney Synagogue Hall and Classrooms during the High Holy Days. I am deeply grateful that I am privileged to organise and arrange similar services once again to be held on the coming ראש השנה and יום כפור. They will be conducted, as in previous years, by members of the teaching staff of the South Hackney Synagogue Hebrew Classes, men who are devoted to and love their sacred work, and who have already prepared and trained the little ones in the choral portions of the New Year and Atonement services. Thus, the pupils of our classes, numbering more than three hundred boys and girls, will form one huge choir. I wish it were possible to follow the same plan among my congregants in the synagogue. I have always been a strong advocate of congregational singing, which I am confident would not only add immeasurably to the impressiveness of the service, but would prove an effective solution of the long-standing and difficult problem of decorum in the synagogue. I recommend the suggestion in the friendliest possible way, and with much respect, to my worthy colleagues, the Readers of Synagogues, who, by leading their congregants in prayer and song, would ultimately be regarded as "leaders of the congregation," a consummation devoutly to be wished by many.

My Honorary Officers and Board of Management hereby extend a most cordial invitation to all children in Hackney and the adjacent localities, especially to the children of the poor and to all whose parents are not members of any synagogue, Chevra, or Minyan. Our hall and classrooms, converted into one large hall, can conveniently accommodate more than five hundred children. We shall thus be happy to welcome at least two hundred children, in addition to the pupils attached to our religion classes. I hope, as last year, to have the privilege of assisting the teachers on the Second Day of the New Year, and to talk to my youthful congregants for a little while, a joyous task which will be to me, as it has always been, the happiest, the proudest, the most touching and sacred, as well as the most important of all my ministerial duties. The teachers will also deliver short, simple, and appropriate addresses, and one member of the staff will act as Bal Kovel and Bal Tkeiah.

I earnestly appeal to all the children—to all my children I should like to say, with pardonable pride—to be regular and punctual in their attendances, exemplary and decorous in their demeanour and attentiveness throughout the services. I beg them all to take special care to arrive at the Classrooms precisely five minutes before the beginning of every service which will be held as follows: Each morning of ראש השנה, New Year, 10 o'clock, כל נדרי, Eve of Atonement, 7.10 o'clock, and יום כפור, Day of Atonement 10 a.m. and 4 p.m.

Yours faithfully,

New Year Traditional Music.

THE ANCIENT CANTILLATION FOR THE TORAH.

BY ARTHUR M. FRIEDLANDER.

To the New Year number of THE JEWISH CHRONICLE, 1922, the writer contributed an article which dealt with the earliest publications of traditional melodies for this Festival.

Whilst pursuing these studies of the different modes of cantillation which obtain in various countries, I was struck with the similarity which I found in some of the renderings of the Ta'amim (signs for cantillation) for the "Reading from the Torah" for Rosh Hashana by the Ashkenazic Jews, and some of the renderings of the Ta'amim for the Haftorah by the Bagdad Jews, according to the illustrations given in the Jewish Encyclopedia.

The following are examples:—

ASHKENAZIC AND BAGDAD VERSIONS.

Ashkenazic rendering
Te - bir..... za - keph ka - ton mu - nah et nah - ta me - re - kha tip - ha me - re - kha sil - luk.
Bagdad rendering
Te - li - sa ke - ta - na..... kad - ma ve - az - la ge - - resh me - re - kha tip - ha..... me - re - kha sil - luk.
Con molto espressione.
Ashkenazic rendering
Kay - yo - mer e - lo - him..... el ab - ra - ham al ye - ra' be - e - ne cha 'al han - na - 'ar ve - 'al a - ma - te - cha khoe..... a -
- sher - to - mar e - le - cha sa - rah she - ma' be - ko - loh ki - te - hak yik - ka - re - le - cha..... za - - - - - - - - - ti.

Here we find unmistakeable proofs of the similarities referred to which tend to show a common origin.

Mark well, this is not simply a matter of coincidence resulting from the occurrence of a similarity of melodic form in a single phrase comprising a few notes; but there are a sufficient number of phrases bearing such a close resemblance to one another as to warrant the assertion referred to above.

Moreover, the subject under notice is wholly concerned with that particular musical genre known as cantillation. At the same time I would draw attention to a point which occurs to me as being rather extraordinary, for the reason that, whilst the musical rendering by the Ashkenazim consists in being that for the "Reading from the Torah," that of the Bagdad Jews is for the recital of the Haftorah!

On the other hand, there is the possibility that the latter community employed this same intonation for their rendering of the Torah on the same occasions as the Ashkenazim.

These circumstances give rise to various conjectures. Assuming that the rendering by the Bagdad Jews as given in the "Jewish Encyclopedia" is correct, it may be inferred that the melody of this cantillation has been traditionally handed down by the Ashkenazim since the time that they migrated to Northern Europe, thus showing it to be not only of ancient date but also of oriental origin!

It is of interest to add that, in the translation of the "Travels of Petachiah of Ratisbon," by Dr. Benisch, which appeared in THE JEWISH CHRONICLE, April 4, 1856, there are some important references to the musical rendering of the service in one of the three synagogues at Bagdad. Not the least significant of them is the allusion to the use of the finger ("Cheironomy") for denoting a sign for the correction of the faulty singing of a tune. A method of procedure probably derived from the system referred to in the Talmud, where there is a reference to the moving of the right hand at the "Speech Recital" of the Torah (Berachoth, p. 62*a*). This usage, which the Gemara attributes to Rabbi Akiba, is explained by "Rashi": Movements were made with the right hand, he tells us, which corresponded to the raising and lowering of the voice. To quote "Rashi" literally: "One moved the hand according to the melody of the accents."

We learn from Ben Asher (Dikduk Hate'amim, p. 17 f) the sign for Shalsheleth, which is in the form of a zigzag, and signifies a trill (or shake) was produced by a trembling movement of the hand.

As bearing upon the subject, I venture to suggest that the larger majority of the graphical signs of the Ta'amim were derived from illustrations afforded by placing the hands and fingers in various positions. By merely stretching out the left-hand fingers we get the formation of the "Shalsheleth," by placing the thumb and forefinger together so as to form a circle we obtain the ancient form of the "T'lisha," whilst by stretching out the forefinger and second finger in an upward and downward position we get the "Karne Farah" (cow's horns) and the "Etnahta" respectively. By similar processes many other signs can be formed.

The Armour of Faith.

A Lay Sermon for Rosh Hashana.

By N. S. BURSTEIN.

"Day unto day poureth forth speech,
And night unto night proclaimeth knowledge."

This is what that great singer in Israel—David—sang so many centuries ago, and this is what the Jew still continues to sing on every Sabbath day. And why? Does he do it quite unconsciously? No, no! The true Jew is fully convinced that this is the music that moulded his impregnable character. He hears the babble of tongues, the talk of Higher Criticism by lower intellects, the talk of Christian Science by unscientific Jewish dabblers, who are eager to be known as philosophers. The true Jew laughs at it all, and proceeds with David's song: "There is no speech, no language; their voice cannot be heard." He believes in his Armour of Faith, that has protected him in the fire of suffering, and the "blows of fate" he considers only as the testing force in the life of Jewrydom. And he continues David's song: "The Law of the Lord is perfect, restoring the soul; the testimony of the Lord is faithful, making wise the simple. The precepts of the Lord are right, rejoicing the heart; the commandment of the Lord is pure, enlightening the eyes. The fear of the Lord is clear, enduring for ever; the judgments of the Lord are truthful, righteous altogether . . ." Has not the civilised world begun to realise the truth of this soul-stirring song? Of course it has! Almost all our modern writers and philosophers admit that Judaism to-day verges on renaissance, and that never has there been such a keen and sincere interest in the religion of Abraham. Even those who believe in other creeds have become more tolerant through understanding.

There is one thing the true Jew is sure of—and that is that civilisation will never be the autocrat of the Jewish religion, simply because it is, like the soul of man, divine, impregnable and immortal! Dr. Kaufmann Kohler, famous as the foremost of living Jewish Theologians and as an American Reform Rabbi, has, in his old age, come to the conclusion that, "far from having become, 1,900 years ago, a stagnant religion, Judaism has ever remained 'a river of God, full of living waters,' which, while running within the river-bed of a single Nation, has continued to feed anew the great streams of human civilisation." It is evident that Dr. Kohler's long experience as a spiritual leader, with his four score years, has convinced him, after all, that civilization will never dogmatise the Jewish religion, and that Judaism has always been, and will always remain, the beacon-light of all civilizations. Rabbi Kook recently said that the Jewish religion is the hope of the world. And so it is! The true Jew enters into his Faith with absolute conviction that it must succeed. He believes in the moral power of his Faith.

The Manchester Guardian of October 24, 1923, said: "It has been the weakness of every recent English Government that it dared not rely upon moral force. Moral force can be made to rule the world." This was always the true Jew's idea; and the present recognition by the nations of the world, of the Jewish national aspiration is the verification of it.

A dear friend of mine, a non-Jew, told me once that the Jewish people lack audacity. "If audacity is gone, the soul of a nation will flag. It is that insurgent call to action which animates the living people." Of course, I fully agree. We all know those historic words uttered by Danton, in September, 1792, which spurred on the French nation: "What we need for victory is Audacity—Audacity—and always Audacity!" But might it not be called the very acme of Audacity when the Jew, in face of all the virulent elements that have, century after century, tried to destroy him, still carries his armour of Faith: זה אלי ואנוהו אלהי אבי וארממנהו—"This is my God and I will glorify Him, my father's God, and I will exalt Him . . ." Audacity—yes. But the true Jew's audacity is bound up with self-control, prudence, and caution. His victory will come, as come it must. Generations may go, generations may come, but God's promise to His people will be fulfilled, as surely as day follows night!

To the true Jew faith is not a superficial thing. It is a real, an earnest thing. He does not believe in "Faith Healing," but he has faith in healing. Science and all curative remedies are looked upon as the abiding miracles and the wonder of wonders, and it is "faith and hope that are the two most powerful weapons possessed by the human body with which to guard itself against and to repel the attacks of disease." A well-known Harley Street doctor, speaking on the extraordinary part which a revival of faith and hope plays in the recovery of a patient, has said: "Help may come from many sources—from drugs, from the operating-room, and also from the encouragement of a friend. We are in no position to deny that it may also come from the Fountain of Life in ways which the mind of man can as yet but dimly comprehend." And it is just to this Fountain of Life—God Almighty—that the Jew prays to send him the healing of the soul and the healing of the body: רפואת הנפש ורפואת הגוף. The Jew does not believe in Christian Science, but he has faith in the Jewish Science that will uplift the spirit of the human family, so that: וידע כל־פעול כי אתה פעלתו ויבין כל־יצור כי אתה יצרתו "Whatsoever hath been made may know that Thou hast made it, and whatsoever hath been created may understand that Thou hast created it."

Ah, how poor is the man without faith! A life without faith and without love is arid! "It fills the heart with cynicism. It spells loneliness in old age. It will produce love of self—the profound egotism which in time eats away the peace and prosperity of the soul." The true Jew is aware of all this. His Armour of Faith is, like the Rock of Ages, as strong as ever, immovable, unperturbed and unsullied; and, with the intensity of feeling which only a faithful son in Israel possesses, he concludes the glorious song in the sweet words of David: "Let the words of my mouth and the meditation of my heart be acceptable before Thee, O Lord, my Rock and my Redeemer! . . ." And where, I ask, is there a stronger Armour than the long-tried Armour of Faith of the House of Israel?

THE LETTERS OF BENAMMI.

CCCVIII.—A Confession of Faith.

MY DEAR COUSIN,

Jack spent a couple of days with us this last week; I was delighted to observe how he had grown intellectually. His judgments would have done credit to a man of mature years, and he undoubtedly possesses powers of observation of no mean order. The young man has read and thought much.

We got on to talk about the interesting question of the intensification of religious services at this time of the year. To-morrow and on Sunday, and again, on Monday week, crowds will flock to the synagogues. All the available seating accommodation everywhere will be utilised, and it will be supplemented by numerous "overflow" services. In all parts of the metropolis temporary arrangements have been made to satisfy the demands of Jews for religious services; indeed, the aspect of most synagogue vestry rooms may not inaptly be compared with that of the general stores during sale week. Why this seasonal craving for prayer? Why this spiritual effervescence at this time of the year?

Jack was of opinion that no single motive can explain the attraction of the synagogue for Jews during the High Festivals (a curious term, by the way, reminiscent probably of "die hohen Feiertage"). "Doubtless the force of custom carries great weight with very many people. But the force of custom alone will not explain the remarkable phenomenon. In a general sort of way," Jack continued, "the appeal is different for different types of Jews.

There are, first, the truly religious folk, simple, God-fearing men and women who live in their faith, who believe in the efficacy of repentance and in the need of reviewing their life's conduct at this time of the year, whose souls tremble what time they hear the blast of the Shofar. To them religion brings spirituality; their lives may in some measure be described as saintly. But they are very few in number; the conditions of modern life are not favourable to this breed.

Much more numerous are those who are merely superstitious. They go through all the ceremonial, mechanically bowing, sitting, standing, kneeling. Look at their faces, and you realise at once that they appreciate nothing of the meaning of it all. They do not understand the usual prayers, not to mention the piyutim. If one could probe into their sub-conscious self, one would find there fear and the determination not to take risks. Perhaps, so they feel, there may be something in that grim picture of a judge determining the destiny of every creature—who shall live and who shall die, who perish by fire and who by water. Saying prayers may help; at any rate, it is as well to be with the multitude.

To these two groups must be added the so-called Nationalist Jews, men who are not necessarily irreligious or a-religious, but in whose life religion does not play a dominant part. First and foremost they stress Jewish nationality. These come to synagogue on the ימים נוראים because they look upon the solemn assemblies as annual review days, when every Jew who values his attachment to his people should be in his place. Of these some are moderately, others almost chauvinistically, nationalist in their sentiments. For the latter, the term "A Yid" comprises the greatest and best thing in the world. They hold that the achievements of the Jewish people are the most important in the world, and that Jewish literature, from the Bible down to the latest products of the Jewish literary genius, is the grandest in the world. They speak in hyperbole. They claim as Jews all who are distinguished for their work in the world. Where Jewish nationalism is concerned, they lack the true perspective. They take part in the services of the New Year and the Day of Atonement just because they are assemblies of Jews. They love all Jewish assemblies, whether holy convocations or political gatherings.

For myself," the young man continued, "I have no exaggerated notions as to the greatness of the Jewish people, or of its literature. The literature of ancient Israel undoubtedly contains works of high genius—say, the Psalms or the Prophetic Books; Rabbinic literature likewise possesses productions of extraordinary merit. But the whole of Jewish literature is not composed of masterpieces. Whether mediaeval Jewish poetry, for instance, can compare with classical poetry in the principal European languages is an open question. Because I admire the achievements of the Jewish genius, I need not, therefore, overlook the expressions of the genius of other peoples. I am fully conscious of the greatness of the Jews. They are an old people, and there is something out of the ordinary in 'blue blood.' Stock counts. Then there is the endurance of the Jewish people, which bears testimony to grit and strength. The Jews are kind-hearted and considerate; to practice the social virtues has been a Jewish ideal from ancient down to modern times. Lastly, in the long-drawn-out search for God, which has marked the human race throughout its history, the Jews have led the way. They were the religious pioneers of the Western World, influencing its thought and its legislation. For all these things I am proud all the year round of belonging to the House of Israel. This solemn season I believe has its usefulness for thoughtful minds, in that it affords a set time for introspection. Secondly, in regard to the special prayers of New Year's Day, they bring home to Jews vividly that the conception of the Kingdom of God, of which Christian theologians make so much, is Jewish in origin. Gentile critics of Judaism sometimes assert that the devotees of this religion, unlike those who profess Christianity, lack spirituality. If by spirituality is meant some such idea as saving your soul, then perhaps the mass of Jews, always excluding mystics, may be written down as un-spiritual. But if spirituality connotes a clear and deep consciousness of the reality of God, then Jews are an eminently spiritual folk. The Jew thinks of God as Shepherd, Saviour, Strength, Hope, and especially as Father in Heaven; and on New Year's Day he stresses the conception. 'Thou feedest the birds and fishes'—so an ancient writer addresses God—'by giving rain to the earth so that grass may grow. Thou preparest food for all creatures, and when they are hungry they lift up their countenances to thee. Thou, O Lord, feedest Kings and princes and peoples; and who is the hope of the poor but Thou?' To accept the yoke

Some Random Thoughts on New Year.

BY GABRIEL COSTA.

There's something that is bitter-sweet in turning back the pages of the years. One crowds so much that is vital into the average twelve months; the passing pageant moves far too swiftly, too hectically. The philosophy of the Psalmist becomes a modern anodyne.

We have lived more restfully, more contentedly. We have tasted of simpler pleasures, enjoyed them more zestfully than the sophisticated "delights" of to-day. Gone are the Ghetto walls; gone, too, our limited horizon. For the world is at our command at the turning of a dial; few wonders remain to be exploited. Humanity is frankly satiated.

And so one turns to the ever-fresh verities of New Year, and sloughs the garments of materialism. We again become our real selves. What matter our cars, our jewels, our fine houses, our outward advertisements of so-called success? After all, we have but a single life, a single destiny; and the Almighty makes no discrimination between silk and fustian . . . So the dawn of yet another year has opened the floodgates of recollection, freeing every manner of quaint memory of New Years that have been.

How they tumble over each other! Memories inspiring, ridiculous, pathetic, and absurd. Memories of men and women who have been and are not; of places that are now but a name; of times good and ill; of tearful skies, and of skies suggesting Italy.

It makes one feel so—what shall I say?—venerable to be thus writing of the past. Even a quarter of a century back is a long, long time considered from modern standards.

I have a funny recollection of an East End chemist, a most charming gentleman, a courtier if ever there was one. I saw him one New Year's eve, a most puzzled expression on his face. "You know," he said, "I can't understand it at all. There's been a terrific run on honey to-day! I've sold right out, and have ordered some more. I'll never be caught unawares again." Strange to say, there were none who enlightened the old fellow, whose definition of the demand was "an epidemic of sore throats."

Another Tishri recollection reads quaintly in these days when East of Aldgate to all intents and purposes is an English Eretz Yisrael. I recall the indignities to which elderly top-hatted foreign Israelites were submitted when on their way to synagogue on New Year's eve. Epithets and missiles were hurled at them by larrikins of the Hoxton type, with none to stay their hand, save a solitary, infrequent policeman. And I recall the partiality of these larrikins for the window-sill of an English Jew, whereon they were wont to rest after their "amusement." Nor do I recall with any the less delight the assiduity with which this gentleman was apt to water his first floor window-garden at this psychological moment, cooling their spirits with a delightful drenching that had the additional charm of appearing accidental! So retribution came, as retribution invariably does come, from above!

Comes another memory of a year which marked the apex of the New Year card's popularity. Within half a mile it was impossible to secure a halfpenny stamp, so pronounced had been the "run" on them; and there have been times when the Rosh Hashana morning post has held up ordinary deliveries to such an extent as to bring excited deputations to the local postmaster.

Talking of postmen reminds me that there is still a Gentile who delivers the mail in North London, and whose knowledge of Yiddish is better than my own. More than once has he wished me "Leshono Tovo" (in the Ashkenazic style) and discussed with me the contents bills of the jargon newspapers. He is au fait with the contents of a mezuza, and can recite the shemang better than many a Jewish housewife. From him invariably comes my first New Year greeting. If this doesn't savour of an entente cordiale I don't know what does!

My quaintest New Year "card" was sent, appropriately enough, by a life insurance agent. It assumed that familiar form of a cheque on "The Universal Happiness & Prosperity Treasury, un-Limited," and expressed the hope, in addition, that I might live to be one hundred and twenty! A rather "good life," from the insurance point of view, with premiums to be paid like clockwork. Maybe the gentleman has a sense of humour.

One's outstanding recollections, be it confessed, are invariably those associated with the inner and the outer man, so that Rosh Hashana marks also the anniversary of my first silk hat and morning coat. "Lord of Creation," "Salt of the Earth"—I believe I experienced all the feelings of absolute majesty on that occasion. And mingled with the memory is the delicious scent of frangipani with which a beloved parent elected to anoint me. Frangipani is as unfashionable as the crinoline; when I do sense the perfume, the memories return in a delicious rush. My first experience as a child of Teruah Gedolah, at Bevis Marks; my first sight of the mighty silver breastplate with the twelve stones of wondrous colour and seemingly fabulous value; the first time I kissed the sepher mantle of white and gold; these childhood memories linger, ineffably precious in the days of disillusion.

of the Kingdom of Heaven (קבל עול מלכות שמים) was said to be the object of reading the Shema each day; on New Year's Day the Kingdom of Heaven is specially proclaimed. May it not be asserted that to keep alive the ideal of establishing God's Kingdom on Earth and to strive to make that kingdom a reality is the mission of the Jew? The solemn season at the beginning of Tishri is an annual reminder of this fact, and I value it as such."

As I listened, I wondered whether the young man was voicing the view of the newer generation of Jews. I wondered, too, whether all three types he had enumerated may not be aware, perhaps dimly, of the significance of the establishment on earth of the Kingdom of Heaven. For two thousand years and more the Jews have proclaimed the ideal on New Year's Day; by this time it must be bred in the bone. One thing more I pondered. Some of our preachers utilise the occasion of a full attendance at synagogue on New Year's Day to castigate the congregants and make them thoroughly miserable. No preacher to-day has the right "to smite the wicked with the rod of his mouth." Rather let him elaborate in full measure the true significance of the age-long association of New Year's Day with the Kingdom of Heaven.

About Books.

Jewish History.

The mere statement that a world-history of the Jewish people from the dawn of Judaism to the present day has been written by one scholar, all on his own, is in itself sufficient at first to create dismay. We have become so accustomed to the more scientific method of specialisation that we naturally assume that the successful completion of such a vast undertaking can only be achieved by co-operative effort. Yet Simon Dubnow manages to attract just where he might have been expected to repel. His history was originally written in Russian, and, under the title of "WELTGESCHICHTE DES JUEDISCHEN VOLKES," is now to be published in German in ten volumes by the Juedischer Verlag, Berlin. The translation is the work of Dr. A. Steinberg. The first volume, which has recently appeared, deals with the period from the rise of Israel as a people to the end of the Persian rule in Judæa. It seems amazing that the writer of the brilliant article on "Hasidism" in the "Jewish Encyclopedia" should also prove himself so much at home in the Biblical era, but Dubnow charms us even when he provokes us with his omniscience. Whatever Dubnow touches he brings knowledge and enthusiasm to his task. To those of us who do not know Russian it is a great boon to have his monumental work now available, at all events in German. Dr. Steinberg has evidently overcome the perils of translation with marked ability.

"The Glory of God."

Pending a longer notice, attention is now drawn to the recent issue of "THE GLORY OF GOD," by Dr. I. Abrahams (Oxford University Press). The volume is published under the auspices of the Jewish Institute of Religion, New York, with a subvention from the Alexander Kohut Memorial Fund, and is inscribed to Dr. Stephen S. Wise "on his completing fifty years of a life spent in the service which is the truest Glorification of God." These three lectures were delivered in the United States of America during the Spring of 1924. The chapters are headed: (i.) Natural; (ii.) Messianic; and (iii.) Pragmatic. Dr. Abrahams confesses that his own deepest interest in the conception of the Glory of God lies in its pragmatic application to life.

A Manual of Hebrew Conversation.

"HEBREW SELF-TAUGHT," by Mr. Philip Blackman (R. Mazin & Co., 141, Whitechapel Road, E.) mainly consists of a careful selection of words, phrases and sentences which meet the requirements of everyday life of a non-technical character. The Hebrew and corresponding English are conveniently printed in parallel columns on each page. There can be no doubt that Mr. Blackman has provided a practical guide to Hebrew as a spoken tongue. A glance at the classification is sufficient to indicate the fine judgment with which the author has designed this Manual. The following are the headings of some of the principal divisions: Out of Doors; At Work; In the Country and Town; At Home and in the Hotel; Shopping; Dress; Food and Drink; Travelling; At the Club; and At the Theatre. "Hebrew Self-Taught" is thus an excellent introduction to Hebrew conversation, but it has one failing. Mr. Blackman seems to have forgotten the ladies, for it is only rarely that the feminine gender is used. But this oversight can easily be remedied when in due course the second part appears. The "Manual" is well printed in pocket size, and as a handy book in reality it can be used with comfort and advantage when sitting in the house or walking by the way.

Periodicals.

The July-August number of the "MONATSSCHRIFT" is inscribed to Dr. Eduard Baneth in celebration of the seventieth anniversary of his birthday on August 9th. The principal contents are as follows: Julius Guttmann, "Max Webers Soziologie des antiken Judentums"; Hartwig Hirschfeld, "Bemerkungen zum Verbum denominativum im Hebraeischen"; Hermann Baneth, "Psalm 110"; H. Torczyner, "Hiobdichtung und Hiobsage"; Leo Baeck, "Zwei Beispiele midraschischer Predigt"; Arthur Spanier, "Zum Mischnatraktat Tamid"; M. Eschalbacher, "Die Willenserklaerung in der Halachah"; Siegbert Neufeld, "Juedische Gelehrte in Sachsen-Thueringen waehrend des Mittelalters"; D. H. Baneth, "Ibn Kammuna"; and C. Albeck, "Die Herkunft des Tosefta-materials." Dr. I. Elbogen reviews Dr. M. Salzman's "Chronicle of Ahimaaz," and also contributes a critical notice of Professor Israel Davidson's "Thesaurus of Mediæval Hebrew Poetry." The "Monatsschrift" is the Organ of the Gesellschaft zur Foerderung der Wissenschaft des Judentums, Berlin Schoeneberg, Belziger Strasse 46. Mr. Oscar Philipp, 33, Ferncroft Avenue, N.W.3, is acting as Honorary Secretary on behalf of the Gesellschaft for subscribers in England.

The July number of "MIND" (Macmillan), includes a critical notice of Dr. E. Bernstein's "Quickness and Intelligence: An Enquiry concerning the Existence of a General Speed Factor."

Forthcoming Publications.

"INTRODUCTION TO THE TALMUD," by Dr. M. Mielziner, then Professor of Talmud at the Hebrew Union College, Cincinnati, was first published in 1894. A second revised edition appeared in 1903. Both editions are now exhausted, showing not only the popularity of this work, but also the need for such a volume. The Bloch Publishing Company, New York, have engaged two well-known Talmudists, Dr. Louis Finkelstein, and Dr. Joshua Bloch, to enlarge and revise the last edition. Additional notes will be provided, and a fresh index is to be a substantial and helpful feature of the new book.

The Dwir-Mikra, the Hebrew Publishing Company, Berlin, announce the forthcoming publications of Hebrew translations of the following works: J. Wellhausen, "Prolegomena zur Geschichte Israels"; J. Benzinger "Hebraeische Archæologie"; and K. Budde, "Geschichte der biblischen Literatur." The last two works have been specially revised by the authors for the Hebrew versions now in preparation.

The Shofar and the Sabbath.

By Rabbi Dr. SALIS DAICHES, A.M., Ph.D.

On the first day of the coming Rosh Hashanah Festival the sanctity of the Sabbath will prevent the Shofar from being sounded in our Synagogues and houses of worship. The call of the ram's horn will be "remembered" but not heard, and the day will be described in our prayers as יום זכרון תרועה instead of יום תרועה. But why? What reason is there for eliminating from the Rosh Hashanah service what is usually regarded as its most essential and effective part, when the Festival coincides with the Sabbath? To many people the answer seems quite simple. Blowing the Shofar is a strain, and means hard work. Work being forbidden on the Sabbath day it is natural that no exception should be made in the case of the תקיעות. However plausible this answer may seem, it is entirely wrong. The Rabbis emphatically maintain that the sounding of the Shofar cannot be regarded as מלאכה work, but is really חכמה an art, requiring skill and training, and may therefore, be done on a Sabbath. It was, indeed, fully permitted, and regularly performed, in the Temple of Jerusalem, although the Biblical command relating to the Shofar does not, according to the Rabbis, postulate its being sounded on the Sabbath day (1). Outside the Temple, however, the use of the Shofar was forbidden on a Sabbath (2). The reason for this prohibition—as given by Raba, one of the best known Babylonian Amoraim—was the fear that the use of the Shofar in the country would lead to the desecration of the Sabbath on the part of many people, who would carry the instrument from place to place and disregard the laws affecting the transporting of articles on a Sabbath through public squares and streets (3). It was for the same reason that the taking of the Lulab to the Synagogue was forbidden on the Sabbath of Succoth, and the reading of the Megillah was prohibited on Purim (Shushan Purim) when it fell on a Sabbath. It is interesting to note, however, that R. Yochanan ben Zakkai, the eye-witness of the destruction of the Temple, who placed Judaism beyond the reach of Rome by transferring its spiritual centre from Jerusalem to Jabneh, ordained that the Shofar should be sounded on Sabbath in all important Jewish centres (such as Jabneh) where a regular Beth Din had been established. In accordance with this instruction the Shofar was blown in Jabneh and in other centres in which the requisite number of competent Rabbis lived and constituted an Ecclesiastical Court. Although discontinued by the Geonim, Rabbi Isaac Alfasi (11th century) is stated to have reintroduced the practice under his Beth Din in North Africa. But it was soon given up again, and it has never been resumed since. The Shulchan Aruch simply rules out the sounding of the Shofar on a Sabbath by stating that יש"ס של ר"ת שחל להיות בשבת אין תוקעין בשופר (Orach Chayim §588, 5). This ruling has been universally accepted, and is complied with to-day by all orthodox Jews. The fact that for the last nineteen centuries (if not longer) Rosh Hashanah has been kept for two days, and the sounding of the Shofar could thus always be performed on the second day of the Festival (which can never fall on a Sabbath) has made it easy for orthodox Jews to reconcile themselves to the omission of תקיעת שופר on the first day when it coincides with the Sabbath, and the Jews of the world have been content with the זכרון תרועה that is succeeded by the יום תרועה on the following Sunday.

It was only in the middle of the 19th century that the question of the permissibility of sounding the Shofar on a Sabbath was raised again and attracted widespread attention. The originators of the discussion were not observant Jews prompted by a desire to fulfil the Biblical and Rabbinic ordinances with greater strictness. On the contrary. The controversy was originated by the protagonists of the Reform movement, who discarded the Shulchan Aruch and rejected the Rabbinic interpretation of the Biblical Law. They were forced to take up this question because they had abolished the second day of the Festival, and were thus faced with the problem of how the ceremony of תקיעת שופר which has such a hold upon the mind and the heart of the Jew, could be preserved in the Rosh Hashanah ritual when the first of Tishri fell on a Sabbath.(1) The revolt against age-long Jewish tradition led many Reformers to set aside the ruling of the Shulchan Aruch and the universal Jewish practice, and to introduce the Shofar into the Sabbath Rosh Hashanah service, in spite of the protests of the orthodox Rabbinic authorities. The Reformers justified their action by referring to the reason given in the Talmud for the original prohibition of תקיעת שופר on שבת as being obsolete and inapplicable to modern times and modern conditions. They pleaded that in re-introducing the Shofar into the service of Sabbath Rosh Hashanah they were only reverting to the ancient practice that prevailed in Judæa at the time of the Temple, and were really following the decisions of R. Yochanan ben Zakkai. They thus completely overlooked, or ignored, the fact that even in ancient Judæa the Shofar was never sounded on a Sabbath outside the walls of the national sanctuary, and that the principal reason given in the Talmud for this practice was not the one stated by Raba, viz., the fear that the instrument might be carried from place to place, but the interpretation of the Biblical command יום תרועה יהיה לכם שבתון זכרון תרועה as meaning that on the Sabbath day the sound of the Shofar need only be recalled to one's mind (by reciting the verses dealing with the Shofar) but not actually heard. The instruction given by R. Yochanan ben Zakkai only applied to communities which were recognised spiritual centres in Jewry, and thus in a sense took the place which the Temple occupied in the national life of the Jewish people. Jabneh was then the seat of the Sanhedrin and was looked upon in every way as the source of inspiration and instruction for the Jews of Eretz Yisrael and of all other lands. The Reformers never claimed that their Synagogues, or "Temples," were, or ever could be, such Jewish centres.

There is, of course, the argument still available that Reformers do not feel bound by traditional interpretations of texts, or by Rabbinic injunctions, when these seem to be in conflict with modern views and the requirements of modern life. This argument is quite logical. But it can scarcely be applied to the question under discussion. For if Jewish tradition and practice are to be ignored in the case of the Shofar, what is there in this crude instrument, with its weird sounds, to appeal to the modern mind and the modern ear? If not for Jewish tradition, why use a ram's horn at all? Why not a silver cornet? The Rabbis explain that the horn of the ram is intended to be a reminder of the animal sacrificed by Abraham instead of his son Isaac, and of the patriarch's readiness to obey the will of God in performing the עקדה. Do the Reformers accept this explanation? Again, the very use of the Shofar on Rosh Hashanah, instead of an ordinary trumpet, depends on the Rabbinic interpretation of the Biblical texts concerned (for "Shofar" is not mentioned in the Bible in connection with the New Year's day), and the sounds of תקיעה שברים תרועה תקיעה are also regulated by Rabbinic data and traditional expositions which a Reformer is not likely to accept.(2) The traditional Jew is content to act in accordance with the decisions and interpretations of the ancient exponents of Judaism, and to regard the universal Jewish practice throughout many centuries as possessing a sanction and a binding force which cannot be discarded. The traditional Jew can be moved to tears by a primitive sound like the תקיעה, while the most elaborate musical composition played on the grandest organ in a Jewish house of worship will leave him cold. But the modern Reformer—what justification has he for preserving "obsolete" ceremonies, especially when by that preservation he defies Jewish tradition and dissociates himself from the practice of universal Jewry?

It may be that many Reformers feel that the appeal which the Shofar makes to the average Jew as part of the Rosh Hoshanah service is too valuable a religious asset to be given up in deference to the postulates of modern tastes and modern views, and that for this reason they agree to retain the תקיעת שופר on Sabbath in spite of all the objections that can be advanced against it. But if this is so—would it not have been much wiser and much more consistent to retain the second day of the Festival (which was kept even in ancient Jerusalem, the two days having been regarded as יומא אריכתא, "one long day") and to have joined the rest of Jewry in performing the ritual of the תקיעות on the Sunday? If a concession is made to Jewish sentiment and tradition, one should expect it to be a real concession and not a new secession from universal Jewish practice.

One of the reasons that render the Shofar so sacred and significant an instrument in the eyes of the Jew is its association with the heralding of the coming of the Messiah, the redemption of Israel, and the restoration of the Jewish nation in its ancient land. It is the sounding of the "great Shofar" that is to announce the coming of the Redeemer and accompany the "gathering of our exiles." Most of the Reform Synagogues have expunged the prayers referring to Israel's liberation and Zion's restoration, and have openly rejected the belief in the coming "return of the exiles" and rehabilitation of the Jewish nation. Do they still cling to the Shofar because, however "modern" their views and theories may be, their Jewish hearts are touched by the message of its sound in the same way as the hearts of their ancestors have been touched throughout the ages, and as the bulk of the Jewish people is still moved by it to-day? If so—then they may yet one day listen to the שופר של משיח and themselves join in the "return of the exiles." The whole house of Israel may then see the fulfilment of the prayer of the Rosh Hoshanah Amidah: "Give glory, O Lord, unto Thy people . . . joy to Thy land, gladness to Thy city, a flourishing horn unto David Thy servant, and a clear, shining light to the son of Jesse, Thine anointed, speedily and in our days."

(1) See T. B. Rosh Hoshanah, 29b. The term ישבתון זכרון תרועה used in Leviticus xxiii, 23, in contradistinction to the term יום תרועה employed in Numbers xxix, 1, is explained in the Talmud as meaning that while on a week-day the Shofar must be sounded, on a Sabbat it only need be remembered, or thought of, and need not be actually heard. (Ibid.)

(2) According to Rashi it was forbidden outside the Temple even in Jerusalem itself, while Maimonides maintains that the prohibition only applied to places outside the city of Jerusalem.

(3) Ibid.

(1) The Berlin Reform Congregation formed in 1845 decided to discard the Shofar altogether, even when Rosh Hoshanah fell on a week-day. But the moderate reformers did not follow this decision.

Bayswater Jewish Schools.

MODERN BUILDING REQUIRED.

A valuable fillip to the fund being raised for the rebuilding of the Bayswater Jewish Schools on a new site was provided at a meeting held on Monday at the Notting Hill Synagogue, over which the CHIEF RABBI OF THE BRITISH EMPIRE presided.

Rabbi M. GOLLOP, who opened the proceedings, emphasised the difficulties and unpleasantness experienced by Jewish children attending non-Jewish schools in the neighbourhood, and contrasted that situation with that of the pupils of the Bayswater Jewish Schools, who received a sound religious education and were able to observe Jewish Holy Days without any interference with their secular education.

Mr. PERCY SCHWARZSCHILD said that it would be a disaster if the Bayswater schools were closed, especially as an opportunity now occurred of associating the new building with various social endeavours on behalf of the young people of the district.

Rabbi J. NEWMAN described the difficulty he had experienced in securing concessions for the Jewish children attending non-Jewish schools in the neighbourhood, and said that it would be an inestimable boon if they could have a Jewish school in Notting Hill. Several attempts to form a society for the adolescent boys and girls had failed in consequence of the lack of suitable premises, and the local friendly societies were forced to meet in public houses. These difficulties would be solved if they could have a Jewish centre in connection with the new premises of the schools.

Miss NETTIE ADLER, J.P., said that the schools had done excellent work and had a splendid staff, but the present building was quite unsuitable and had been condemned, as far back as before the war. They only had till January to arrange for a new building otherwise the school would be practically closed, which would be a great loss to the cause of Jewish education. There were only thirteen Jewish schools in the country and the numbers in attendance had fallen considerably in recent years. That was because the schools were not in suitable positions. The Bayswater Jewish Schools would attract large numbers of Jewish children if they were situated in the Notting Hill district.

The CHIEF RABBI said that a Jewish child could only be really happy in a Jewish atmosphere. The Board of Education and the London County Council were quite right to insist that the building should be modernised. The school had been in existence for sixty years, and standards had improved. The school to be really useful must be in the heart of a Jewish district. There were over 7,000 Jewish residents in Notting Hill, which was the proper place for the school. It was proposed to make the new building a centre of the Jewish life of the district. His hands would be greatly strengthened in approaching the community for funds if he could show that the people of Notting Hill really wanted the school, and he expected to raise £1,000 in the district towards the £15,000 to £20,000 that would be required for the whole scheme.

Donations totalling over £150 were announced, and a canvassing committee was appointed.

A vote of thanks to the Chief Rabbi and the other speakers was carried on the motion of Mr. Winner, President of the Notting Hill Synagogue, seconded by Mr. Cohan, the father of two children attending the school.

The Chief Rabbi promised to preach in the synagogue at an early date.

East London Synagogue.

GIRLS' CONFIRMATION SERVICE.

A girl's confirmation service was held at the East London Synagogue on Sunday evening and was conducted by the Revs. J. F. Stern and M. Signaiewsky. The address was delivered by the Chief Rabbi of the British Empire.

The Chief Rabbi said that that was the first time he had had the privilege of addressing girls who had gone through a special preparatory course of training in the knowledge which should fit them for the duties and difficulties of life. He wished that every Jewish girl could receive that training. They had learned the great truths, the great affirmations of Judaism. They had acquired the Jewish consciousness. That was a great possession. But much more important than to have the Law in their mouths was to have it in their hearts—not only to know their Judaism but to love their Judaism. He urged them not to let their Jewish education end with that ceremony, but to follow in the footsteps of the Jewish women of bygone days who were ready to lay down their lives for their faith. He prayed that God would give them strength to do the things they had pledged themselves to carry out. He had faith that the prayer the girls had recited would not have been spoken in vain and that God would in mercy accept their prayer.

The Rev. J. F. Stern said that their thanks were due to Miss Rose, Headmistress of the Stepney Jewish Schools, who had trained the girls.

The following girls were confirmed: Hilda Davidson, Yetta Greenberg, Kate Jacobs, Lily Klein, Annie Mermick, Marie Moscovitch, Millie Nathan, Julia Nathan, Annie Neiberg, Sophie Spiegal, and Rita Signaiewsky.

New "Liberal" Synagogue.

CONSECRATION CEREMONY.

SERMON BY RABBI I. I. MATTUCK

— AND —

ADDRESS BY MR. CLAUDE G. MONTEFIORE.

The new synagogue of the "Liberal" Jewish Congregation was consecrated on Sunday morning. The main building was completed in time for the opening, but much work has still to be done on the classrooms, chapel, offices, and hall. There was a large congregation, every seat in the building, including the three galleries, being occupied. Among those present were Rabbi Sir Hermann and Lady Gollancz, Sir Israel and Lady Rabbi M. and Mrs. Gollop, the Rev. A. A. Green, the Rev. J. F. and Mrs. Stern, the Rev. S. and Mrs. Lipson, the Rev. Morris Joseph, the Rev. Vivian and Mrs. Simmons, Sir Adolph and Lady Tuck, the Rev. E. Spero, Sir Robert Waley Cohen, Major Isidore Salmon, M.P., and Lady Sassoon.

The service was conducted by Rabbi I. I. Mattuck and the Rev. M. L. Perlzweig; the choir, which rendered several hymns, was under the direction of Mr. Ivor Warren. As a result of the organ builders' strike only part of the projected instrument was in use, and was supplemented by violin and 'cello.

Mr. Claude G. Montefiore's address, which, in consequence of his indisposition, was read for him in his absence by his son, Mr. Leonard G. Montefiore, was as follows:

I am allowed the great honour and privilege of saying a few words of welcome to you all on this interesting, and, as we all so greatly hope, auspicious occasion. This building, on which we have set our hearts so long—for long before it was begun or planned we had set our hearts upon it—is now open for worship and prayer and teaching. Those of us who, though keenly interested in its appearance and growth, were yet, like myself, not directly and closely concerned with the building of it—not, I mean, members of the Building Committee—may, perhaps, fitly congratulate the planners, the workers, and the builders. Most of all, I think, would we congratulate the man who, under great difficulties—money difficulties, time difficulties, and other difficulties too many to mention—designed and produced the synagogue and its appurtenances—I mean our architect, Mr. Ernest Joseph. What he said to me four days ago is doubtless true. He said: 'There are some 1,300 seats in this synagogue, and I know I shall receive some 1,300 different criticisms.' That is doubtless true. But it is, I think, also true that all of us, all of us 1,300, will, nevertheless, admire the beautiful simplicity and dignity of the building as well as the suitability and completeness of all the important appurtenances—the classrooms, the hall, etc. In one sense we had to be simple. For we were constantly hampered by lack of money, and the very large burden of debt with which we start this new chapter of our history, is a very sore anxiety and painful worry to me and to us all. Indeed, a certain amount of the work remains unfinished because we have not the money with which to execute it. Nevertheless, our simplicity is not by any means only because of distressing debt and lack of funds. It is also deliberate. We want to combine simplicity with beauty and with dignity. 'We are lovers of the beautiful and yet simple in our tastes.' Those famous words apply peculiarly, I think, to buildings consecrated to the worship of God, to buildings, more especially, such as ours, where there is no distinction of seats, and no front rows of many guineas or back rows of few.

Well, we have built this noble structure, and we declare it open to-day. Our dear friend and leader will before long speak to us and ask for the blessing of God. We venture, we dare, to hope that that blessing may be allotted to us. None of us who, in 1902, nearly twenty-three years ago, organised and attended the first service of the Jewish Religious Union in the Wharncliffe Rooms, could have foreseen, or did, I fancy, even dream of, this wonderful, and yet logical, consummation or sequel to what was then devised. Indeed, even when in 1911 we opened our little synagogue in Hill Street, though we knew that we only had the end of a lease which would not, in all probability, be renewed, we never thought of this—our wildest thoughts never surely ran to this! It is wonderful, and again wonderful; we can hardly compass it in fancy, or believe it. And when we call to mind that less than three years after Hill Street was opened, the Great War began, and yet in spite of that, and in spite of the consequences of the war, this great building has been erected, we are moved, indeed, to gratitude and marvelling. A large part of this remarkable happening is due, under God, to the character and energy and determination of our leader. I just say this, and add no more.

But it is one thing to have a noble building. It is another thing to use it nobly. Can we, in the exaltation of this moment, make any resolution for noble use? Can we pledge ourselves inwardly to the cause for which this building has been erected, the cause of Liberal Judaism and all which those two words imply? We are many to-day. Our large building is full. But will you resolve that Sabbath after Sabbath, it shall also be full? Will you make a pull upon yourselves, will you give up unworthy laziness or pleasure and gain the higher pleasure and the purer satisfaction of worship and communion? That is one question. How will it be answered? Nobly or ignobly? If only we could all keep this high moment in our minds!

But I rejoice to think that this synagogue, in the narrower sense, in which we stand is only one part of our total building. Our religion school will now at last be properly housed. Our great hall will serve us well for meetings and lectures and discussions. We must seek to make our synagogue something more than a place where public worship is carried on for short periods on Saturdays and holy days. It must be a centre of much activity besides. The means have been provided, so far as stone and brick can carry us.

The rest must depend upon ourselves. And, then, again, we must not make this great building cause us to look too much within, and too little without, cause us to think too much of the building and of the institution, and to forget the greater, the more invisible, things for which the building stands, for which it has been planned and built. We are grateful to our architect, for what our eyes can see. But we shall be still more grateful to him if, by the help of what he has made us see, he enables us to realise better what we cannot see, and what is yet more valuable and even more real than what we can see. There is even a danger lest, for the sake of the visible we neglect the invisible, for the sake of life we neglect the things, the causes which make life worth living. There are, as it were, a series of circles, each one greater than the other. The building, this simple and beautiful building, in which we rejoice, which we open and consecrate to-day, must serve them all. It must serve the synagogue as such, its worship, its teaching, its multifarious activities, and when I say 'it must serve,' I am thinking throughout of ourselves who must make it serve, who are here ourselves to work and to serve. Then it must serve Liberal Judaism; from the building we must look out beyond the building, and use it as a place of vantage, to help the cause which is bigger than any single institution or synagogue, which is the spirit that vitalises the separate institutions that serve it, remembering that the Jewish Religious Union for the Advancement of Liberal Judaism is a bigger thing, though a less outwardly visible thing, than any single Liberal Jewish Synagogue, however large and however beautiful such synagogue may be. Next, the building must serve our common mother, the cause of Judaism, which is greater than Liberal Judaism, even though for us the future of the one is inseparably connected and identified with the future of the other. We will never forget the rock whence we are hewn, the tree whose branch we are proud to be. And then, too, we must remember that our building is a building consecrated to religion, consecrated to something which must be concretely, visibly, imperfectly, realised in communities, synagogues, and churches, which separate off man from man, to something which, alas, has too often been associated with hatred and dissension and intolerance, but yet to something that essentially should unite and not sunder, that should foster justice and not strife, that should engender love and not hatred. The cause of Liberal Judaism, yes; the cause of Judaism, yes; but, beyond these two, and just inasmuch as the cause of these two, the cause of humanity, the cause of the unseen, the universal, Father, the cause of God. For his service we declare our new synagogue open to-day."

The Scrolls of the Law were brought into the building, the bearers being the Hon. Lily Montagu, Messrs. Lionel Jacobs, L. Halle, I. Morris, S. D. Mayer, and H. Myer. The Scrolls were received by Mr. Ernest M. Joseph, architect of the synagogue.

Mr. Michael A. Green kindled the perpetual light, which he had presented in memory of his father, the late Rev. A. L. Green.

Rabbi MATTUCK preached the following sermon:

וה׳ היום עשה ח׳ נגילה ונשמחה בו. This great occasion in the life of our synagogue holds for us the fulfilment of a hope and the birth of new hopes. It crowns one epoch in the life of our congregation, and begins a new one. The course of our activity opens as a widening river into the possibility of a larger usefulness. In this twofold significance of this service lies its joyousness. We rejoice humbly in what has been achieved, we rejoice humbly in what the future promises. As your Minister, I feel a deep gratitude for the attachment and loyalty to our synagogue which you have shown in giving it this beautiful home. This building was made possible by your generosity, with instances of outstanding generosity, and of sacrifice. We love our synagogue, we believe firmly in the principles for which it stands, we value its aims; therefore you have given it this beautiful home. The architect has our congratulations and our gratitude for the magnificent result of his labours. And we are grateful to all who have helped him, to the men who undertook the work of erecting the building, and to the men who have done the daily work of it with an interest and zeal worthy of the purpose for which it stands. In the simple, almost austere, beauty of this synagogue I feel a token of our faith which has for us the beauty of simplicity; and it is austere in the demands it makes. All religion when, true to itself, calls for the best that men can give, shows itself austere. Beauty, with austerity, like the beauty of a sunlit mountain top, characterises our religion; and I feel its presence here.

Gathered to consecrate this building to the worship of God in the name of Judaism, the impressive beauty almost forces from us a proclamation of its holiness. "This is none other but the House of God." Yet the truth needs some emphasis that consecration, like creation, like all life, is a process, not an act; a growing development, not a sudden and complete gift. The desires we bring here, the help we find here, the aspirations that seek here their fulfilment and the inspiration we receive here—these will make up the process of continuous consecration. As we bring into this house holiness, and as we take from it the influence and direction of holiness, so shall it be holy.

A synagogue, especially a modern synagogue, has a manifold purpose, several interrelated aims to serve, various functions to perform that fit one into another until the largest task of all comprehends them all. It is not just a synagogue that we are now dedicating, but a home for a movement in which we believe, and in which we see the promise of continued life and enrichment for our ancient faith.

We have not built this synagogue only for ourselves; partly for ourselves because we want the form of worship Liberal Judaism offers, we want the spiritual help and guidance in the teachings which Liberal Judaism gives; but also for Judaism, to help in the life and work of the House of Israel. Our faith in Liberal Judaism means not only that it is the religion for us, but that it is the religion for the future generations of Jews, the interpretation of Judaism which will hold their allegiance to it and which (it is the same thing put differently) will give them the inspiration of that faith. Our Liberalism makes our old faith new and creatively living; and so it serves our Judaism. In proclaiming the faith of Liberal Judaism our synagogue serves not only those who are attached to it, but it serves through them, and in other ways, the Judaism of our time and of the future. We aim to show that Judaism is not only an historic faith, but a living faith; that it can assimilate modern thought, and that it has a message for our times. In striving to spread a knowledge of Liberal Judaism we are working for Judaism that by its truth it may endure; we are working for Jews, that they may hold fast to that possession which has given us our place in the world, with its greatness in the past and its hope for the future.

The modern synagogue has especially to realise the larger, the world aspect of its function. The circumstances of Jewish history have partly concerted this part of its aims. Because the Jews were for a long time denied any share in the world's life, the synagogue kept silence about the world's problems. It would manifestly have been futile for the synagogue to give Jews instruction about these problems when the world denied them any share in their solution, though the Jews maintained unweakened the faith that in some way God was using them and their continued loyalty as a means of blessing to the world. The new life for the Jews which was established by the spirit of religious tolerance and of mutual respect among religions holds for the synagogue a new opportunity, and that means a new responsibility.

It is a large part of the task of the modern Synagogue to realise anew the service it owes to the world; for it is the institution which concentrates the influence and power of Jewish ideals. The world is faced with many problems. There is great confusion in the larger relations of human life; in personal morality there seems to be no standards to mark off the right from the wrong, so that everyone does "what is right in his own eyes." Though lust take the name of self-expression, and licence call itself freedom, they cannot conceal their true character, as the negation of the holiest things in human life. No wonder many fear the beginning of the end of our civilisation! But I do not believe in the dominion of the inevitable over human life. Fate will rule only when humanity is weak. The future of humanity depends on what men do and seek now. Whether civilisation will endure, growing in beauty and goodness, or decay until it perish, depends on our humanity.

We need a new morality. That is what the chaos of our time means. The old morality has lost its hold because of its hollowness: it was a rigid body of convention containing nothing. For morality requires the heart, it means a spiritual impulse put into practice, it means, for religion, God brought into activity. The old morality had ceased to satisfy these conditions, therefore it lost its power. Moreover, it was not large enough to encompass our modern life; it could give no direction for the larger and difficult human relations in our industrial society. If we can, out of the present moral chaos, evolve a new morality that shall include and strengthen the best that was in the old morality and go beyond it in the understanding of duty and right, the conditions of our time will not mark the beginning of the end of our civilisation, but the beginning of a better era for our civilisation.

In the very difficulties of our times, in the dangers to our civilisation, and the threat to what humanity has achieved in the knowledge of morality, lies the opportunity for organised religion. Only religion can save the world. And if the world will not seek salvation in religion, it is doomed.

THE CHILPRUFE MFG. CO. LEICESTER
(John A. Bolton M.I.H., Proprietor)

We have sought for salvation elsewhere, in the knowledge which tells about the outside of the universe, in the power which controls the physical forces of the earth, even in human selfishness tempered by a little good nature; but none of these have brought salvation. At the end of our trust in them we are—where? Let the confusion of our times testify. In the spirit of man lies the way of salvation. If we live not by faith, we shall not live at all. And the price of faith is sacrifice.

Some time ago a man whom I had just met told me wistfully of his desire for religion. He had been given a religious upbringing, but when a young man he broke his associations with his church—he was a Presbyterian. Now grown older, a successful business man, he longed for the comfort and peace religion once gave him. But now, he said in so many words, religion gives me nothing. What should the answer have been to that man and his complaint? This question, what can you give to religion? What do you give? To repeat, the price of faith, like that of happiness, is sacrifice. And by sacrifice righteousness is established; and through righteousness will come salvation to humanity.

Churches and synagogues, at their best, help men to faith, and show us the way of sacrifice. They have, however, lost much of their influence through their weakness, which shows itself in a fear to make demands. Many men and women do not believe in churches and synagogues, because churches and synagogues do not believe in themselves. If they believed more in themselves they would seek courageously for a solution in the name of religion of the problems which burden our humanity, fearing nothing except the danger of their own cowardice. The world needs the force of organised idealism for which organised religion stands, the world needs the message which organised religion teaches: In the spirit of man, influenced by the divine spirit, lies the way of life. "Seek ye Me and ye shall live." Has the synagogue, as the mouthpiece of the Jewish religion, as the concentrating force of Jewish idealism, as the influence of Jewish faith, as the voice of Jewish history, any direction to give to humanity in its search for salvation, any help in its efforts to find a solution for social and moral problems and relief from its burdens of misery and evil? Has it any message for our modern life to satisfy its desire for a firm sense of what is right, good and true? I believe it has; "Ye are My witnesses." And because of that belief I value it. For several reasons this synagogue is among Jewish institutions especially fitted to proclaim this message. This task must hold a prominent place in our thoughts in this hour of its consecration.

In this work we are brought near to our neighbours whose beliefs differ from ours. But these differences do not obscure the unity of aims and the measure of agreement among us in our faith. All who work in the name of religion must strive under the impulse of belief in God and the love of Him to serve mankind. Our Christian neighbours and we are one in the love of God and the love of man. In the spirit of that unity we can work together, as under the influence of our distinctive beliefs we can also work separately, for the advancement of mankind in righteousness and in holiness. It is a large part of the task of the modern synagogue to seek for the Jewish religion the place of influence in the modern world to which it is entitled by its history, by its present teachings, and by its power for good. The synagogue, because it stands for the worship of God, which must include the service of man, and because it is the central institution of Jewish fellowship, must claim a share in the spiritual and moral direction of the larger community wherein it stands; so that it may contribute its best aspirations and thought to the life of the nation and of humanity. This synagogue is therefore for us not only a place where Jews may come together for worship in accordance with their beliefs and traditions; it is not only a place whence the spiritual, moral, and social influences of the Jewish religion may be effectively maintained in the lives of individual Jews; it is not only a place where Jews may learn what their religion means; but it is also a place whence the influence of the Jewish religion and of the Jewish community as a religious fellowship shall issue forth to help in the upbuilding of a better life for humanity. The blessing we seek from this house, consecrated to the service of God in the name of Judaism, is not only a blessing for ourselves, not only a blessing for Jewry, not a blessing for the nation, a blessing for humanity.

In all that I have said I do not mean to minimise what the Synagogue can do for the individual. We shall come here sometimes in joy to give thanks; sometimes, too, in anxiety, or difficulty, or sorrow—for no human life may escape these burdens—to seek the light, the strength and the peace of the Loving Presence. It is our prayer that this house and the worship offered here may at such times establish in us

That blessed mood,
In which the burthen of the mystery,
In which the heavy and the weary weight
Of all this unintelligible world,
Is lightened.

"Liberal Jewish Synagogue" this house is called—a name in three parts. They are for us an indivisible unity. The progressive search for truth in religion—that is the heart of Liberalism; the love of God and man and loyalty to Israel—that is the heart of Judaism; to bring man to God and God to man—that gives life and holiness to a house of worship. I believe in Liberalism because I believe in Judaism; I believe in Judaism because I believe it can help to save humanity.

To the glory of God and the service of man this house is dedicated. By the glorification of God and the service of humanity may it be always consecrated. When this building was in the course of construction, I often came here to look upon its progress. Sometimes, when the walls were up and the roof was on, I came after the work had ceased for the day, so that there was over it a silence almost solemn. It was broken only by the chirping of birds, who had come in through the openings where the windows are now. They found their places high up under the roof. Their song gave life to the silent waiting building. Memory brings back that experience in this solemn hour when we pray that our heavenly Father may consecrate this house with His glory. It is appropriate to our present mood, when we draw joyous hope from the prophet's promise, turning it into a prayer, "In this place will I give you peace, saith the Lord."

In the name of our earnest longing for God, in the name of our ancestral faith which has lived through the love of God, in the name of humanity which we would humbly serve in its search for the salvation and peace of God, we invoke upon this house, upon all who will worship here, and upon all mankind, the blessing of God.—Amen.

The concluding prayer was offered up by the Rev. M. L. Perlaweig, and the service concluded with the singing of Adon Olam, which was one of the few Hebrew portions of the service.

In the afternoon a reception was given at the synagogue, when a portrait of Mr. Claude Montefiore, the gift of the Council, was unveiled. The portrait, which was painted by Mr. Oswald Birley, was exhibited at this year's Royal Academy.

The new building is in Georgian style, constructed of multi-coloured bricks, with a fine Greco-Ionic colonnade of Portland stone forming the main entrance (the gift of Mr. Bernhard Baron). This colonnade gives access to a large vestibule, from which the synagogue is approached by three sets of doors. The plan of the main synagogue is that of an irregular octagon, with side aisles, the main floor being sloping and the aisles in tiers, and there are no supporting columns or other obstructions to interfere with the clear view of the building. On the upper floor there are three galleries, one at the rear of the building and one on each side of the aisles. The whole principle underlying the design was that the synagogue should be comfortable for a small number of worshippers, or for any larger number that might be present at any particular service, the intention being to screen off the aisles and galleries with curtains at a later date when funds are available. The design of the interior is very simple, the walls being of rough plaster rising to a height of about sixty feet supporting a flat saucer dome, the centre portion of which formed into a rose, forms the principal method of lighting. The reading-desk and Almemar are placed at the end of the synagogue, the organ being behind the Ark and the choir gallery above it. The whole of this end of the synagogue is illuminated by a series of skylights hidden from view by an ingenious contrivance. A special feature of the design is the provision of a little synagogue arranged for private worship, small weddings or "Jahrzeits," which is very simply treated with vaulted ceiling and simple Greek frieze, the whole being faced in marble and stone. At the back, and communicating with the synagogue, is a small Assembly Hall for lectures and social functions, seating about 500, and which will ultimately be handsomely decorated. It is provided with dressing rooms, reception rooms and kitchen. Above it are eight fine classrooms, also offices for the Minister and staff, and Council Chamber. There is also residential accommodation for the beadle. Provision is made for a Succah which will be completed at a later date. The Almemar and Ark are treated entirely in waxed walnut—it is composed of Corinthian colonnade and bronze and walnut screen, the centre portion of which forms the Ark, enclosed by sliding doors also in bronze; the whole being elliptical in shape, forms a very attractive end of the synagogue. The seats are of oak bleached with lime, with brown leather seating. All other woodwork throughout the synagogue (including the handsome candelabra) is of waxed walnut, to harmonise with the Almemar. The main body of the synagogue is illuminated at night by one chandelier 7 ft. in diameter throwing its light on to the dome. This one chandelier affords ample illumination for the whole synagogue, but subsidiary parchment coloured lights are provided in the side aisles. The most up-to-date system of heating and ventilating has been installed, no pipes or radiators being visible.

THE CALL OF THE PAST.

By SAMUEL GORDON.

A cry of grief went up to the high heavens from all Ushansk, the little town in Podolia. What had happened? Woe, woe! Moyshe Aaron, the chazan, had died. Was there ever such a golden-voiced singer in Israel, such a scholar, such a pious and circumspect man? And the more the pity of it, since he had just received a call to the biggest temple in Odessa, whither the fame of his wonderful gifts had spread. An imprudently premature stirring out into the cold night air from the hot synagogue, a neglected chill, and now he had gone to the Master-musician of all, whose glory he had so often sung here below, and who would no doubt give him a leading place among His own choir of Seraphim.

And Riffka, his bereaved, was meanwhile sitting in her little dwelling, holding her Mendel tightly in her arms, as if to make sure that he, too, had not been taken from her. Lord of the World, if that were ever to happen. . . . Well, the river ran only a little way beyond the town, and at the bottom of it one could find again all one had lost.

But the scheme of life does not stop even if death knocks at this or that door as he makes his way across the earth, seeking his lawful prey. After a while Ushansk consoled itself and a successor was appointed to Moyshe Aaron, a successor but not a substitute. And the householders put their heads together to devise a living for the poor widow who had been left without any visible means of subsistence. What could she do, she was asked. What could she do but weep, she had answered. In weeping she had become an expert. One moment, though. At home, on her father's farm, she had looked after the chickens. She had some experience in the breeding of poultry. So a collection was made, some fowls were bought for Riffka, and all the wealthier members of the congregation promised her their custom.

This promise they faithfully kept, and Riffka had to admit that on the whole she was not doing so badly. This had now gone on for a year, and Riffka found quite an efficient assistant in Mendel. He soon became familiar with the ways of chickens, learnt to feed them, took them to the schochet to be killed, and when killed helped his mother to strip them of their plumage.

And while plucking he let his voice, sweet and fine like the sound of a violin, pour from his throat. One after another he sang all the tunes that dear father of his had chanted. Riffka listened, her eyes ever on the overflow; but she checked herself so as not to sadden Mendel's joy in his singing. Moreover, it thus appeared to her that her dear husband had not departed altogether from this world, that some precious part of him had remained behind, and was now finding a living embodiment in their little son.

So one bright winter night little Mendel was engaged in plucking and singing. And about the same time a man, two men, stood listening outside the closed shutter. To make no mystery of it, the two men were Chayim Wasservogel, the famous cantor, and his chief henchman, Torba, the bass. Chayim, with his troup of choristers, was passing through Ushansk on his way to the nearest big town, there to conduct the Sabbath service at a fabulous fee. But he forgot all about his fee and everything else as he stood there at that closed shutter.

"Nu, what do you think of that, Torba?" Chayim asked at last.

Torba made no reply, but in the starlight his big ears could be seen waggling with delight.

"We must have that boy for our choir," said Chayim, striding towards the door.

But Torba, more cautious, held him back.

"Not so fast. Let us first make enquiries," he said.

Torba's caution was justified when they made those enquiries. The mystery of Mendel's wonderful voice was revealed when it was ascertained that he was the son of his father. But there also transpired the story of his lonely widowed mother. It was obvious that Jewish mothers did not give their only child away at the mere questing of a stranger. Other methods would therefore have to be adopted. The townspeople wondered why the great chazan was lingering in their little nest of a place, and Torba was meanwhile prowling round Riffka's house. The next evening he saw Mendel issue from it.

"P'st, little boy!" he called.

"Don't stop me—I'm in a hurry," replied Mendel, who was taking a fowl to a customer.

"One should never be in too great a hurry for the hearing of good news," said Torba.

At this Mendel slowed up and listened to the tongue of the tempter.

"Do you like lokshen soup?" asked Torba.

Mendel merely stared up in amazement at the tall man who questioned him thus strangely.

"And knaidlach? Well, you can have them every day of your life. Also a nice new fur coat and a beaver cap, and top boots right up to your hips. You can have them all if you only want to."

"And what will I have to do for it?" Mendel asked suspiciously.

"Sing."

"Sing?" repeated Mendel with a scream.

"Yes, just sing," Torba repeated in his turn.

A tremor seized Mendel at the mention of those luxuries of food and clothing, in return for which he would only have to sing, a thing he would do rather than anything else in the world. And then Torba went into details, and told him that the great Chayim Wasservogel wanted to take him into his band of choristers, and that a heaven on earth awaited him.

"But my mother won't let me go," quavered Mendel.

"I know she won't. And therefore you must go without her knowledge and leave. Listen. To-night . . ."

And Torba outlined to him the plan by which Mendel was to make his escape. And at the end Mendel said tremblingly:

"Yes, I'll come."

When he again reached home he found his mother on the doorstep looking out for him.

"You've been a long time, Mendel," she said, her quivering voice betraying her past anxiety.

"The—the people kept me at the house," replied Mendel, avoiding her gaze.

It was the first lie he had ever told his mother. All that evening he kept close to her, brushing her skirt, touching her hand whenever he could do so without arousing her suspicion. But nevertheless a great uneasiness, a dire foreboding, hovered in Riffka's heart. And, as though to allay it, she said suddenly:

"Mendel, sing me the 'Unnesanneh Tokef' your father used to sing."

Bravely Mendel began the solemn tune, but he had not got very far before his voice, as it were, turned a somersault and, sobbing bitterly, he buried his face on his mother's shoulder. She hushed him and sent him to bed. And there he lay, his heart and conscience tortured by the treachery he was meditating against this loving mother of his.

He waited till past midnight when her regular breathing from the adjoining room told him that she was asleep. Then, in his stockinged feet, carrying his shoes in his hands, he tip-toed out into the street where Torba was awaiting him.

And thus Mendel started out into the world of adventure, not knowing what the secret hand of destiny had written on the blank page of his future.

Chayim did not proceed to the town where his coming was eagerly expected, but took his treasure trove some hundreds of miles farther where pursuit could not reach him. It was indeed surmised at Ushansk that Mendel had gone with Chayim. But people only shrugged their shoulders at the lamentations of Riffka, who scoured the town, frantic and distracted. After all, a boy more or less in the place did not matter, and it wasn't their own boy. And, further, Riffka should have watched her son more carefully. And Riffka, seeing some justice in that remark, slunk home and huddled among her chickens in her misery. Ah, a rich man was doubly rich. If something was stolen from him he had plenty left to spend on recovering what was stolen. But a poor man, or woman at that, when robbed, had only one possession left, to wit, his or her poverty. And, as the saying went, out of a pig's tail one could not make a brass fish kettle.

Mendel might have given some thought to his mother's probable distress if he had had the time for it. But he was too busy enjoying the delights and excitements of the new life. Torba, who looked upon him as his personal acquisition and had adopted him for his own, studied Mendel's interests in all respects. Mendel was, of course, at once installed as principal treble. Some of the other boys at first demurred to this, but impressed by Mendel's superior talents and terrorised by the waggling of Torba's ears—they waggled most formidably both when he was pleased and when he was angry—they speedily yielded to Mendel pride of place. Torba also religiously kept his gastronomic promises, and Mendel had such a fill of dainties that he sometimes thought longingly of his mother's homely fare, such as the piece of dry razzawanna bread and the herring's tail which had often passed for his dinner.

At such times he spoke to Torba of his mother and expressed his fear as to the anxiety she might be suffering. And Torba who, it must be sorrowfully admitted, was not always a strict adherent of the truth, told him that he was sending her letters in which he assured her of her son's whereabouts and well-being. Then why was there no answer? Oh, Torba explained glibly, they were always shifting from place to place, and in the vast land they were traversing letters easily went astray.

Chayim Wasservogel was a very great chazan and his reputation was immense. But even so, he admitted to himself, without the slightest twinge of jealousy, that in Mendel he had acquired a tremendous accession of strength. So much so that he increased his charges by twenty-five per cent., which was readily paid. People beggared themselves to obtain his services at weddings, engagement parties, consecrations of Scrolls of the Law and suchlike joyous occasions. And everywhere Mendel was to the front. And people listened entranced to Mendel's solo in the concluding psalm of the Hymn for the Sabbath Day, which begins: "The Lord reigneth," and went away, assuring each other that they had had their money's worth although it was a sin to think of money on the Holy Sabbath.

One Friday night Mendel was engaged in singing this psalm, his eyes upturned to the ceiling, as though to make sure that his melody of prayer and praise was taking the shortest way to the Throne of Glory, when suddenly he felt a tightening at his throat, as if some unseen hand had laid itself upon it. He knew that all eyes were upon him, but he had a sensation that among them was one pair of eyes which conveyed to him a special message. He finished his solo with difficulty, and then looked about him to see if he could find the cause of this strange obsession.

Speedily he discovered among the crowded congregation the face of a bearded priest, whose gloomy and sorrowful eyes were fixed on him with a rapt intensity. As soon as he caught Mendel's gaze he nodded once or twice almost imperceptibly, and when Mendel looked again the bearded priest had disappeared.

The incident, insignificant in itself, left on Mendel a deep impression. What business had a priest of the Church in a prayer-house of Israel? And what was the meaning of that nod? It was as if the priest had asked himself a question to which he had given his own answer. And he seemed to have left in Mendel's own mind an unanswerable question which troubled him greatly all through the rest of the service.

Chayim, as was his privilege, was the guest of the Rav for supper. Mendel, accompanied by the faithful Torba, had been invited to the house of the man next in importance, the Parnass. The fare was rich and plentiful, but Mendel did not eat. He was quite out of sorts. Do what he would, he could not thrust from his mental vision the face of the bearded priest. The sad, gloomy eyes stared at him from the flame-points of the two Sabbath candles in their silver candelabrum which graced the table, darkening them, making their light to waver as with a great wind. More and more it became borne in on him that the presence of the priest in the Synagogue that night was no accident, no transient occurrence, but was destined to give a violent turn to the current of his life. It seemed to him that the silent answer which the priest had

THE MOST BEAUTIFUL RADIO SET IN THE WORLD

A Sterling production—perfect in appearance—perfect in performance

THE world moves quickly in these days. Consider for a moment some of the earlier radio sets. How long ago it all seems!

YET in about two short years here appears the complete cabinet illustrated above. It would be difficult to imagine anything more beautiful in design, and certainly anything better in performance would be practically impossible to conceive.

THIS STERLING CABINET is a unit comprising a four-valve receiver and a "Primax" bronzed Loud Speaker, complete with all batteries, etc., enclosed. The set has but to be connected to an aerial and then within the control of your finger tips are the voices of the world's greatest vocalists, the art of supreme musicians, the thoughts of all notable publicists and lecturers, and, last but not least, the news that daily keeps one up to the minute.

ALL this charm of entertainment comes to you clearly, loudly and naturally. The "Primax" is tone perfect, as any test will prove. The range of this set includes all the B.B.C. and continental stations favourably situated. In common with other Sterling long-range receivers, the unique receiving range of from 40 to 5,000 metres is at your command.

THERE is no finer set than this in the world—it is de luxe in every respect from the grace of its design in highly-finished walnut to points of efficiency such as "Non-Pong" valve holders.

IT is obtainable through all radio dealers at £96, plus a royalty of £2:10:0. Its catalogue number for reference purposes is No. R.1620. Here, for the endless enjoyment of your friends and yourself, is a radio set that gives you mastery of all that the ether offers.

THE CALL OF THE PAST.

given to his own unspoken question by that imperceptible nod implied: "Yes, we shall meet again."

Mendel pulled himself together and called himself names for indulging in such foolish fancies. He gazed round at the gay company in the room and took courage from them. And loudly at the grace after meals his exquisite voice rang out above all others in the "Song of Degrees," sung to the inspiring strains of the national Zionist hymn, "The Hatikvah."

It was quite late when he and Torba sallied out to return to their lodgings. The night was very dark, and their way led through desolate places where there was no sign of any living thing. His teeth set tight, as though to prevent himself from screaming aloud, Mendel tried to control the tremors of his heart. But as they passed the low cemetery wall, he was no longer master of his fears, and, slipping his hand into that of his companion, he begged:

"Come, Torba, let us run!"

But running was not at all to Torba's taste, for he was very fat, and derived his name from being a perambulating basket into which he stored away all the food he could lay hands on. However, he hastened his step, and already the street lanterns in the market-place could be seen glimmering ahead.

And then something happened. As though sprung from the ground, a number of men suddenly appeared. Torba was brutally pulled away and felled to the ground. That was all Mendel knew, for a gag was thrust into his mouth, a hood or sack thrown over his head, strong arms lifted him up and carried him swiftly away. The darkness, lack of breath, his terror and surprise bereft him of his senses and he swooned.

II.

When Mendel recovered consciousness, he found himself in a whitewashed cell, sparsely furnished with just a couple of chairs, a table and a bed. His face was moist, from which, had he been older, he would have gathered that water had been dashed at him to revive him. But, being a healthy little boy, he did not trouble about anything at the moment, but got into the bed and was soon fast asleep. On waking next morning he saw on the chair beside him a bowl of milk and some bread. To these he applied himself vigorously.

Just as he finished the door opened and the bearded priest came in. Mendel saw him without surprise. He had been conscious all along that the bearded priest had had a hand in what had happened. It was the bearded priest who, a secret voice whispered to him, had taken over the ruling of his destiny.

"Call me Father Anselm," said the priest, his voice soft like the soughing of a zephyr in a field of corn. And then, when he saw Mendel shrink, he went on: "Have no fear. This will protect you."

And with that he drew a crucifix from under his soutane and held it up. Mendel did not understand a word of what the priest had said, for he had spoken in Russian, but when he saw the emblem, under which the enemies of his race adored their God, he stretched out protesting hands and, turning away, hid his face. Smiling sadly, the priest went away.

At dinner a meal of eggs was provided for Mendel, and soon after Father Anselm came again, bringing with him a white vestment. He signed to Mendel to put it on, which Mendel did without demur. It only seemed strange to him that a shirt should be worn over instead of under one's clothes. Then the Father took him by the hand and led him out. Mendel surmised that he had been brought to a house where dwelt the priests and monks such as he had often met in his native town, and he was rather curious to see what this house was like.

But his curiosity was more than satisfied and gave place to repugnance when presently he entered a building which was full of images and crosses. Towering above the others was a huge cross of black wood inlaid with prettily-carved white patterns. The air was pervaded by a sweet-smelling perfume that made him dizzy. The Father led him up three steps to an elevation on which stood a man clad in a garment richly embroidered with gold. Next to him stood a golden ewer filled with water.

The richly-clad man uttered a lengthy harangue in which Mendel frequently caught the name of Christus. Then the man plunged his hand into the ewer and sprinkled some water on Mendel's head. Mendel's unripe understanding could make nothing of these antics, but some intuition told him that this was a rite of initiation into a faith which he had been taught to consider mortally antagonistic to his own. And, shaking the drops of water from his head and tearing off the white vestment, he cried, with the full power of his lungs, the old watchword of his people:

"Shema Yisroel—Hear, oh, Israel, the Lord is thy God, the Lord is one!"

The others merely shrugged. Meanwhile the church had filled. In an enclosure, which reminded Mendel of an almemar—silently he breathed the word "Ichardil"—a number of white-robed boys had gathered. The sound of a deep, rushing music filled the air—Mendel did not know the meaning of an organ. Father Anselm placed him among the boys and signed to him to join in their singing. Mendel shook his head and remained obstinately mute. He would never sing the praises of the alien god who was worshipped here.

The service lasted quite a long time and then he was taken back to his cell. Impatiently he awaited his supper. When it came he saw it was a strange-looking mess which he suspected contained forbidden ingredients. He pushed it away with disgust and went to bed hungry. The next morning, when he awoke, he looked for the bowl of milk and the bread. They were not there. For dinner came again a suspicious-looking mess. Again he did not eat. In the afternoon Father Anselm took him once more to the church and placed him again among the boys. To-day it did not seem to be a service, but a rehearsal. Mendel never gave out a note.

The next two days passed in the same way. Mendel had not touched the platters brought to him, and so this was the third day of his abstinence. He saw what it meant. He had been taken to this dwelling of priests so that he might embellish by his wonderful voice this idolatrous worship of theirs. He was to be starved into surrender. Did God want him to die? He thought of his mother, the memory of whom tormented him night and day. Perhaps, too, this was the penalty he was paying for the vanity with which he had been filled as he stood in his sacred place and raised his voice, not for the glorification of God, which should have been its purpose, but for his own aggrandisement. This was to be his expiation, this cutting off from the past, this severance from all he held dear. Well, if that avenging God of his willed it so, he must bow to His decree. And, with brimming eyes and a wry taste in his mouth, he ate the forbidden food set before him.

That afternoon, too, he joined in the singing. He knew that if he refused he would be subjected to another course of starvation. And what would he gain by that? He had crossed the Rubicon. He had become an outcast from his people, he had forfeited the glorious inheritance of Jacob. With inward stubbornness and resentment, but with outward compliance, he entered into the life and doings of the place. He had little intercourse with the other inmates, but Father Anselm came to see him very often. His manner towards Mendel was kindly and affectionate, full of a paternal, or, rather, brotherly, love, for the Father was still quite a young man.

At first their talk was rather scrappy, for Father Anselm spoke only in Russian and professed to have no knowledge of Mendel's Yiddish. But Mendel's alert brain soon picked up the Russian tongue, and then they had long talks. These however, were always on general and indifferent topics. Never once did the Father refer to Mendel's abduction or baptism. Never once did he try to drill into him the tenets of his creed.

So the years passed, four, five. And during all that time Mendel, in his inmost being, never once swerved from the faith of his fathers. Every day he said the customary prayers out of the little book which he had on his person at the time of his capture and which he kept carefully concealed. One grief, greater than all others, was his. He knew that by now he ought to be laying Tephillin. More than once he had it on the tip of his tongue to ask the Father to procure him a pair. And this resolve grew stronger owing to a strange circumstance which occurred not long afterwards.

They had been talking in Mendel's cell, which was always kept locked, when the Father suddenly said:—

"Michaelovnik"—this was the name by which Mendel now went—"sing me one of your Jewish songs."

And, readily enough, Mendel came out with the: "And now let us express the mighty holiness of the day." He sang it with a breaking heart, for he remembered how he had sung it to his mother that fatal night when he had run away from her. But, as he looked at the Father, he received a great shock. He had become very pale and from between his closed eyelids two large tears were rolling down his cheeks. And then, when the tune came to an end, he got up very quickly and hurried out of the room. And Mendel could have sworn that the two words his lips mumbled were: "Yom Kippur."

But another thought also came to Mendel. As the door closed he did not, as usual, hear the click of the turning key. Here was the chance he had so eagerly hoped for. All these years his mind had been bent on the one idea—escape. Could he effect it now?

Cautiously he tried the door. No, it was not locked. The next moment he was out in the corridor. He had no notion of the topography of the monastery save the way to the chapel. He passed on, congratulating himself on meeting nobody, till he came to a lofty colonnade, the exit of which, as he saw to his joy, gave on to the courtyard. He hurried on and had made his way half its length, when—horror of horrors!—he saw it entered from the other end by Father Anselm, walking with another monk. They were deep in conversation.

Desperately Mendel crouched against the wall, praying fervently to God that He might send a miracle and strike the two priests with blindness. And, wonderful to relate, his prayer seemed vouchsafed, for the two priests passed him by, casting no look at the fugitive. Joyfully Mendel hurried on. At the outlet of the colonnade he met with some delay. Peering round the corner, he saw that two or three people were in the courtyard. But the blessing of Heaven was evidently upon him, for, a few minutes later, the monks went away and Mendel had free passage.

Running with all his speed he reached the low postern gate which was all that now stood between him and freedom. In a moment he had clambered over and dropped to the other side. But just as he rose to his feet he felt a hand on his shoulder, and a deep, well-known voice said:—

"No, my child, you cannot escape from the loving mercy of Christ."

And, holding him in a firm grip, Father Anselm gently shepherded him back to his cell.

So near to success and then to have failed! Back in his prison Mendel threw himself on the bed in a tempest of heart-broken sobs. Silently the Father waited for him to recover control. And then, going over to him, he spoke.

Mendel did not know if he could trust his ears. For the Father did not speak in his usual Russian, but in the familiar accents of the Yiddish tongue.

"Mendel," he said, "I will tell you why I brought you back, and if you will curse me for it to the end of your days it is no more than I have deserved."

Mendel looked at him hard and flung the words at him.

"You are not what you seem."

"I am not what I was," came the sad reply. "I will tell you my story—will you listen, Mendel?"

Mendel nodded. By now, of course, he had a shrewd idea what that story was.

"No, not quite the same as yours," continued the Father, as though he had read his thoughts. "For there is this great difference. You came here by force, I came willingly. The village poppe cast his eyes on me and enticed me. At home I was called Anshel, but at home there was nothing but blows and hunger and misery—at the poppe's house my bruises were soothed and my hunger

OPEN YOUR DOOR TO THE NEEDY

ON this Rosh-Hashanah, when you plead to our Heavenly Father: "Open the gates of Heaven unto our prayer" — remember your sorely-tried brethren in the Ukraine, who in supplication and tears, beseech you to open your door to them in their affliction.

SOULS in grief; aged and sick; broken, widowed mothers with their starving babes cry in anguish on your doorstep for relief.

DOOM them not. For mercy's sake—Help! Give them a breath of life, and may your name be inscribed this New Year in the Book of Happy Life.

Please Hurry—Starving Children Cannot Wait.

INTERVIEW FOR "THE JEWISH CHRONICLE"

WITH

Mr. JOSEPH ZLOTOVER.

THE progress of Dublin Jewry has been signalised by the raising recently by the Dublin United Hebrew Congregation of a handsome and dignified synagogue at Greenville House, Dolphin's Barn, which was consecrated on Sunday last. Mr. Joseph Zlotover, J.P., President of the congregation and an important and indispensable figure in Dublin Communal life, gave our representative some interesting facts in connection with the movement that enabled the synagogue to be erected.

Mr. Joseph Zlotover.

Mr. Zlotover explained that the movement had its origin sixteen years ago in a small band of enthusiastic workers, animated by a zeal for progress and unity in Dublin Jewry, among whom were Dr. G. S. Wigoder and Messrs. I. Tomkin and W. Birgel. Even then Dublin was without accommodation for a large number of its worshippers. With the exception of the premier Congregation, Adelaide Road, there were only scattered minganim and tiny conventicles. Moreover, the community was very badly organised and lacked many of the institutions necessary to a proper and well ordered Jewish life. There was no official spiritual head, the Shechita Board had not yet been created, the community lacked a hall for meetings, assemblies, &c., and the Talmud Torah Schools were then in but an embryonic stage of their development, and the system of teaching not modern. From the religious aspect especially (but from the social point of view also), Mr. Zlotover added, he and his colleagues were principally concerned with the needs of the rising generation. They considered that it was a matter of the highest importance to erect a house of worship which would appeal to the youth, and inspire them with due reverential feeling. Secondly, they conceived the idea of building a communal hall for assemblies, meetings, etc., which would serve as a social centre for the young men and girls, keeping the youth together, and protecting them from non-Jewish influences. Thirdly, they had in view the construction of a fully equipped School for the teaching of Hebrew and Religion. Lastly, they advocated a scheme for amalgamating all the synagogues in the City, and all the activities appertaining to them under a single Committee of Management.

For the purpose of the rearing of the synagogue a building fund was opened in a small way by a number of donations, and fed by a system of house to house collections which were carried out for a period of four years.

Great difficulties, pursued Mr. Zlotover, were met with in the search for a desirable building plot, and some years elapsed until a suitable site, that of Greenville House, and land adjoining it, was found and purchased in 1913.

An appeal was launched in 1914, for the funds required to inaugurate building operations, which met with generous support in the Community. In England, sympathy was shown with the projected synagogue, and the community remembers with appreciation that THE JEWISH CHRONICLE devoted a leading article on 6th March, 1914, in support of the appeal.

Unhappily the Great War broke out, and with Europe writhing in the throes of that gigantic conflict it was found impossible to proceed with the scheme for the erection of the synagogue.

All work was not, however, suspended, for the Committee found it practicable to proceed with other items of their scheme for the development of the organisational side of the community. They went ahead with the building of the communal hall, which was very urgently needed; and in April, 1916, the foundation-stone of what is now known as the Greenville Hall was laid. The Hall was opened in the following September.

In the meantime, with the participation of members of the Building Committee, a Shechita Board was established in Dublin for the first time and proved a triumphant success, both financially and as regards Kashruth.

A further milestone in the path of communal progress was meanwhile reached by the creation of a Rabbinate Committee which was fortunate in securing the services of Rabbi Dr. I. Herzog, M.A., D.Litt. For the first time Dublin possessed a revered spiritual head officially chosen and representing all sections.

The advent of Dr. Herzog added new inspiration and enthusiasm to the proposal to erect a new synagogue, and in 1922 a public meeting was held and a fresh Building Committee with additional workers was elected. Satisfactory arrangements were made with the bankers and the foundation stone of the now newly-erected synagogue was laid on the 27th April, 1924 by Mr. I. Tomkin and Mr. W. A. Newman.

Mr. Zlotover added that though they were Irish Jews they were not Separatist or Sinn Feinn in matters connected with Judaism, they were proud to offer their allegiance to the Chief Rabbi of the British Empire and in their association with the Deputies.

Only a portion of their work however had been achieved in the completion of the synagogue. The structure had cost the large sum of £14,000, and a considerable debt remained to be paid.

He (Mr. Zlotover) trusted also at no far distant date to see the realisation of two other aims they had set their hearts on sixteen years ago—the building of a fully-equipped and suitable school-house.

Very important, too, was the scheme for amalgamating all the synagogues, a scheme which had not yet got beyond the stage of examination and discussion.

New Year.

SERMON FOR THE WEEK.

Specially prepared for THE JEWISH CHRONICLE.

The New Year Festival differs from most of the sacred days in the Jewish Calendar, which rely largely on their historical associations in making their appeal to the Jewish consciousness. The first day of Tishri recalls no special event in our history. It offers for our consideration a peculiar combination of apparently different aims. One that is of a personal character, and another that is of world-wide comprehensiveness.

As the beginning of the solemn season that culminates in the great Fast-day, the New Year suggests the opportunity for personal introspection. It is the great day of memory, and its first message is to the individual. The trumpet-call of the Shofar is, first and foremost, a call for the awakening of the slumbering soul. The passing of another milestone on life's journey invites us to pause and rest awhile, to reflect on the paths that we have trodden, and whither the journey tends. Memory is one of God's most wondrous gifts to man. Its proper cultivation is an essential means towards his moral progress. It is the stepping stone by which he rises to higher things. New Year's Day not only offers us the opportunity for the cultivation of memory, but suggests the direction in which this precious faculty can be best applied. It is not a stock-taking of material resources or even of mental achievements that it encourages. Its purpose is moral, ethical, and spiritual. It is a stirring of memories as between God and man. It presents to us a picture of the progress of the struggle between the higher and the lower self. It brings back to us a recollection of the things that have tended towards spiritual growth, and of others that have hindered or delayed it. The vision of the past thus presented is not that of a completed picture, which we must perforce carry with us for good or evil for the remainder of our days. New Year's Day is not the portal on whose doors is written the abandonment of hope. For side by side with man's memory stands the memory of God, which partakes of the eternity of His nature. God's memory is not confined to past events. It stretches to the future. It is to the eternal memory that we appeal in those strange but striking prayers that ask God to remember us for good and happy lives. Seen in their right perspective, human memories also stretch forward. The past becomes the background for the future. The Jewish New Year builds upon the foundations of memory, an edifice.

This is clearly the whole doctrine of the penitential season. Penitence must be the forerunner of reformation, or it has lost its value. The sorrow and the shame of sin acknowledged are the magic doors that lead to reconciliation and to determined efforts towards nobler lives. The old year, seen from this vantage point, ushers in the new. The Shofar that wakened us to recollection now summons us to fresh and valiant activities. It is not the sounding of a "Last Post" over the burial of a dead past. It is an announcement of the resurrection of the Eternal Soul from the very ashes of those fires through which men pass. And that is why life and resurrection form another of the grand themes of the New Year ritual. It speaks of the constant victory of life over death. Even the memory of the dead leads men to the hope of everlasting life. How much more may the memories of the past lead us to the glories of the future! As we turn over the record of life's memories, how many a page is filled with the goodnesses of God, that helped us so wonderfully to rise above our frailties. The book that remains to be written shall be illuminated no less.

And so we pass from this personal aspect of the New Year to one of an apparently different kind—the day that celebrates the world's creation and acclaims the sovereignty of God; the day that brings every creature to his throne for judgment; the day that writes the future of nations and individuals in the great book of Heaven. We may take these conceptions literally or as a poetic representation of a great idea. But they are of the very essence of the lessons of the day. The sovereignty of God implies the responsibility of his creatures. His providence implies his all-embracing mercy. Here is no tribal God, no favoured people. Here is a message and a promise to the great world without. Has it no need that its memories be also stirred to the things that make for its welfare and its peace? Would it not be well if nations could but for one day forget their differences and, taking stock of the moral value of the things after which they strive, ask whether they tend to that advance in civilisation whose ultimate goal is none other than the full establishment of God's Kingdom upon earth? The New Year that weighs the souls of men in the balance of moral judgment claims to weigh in the same scales the acts of nations and of peoples. Righteousness and justice are the foundations of the throne of God, before whom the nations must tremble, but the earth rejoices when he reigns therein.

The history of the world, no less than that of the individual, is a memory conjured up by our New Year ritual. For it also is a book written by the finger of God. The individual, who postpones amendment to some future time of grace, will fail to see the hand that is even now stretched out to help him. And the world that waits for Messianic days to establish God's kingdom upon earth, helps but to delay the dawning of that day. The hindrance to the establishment of God's kingdom is that men subject themselves to the rule of unrighteousnes. And every step by which they free themseves from the shackles of such servitude is an advance towards the ultimate good in which all mankind shall share.

And it is because Israel—in no spirit of arrogance—deems himself to be an agent Divinely inspired towards that end, that his New Year is a festival sacred to the uplifting of the whole world, towards the coming of that day, when the Lord shall be King over all the Earth. So this Festival of humanity becomes but an enlargement of the New Year of the individual soul, and the world-message comes back to each of us as a charge and a challenge. Every citizen of the world bears the measure of his responsibility for its betterment and uplifting. Every life lived in the presence of God helps to fill the whole world with his glory. Every heart uplifted on a New Year's Day brings nearer the days of Heaven on the earth.

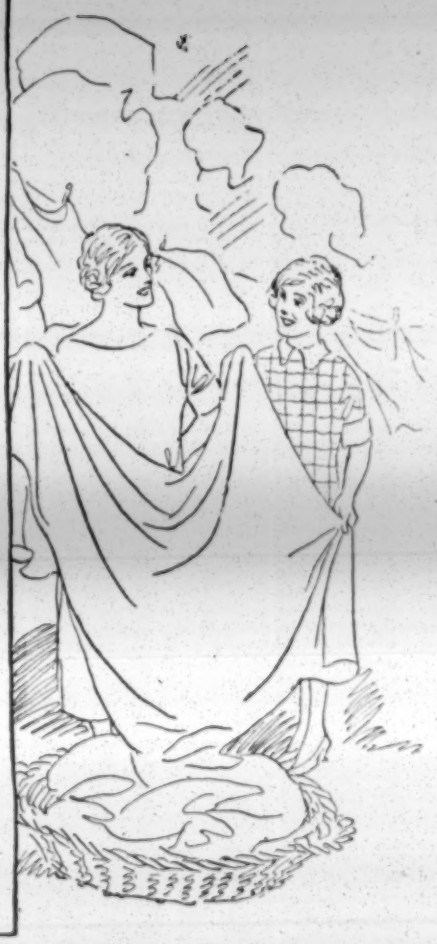
The Editor of THE JEWISH CHRONICLE desires to convey his best Wishes for a Happy New Year to all readers everywhere!



Save her those tell-tale grey hairs

You do not want your daughter to develop wrinkles and grey hairs, signs of overwork, when she is still quite young. You remember that so many women of your generation aged prematurely. That was because they had to bend for hours over the steaming wash-tub. Washing-day was a nightmare before Rinso was invented.

Rinso penetrates the clothes and draws the dirt out. Don't rub—don't scrub—just soak the clothes in the big lasting Rinso suds—they are clean.

Rinso

Rinso can be used for boiling—just as well as for soaking

In two sizes: Large carton for full-size wash; smaller carton for ordinary wash

The 16 Great Benefits of Daily Mail FREE INSURANCE Give you Peace of Mind

Your everyday life is fraught with danger. In the street, on the road, in your home, on the playing fields, in train, omnibus or tramway car the possibility of accident is always at your elbow. But when accidents happen, as happen they must, you can be prepared to take the sting out of the consequences by enjoying the protection of the 16 common-sense benefits of the Daily Mail Free Insurance. There is, for instance, the great popular benefit of

£2 a Week for Life

A pension of £2 per week for life is paid in cases where registered readers of The Daily Mail are permanently and totally disabled by any of a variety of causes, such as accidents to

TRAINS, PASSENGER STEAMERS, TRAMWAY CARS, MOTOR AND HORSE ONMIBUSES, TAXI AND HORSE CABS, LIFTS, HIRED MOTOR CARS AND OTHER ROAD VEHICLES.

The sums payable in benefits under Daily Mail Free Insurance range from this £2 a week for life up to a lump sum of £3,500.

16 Generous Benefits

1. £2 a week for life for permanent total disablement by accident to train, steamship, lift, or road vehicles.
2. £500 for loss of limb or eye by accident to passenger train, steamship, lift or road vehicle.
3. £250 for pedestrian run over and killed in the street.
4. £3,500 for death by accident to passenger train in which the reader is travelling as a fare-paying passenger.
5. £10 for accident involving fracture of bone (other than those of hands or feet) while at home or temporary residence.
6. £1,000 for death by accident to steamship, road vehicle or lift.
7. £10 for accident involving fracture of bone (other than those of hands or feet) to pedestrian run over in the street.
8. £250 for death by accident while riding cycle or motor-cycle for pleasure.
9. £250 for death by accident while at home or temporary residence.
10. £10 for accident involving fracture of bone (other than those of hands or feet) while riding cycle or motor-cycle for pleasure.
11. £20 for injury involving fracture of bone (other than those of hands or feet) by accident to passenger train, road vehicle or steamship in which reader is travelling as a fare-paying passenger.
12. £250 for death by accident while being driven in private car or carriage for pleasure.
13. £250 for death by drowning while boating, bathing, or saving life.
14. £250 if killed while playing certain games as an amateur.
15. £10 for accident involving fracture of bone (other than those of hands or feet) while playing certain games as an amateur.
16. £250 for death by accident while flying as fare-paying passenger.

£60,350 Paid this Year

Daily Mail Free Insurance is so designed as to give Generous Benefits and Prompt payments. Proof of this is shown in the fact that more than £60,000 has been paid out since the beginning of this year. The figures given below, showing how the sum is made up, constitute an unapproached record in the history of newspaper free insurance.

CLAIMS PAID THIS YEAR - 2,374

These payments comprise :—

1 Death Benefit of £1,000 = £1,000

148 Death Benefits of £250 = £37,000

and a number of smaller sums as benefits for incidents from a variety of causes amounting to £22,350

In the great majority of these cases the failure to qualify for Daily Mail Free Insurance would have meant severe hardship for dependents. Have you failed to give your dependents this protection ?

The offer is made under an arrangement with the British Dominions Insurance Co., Ltd., and is governed by the full conditions printed in The Daily Mail on January 1st 1925 and reprinted from time to time.

The Way to Peace of Mind

THESE FORMS enable you to qualify for benefits which range from £3,500 to £2 A WEEK FOR LIFE. Accidents of Travel, in the Home, Accidents to Amateurs playing the most popular Sports, and Holiday Accidents are all included in one form or another.

The 16 Great Benefits of Daily Mail FREE INSURANCE Give you Peace of Mind

Your everyday life is fraught with danger. In the street, on the road, in your home, on the playing fields, in train, omnibus or tramway car the possibility of accident is always at your elbow. But when accidents happen, as happen they must, you can be prepared to take the sting out of the consequences by enjoying the protection of the 16 common-sense benefits of the Daily Mail Free Insurance. There is, for instance, the great popular benefit of

£2 a Week for Life

A pension of £2 per week for life is paid in cases where registered readers of The Daily Mail are permanently and totally disabled by any of a variety of causes, such as accidents to

TRAINS, PASSENGER STEAMERS, TRAMWAY CARS, MOTOR AND HORSE ONMIBUSES, TAXI AND HORSE CABS, LIFTS, HIRED MOTOR CARS AND OTHER ROAD VEHICLES.

The sums payable in benefits under Daily Mail Free Insurance range from this £2 a week for life up to a lump sum of £3,500.

16 Generous Benefits

1. £2 a week for life for permanent total disablement by accident to train, steamship, lift, or road vehicles.
2. £500 for loss of limb or eye by accident to passenger train, steamship, lift or road vehicle.
3. £250 for pedestrian run over and killed in the street.
4. £3,500 for death by accident to passenger train in which the reader is travelling as a fare-paying passenger.
5. £10 for accident involving fracture of bone (other than those of hands or feet) while at home or temporary residence.
6. £1,000 for death by accident to steamship, road vehicle or lift.
7. £10 for accident involving fracture of bone (other than those of hands or feet) to pedestrian run over in the street.
8. £250 for death by accident while riding cycle or motor-cycle for pleasure.
9. £250 for death by accident while at home or temporary residence.
10. £10 for accident involving fracture of bone (other than those of hands or feet) while riding cycle or motor-cycle for pleasure.
11. £20 for injury involving fracture of bone (other than those of hands or feet) by accident to passenger train, road vehicle or steamship in which reader is travelling as a fare-paying passenger.
12. £250 for death by accident while being driven in private car or carriage for pleasure.
13. £250 for death by drowning while boating, bathing, or saving life.
14. £250 if killed while playing certain games as an amateur.
15. £10 for accident involving fracture of bone (other than those of hands or feet) while playing certain games as an amateur.
16. £250 for death by accident while flying as fare-paying passenger.

£60,350 Paid this Year

Daily Mail Free Insurance is so designed as to give Generous Benefits and Prompt payments. Proof of this is shown in the fact that more than £60,000 has been paid out since the beginning of this year. The figures given below, showing how the sum is made up, constitute an unapproached record in the history of newspaper free insurance.

CLAIMS PAID THIS YEAR - 2,374

These payments comprise :—

1 Death Benefit of £1,000 = £1,000

148 Death Benefits of £250 = £37,000

and a number of smaller sums as benefits for incidents from a variety of causes amounting to £22,350

In the great majority of these cases the failure to qualify for Daily Mail Free Insurance would have meant severe hardship for dependents. Have you failed to give your dependents this protection !

The offer is made under an arrangement with the British Dominions Insurance Co., Ltd., and is governed by the full conditions printed in The Daily Mail on January 1st 1925 and reprinted from time to time.

The Way to Peace of Mind

THESE FORMS enable you to qualify for benefits which range from £3,500 to £2 A WEEK FOR LIFE. Accidents of Travel, in the Home, Accidents to Amateurs playing the most popular Sports, and Holiday Accidents are all included in one form or another.

Going forward

Serving without prejudice to religious persuasions the great human salvage operations of command widespread approval among British Jewry. The generous co-operation of Jewish friends is warmly appreciated, and the Army's Social work has received much valuable support from them.

GENERAL BOOTH, son of William Booth, the Founder of the Salvation Army.

1479 SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS are maintained in eighty countries and colonies. These include :-

Shelters
Food Depots
Hostels Workshops
Labour Yards
Farms
Children's Homes
Creches
Day Schools
Maternity Homes Hospitals
Nursing Homes
"Eventide" Homes for the Aged

GENERAL BOOTH has long been impressed by the need for

in the lands overseas, where the Army already is carrying forward its campaign of mercy. In many of these districts, the S.A. Institutions are practically the only means of succouring the sick and needy. In the Dutch Indies for instance, the Army has established colonies for the unfortunate victims of Leprosy. It has achieved remarkable success in the reformation of Hereditary Criminal Tribes of India.

The approaching

provides an opportunity for fulfilment of this now overdue development.

His officers are planning a wide extension of service, in thanksgiving for a life devoted unreservedly to the service of God and Humanity.

Memorials, which shall be centres of Salvation Army endeavour, are to be established at strategic points. These proposed new foundations include, among many others :

Rescue Home, Calcutta
Central Industrial Institution for Indian Children Training Home, Etc., Lagos
Hospital, S. China
Dispensary, S. Africa Hospital, Telegu Country
Training Institute, Japan

Such an advance is not possible of attainment within the Army's ordinary resources. We therefore turn for assistance to all who value the work of the Salvation Army and honour the devotion of its leader. The programme involves of which it is hoped to raise at least

£70,000 in this country

THE SALVATION ARMY HAS :

WORKERS trained by experience ; Many have given a lifetime in the service of their fellows.

METHODS tested by Experience ;

RESULTS proved by Experience

Will YOU help to provide the MEANS for this great advance in the name of HUMANITY.

NEAR YEAR GIFTS, large or small, are earnestly solicited and should be addressed : The Subscribers' Secretary, 101, Queen Victoria Street, E.C., who will also be pleased to furnish further particulars.

A Dish You'll Enjoy

—Shredded Wheat with the season's choice fruits, stewed

Fruit is cheap, delicious and plentiful just now. If you make pastry to go with the fruit you incur trouble and expense. Stew the fruit and serve it with crisp, golden Shredded Wheat—the cereal that is always ready.

Shredded Wheat presents to you the whole wheat in an easily-digested and wholesome form. Eaten with juicy fruit it provides a new and unique pleasure—just as inviting to grown ups as it is to the kiddies. Extremely health-giving, refreshing, and sustaining. 100 per cent food, remember.

CASH FOR CARTONS
(To Consumers only)

We will pay ½d. each for the picture of the "dish" cut from empty cartons of Shredded Wheat and Triscuit in lots of not less than 36. To those sending in the largest collection of these "dishes" before October 31st, we will also award a

A HOME OF REST

THE HOME FOR AGED JEWS SUPPLIES A COMMUNAL NEED

A HAVEN OF REST AT LIFE'S "FITFUL CLOSE"

APPEAL

FOR

(OF WHICH £6,000 HAS ALREADY BEEN GIVEN OR PROMISED)

ONE of our greatest communal needs is to be supplied by the Home for Aged Jews which has undertaken to erect a SPECIAL BUILDING where those whose mortal hours are numbered may receive loving care and attention from their own people and thus be spared the distress occasioned by their dying surrounded by strangers.

THE need of a Jewish Home for the Dying has been emphasised by the Jewish Clergy and Social Workers for many years. The great Institution in Nightingale Lane, Wandsworth Common, possesses all the facilities for managing the new SPECIAL BUILDING in the most economical and efficient manner, and the traditions that will ensure the inmates being tended in the spirit of true Jewish charity.

£15,000 Required to Build and Equip — £2,500 Annual Maintenance

£500 Will Name a Bed — £1,000 will Name a Ward

DONATIONS WILL BE GRATEFULLY RECEIVED BY:

MOSS HARRIS, Chairman,

GEORGE G. JACOB, PERCY P. LEVY — Treasurers

IRVING'S YEAST-VITE TABLETS will relieve :

Headache, Neuralgia, etc. ... in 5 to 10 minutes
Indigestion, Flatulence ... ... in 10 to 15 minutes
Biliousness, Dizziness, Depression, etc. in 10 to 15 minutes
Disordered Stomach, Liver ... in 5 minutes
Influenza, Colds, Fever ... ... in 24 hours

Send post card for free treatise on Anæmia, Nerves, Skin Blemishes, Constipation, Colds, Insomnia, Rheumatism, Pains, etc.

OUR GUARANTEE Obtain a 1/3 Bottle from your Chemist. If your health does not improve perceptibly, post us the empty bottle, and we will refund your money immediately.

£100 Cash will be paid to anyone proving that the following extracts from unsolicited testimonials are not genuine. We have received thousands of letters from satisfied users in 15 months, which are open to inspection.

18224—Dr. P.: "I find the tablets an excellent tonic and would thank you for a further supply to distribute among my patients."

17013—Dr. N. writes: "I am prescribing the tablets regularly. Please send a box to my brother (invoice to me), as I want him to take the treatment."

24111—Mr. B. S.R.N., C.S., M.M.G.: "Up to the present Yeast-Vite Tablets have never failed. I have given them in cases where all other remedies failed. Many of my patients would not be without them."

15333—I thought you might be interested in results of my tests. Two influenza cases quickly cured. Tem. 104 brought to normal in 12 hours. Several headache patients—pain disappeared almost instantly.

25334—I have suffered for years with anæmia, nerves, and terrible coughs. Thanks to Yeast-Vite this is the first winter that I have not been laid up. I am afraid to be without them.

25338—For 18 years I have suffered terribly with my head, and had to give up work. On recommendation I tried Yeast-Vite, and am now back at work and never felt better.

25274—With unmixed pleasure I thank you for the tremendous benefit I have derived from Yeast-Vite. I am a commercial traveller, and my business has increased with my energy and vim, namely 40 per cent.

22741—I shall feel eternally grateful to you for enabling me to regain my health, and I shall never be without Yeast-Vite in the house. I recommended them to six friends last week.

21987—Thanks for your confidential medical advice. The boils have now entirely disappeared.

21113—As matron of the Girls' Training Homes I have found the tablets efficacious. I have also tested them thoroughly myself, and have been surprised to prove them to be such a real "lightning pick-me-up." I shall always have them by me in future.

22373—Nurse A. L.: "I was ready to go into hospital for gastric ulcer. The pain nearly drove me mad. Medicine made it worse, but Yeast-Vite stopped the pain in less than 10 minutes! They are perfectly wonderful. I recommend them to everybody."

20643—I have suffered with indigestion for eight years. The pain at times almost killed me, and I could not eat, sleep, or do anything. After taking only four tablets the pains disappeared, and I have had no discomfort since.

21982—Mother was so run-down, nervous and depressed following the death of father, and an attack of influenza left her in a collapsed state with neuralgia. The effect of the very first box of Yeast-Vite was simply marvellous.

21234—I was miserable, irritable and nervous, but thanks to Yeast-Vite I am better in every way. Please publish this and let the public know now much good they have done me.

19997—I suffered with stomach trouble for years, but thanks to Yeast-Vite I am entirely cured. I have recommended them to many friends, and they all speak highly of them.

21007—Suffering with nerves and general run-down condition, I tried lots of medicines without relief. I tried Yeast-Vite, and can assure you that I feel 100 per cent. better.

19387—Leading London Hospital (Secretary): After a careful test we find Yeast-Vite as claimed and very satisfactory. We are now quite willing to purchase supplies.

19666—Diocesan for Befriending Girls: I am using them for my girls with great success. One very delicate girl gained 4 lbs. in one week. I find them an excellent tonic.

1723—Am pleased to say that three of my friends have benefited as much as I since I recommended them.

13501—Rev. J. P.: I was led by a fellow-sufferer to try them, and have received considerable benefit.

1001—I think them splendid, and will certainly recommend them to all I know.

17500—I noticed a great change. My spirits brightened, and I seemed to walk on air.

11609—Please send six boxes. They did me so much good I wish to distribute them among my friends.

14721—I have recommended them to several patients, and would thank you to send a box to each name on list enclosed.

16113—Am pleased to let you know that several of my patients have secured benefit from them.

10866—I had to borrow some from friends, our chemist being closed. I cannot be without them.

11030—Send by return post as I cannot be without them. I suffer so with indigestion, and they relieve me immediately.

14421—A District Nurse writes: "I find the tablets all you claim, and am recommending them heartily in this district."

CAUTION.—Avoid rank imitations which have no therapeutic value and are unstamped. All genuine Irving's Yeast-Vite Tablets are always sealed with Government stamp.

A SUMMARY.

The past year has been a very full one in the crowded annals of our brethren in these islands, if marked, however, by but few great events in the general history of Israel. Happily, its pages were not stained red by brutal pogroms, such as were produced by the fires of hate which still flamed up in Eastern and Central Europe. Throughout that vast area constant dread of what might be, and the continual ebullition of malice, rendered the lives of our hapless brethren an unceasing nightmare. Economic boycott and the operation of economic laws added the horrors of ruin and starvation to the terrors of spite, while disease took its greedy toll of wasted and weakened lives. This sombre picture is relieved here and there by brighter touches. In Eretz Yisrael peace reigned, and, despite the flouting of the terms of the Mandate, some elements in the upbuilding of the Jewish National Home proceeded apace. Chiefly, from this point of view, the Land of Israel during the year saw the inauguration of the Hebrew University. Across the Atlantic the floodgates of Jewish philanthropy showed no signs of closing, and every call for help met with a generous response, though the entrance gates of America, like our own, remain closed to the hapless refugees whose eternal question of "Wohin?" finds its answer ever more narrowed.

Here in England the year was crowded with communal activity. Additional provision for public worship and religious education has been made both in the metropolis and the provinces, and the year must almost have been a record one in the number of new synagogues established, not least among them the new place of worship consecrated on Sunday last for the "Liberal" Jews. An acute controversy that raged round the future of Jews' College was happily settled, and there were several other features of domestic communal life that give cause for gratification. Unhappily, the year was marked by the death of several zealous communal workers whose places it will be hard to fill.

It has been, too, a year much marked by conferences and congresses, and though some of these gatherings, like the Zionist Congress in Vienna, ended largely in futility, it is an encouraging sign that the many problems of Jewish life are, at least, being faced by means of common deliberation, rather than being allowed to remain as sores in the body politic of Jewry.

At Home.

Perhaps the most striking feature of the history of the past year at home was the holding of another Preachers' Conference, at which a series of remarkable papers were read. Not the least notable of these utterances was the opening address of the Chief Rabbi of the British Empire who presided. A happy solution was reached in the controversy between the Jewish War Memorial and Jews' College, thanks largely to the skill in that direction showed by the Chief Rabbi and the late Mr. S. H. Emanuel, K.C. The ill-conceived Academy scheme was dropped, and an agreement arrived at between the College and the Memorial laying down the conditions under which the College will receive substantial support from the War Memorial Fund. A new Constitution has already been adopted by the College, which will be required to appoint to its staff a gentleman of English birth and education. The aliens' question remained the chief political topic to engage the attention of the community. The Home Secretary indulged in virulent anti-alien speeches both in and out of Parliament, though his utterances in the House of Commons were a little more guarded than those on the platform. New instructions were sent to alien officers at the ports, and greater stringency was observed at the Home Office itself in regard to naturalisation and other matters. The Deputies sent a deputation to urge on the Home Secretary the removal of hardships in administration, particularly with regard to the registration of alien children on reaching the age of 16. The Home Secretary held out some sort of promise in regard to this matter which he has since withdrawn, and he intimated that in granting naturalisation he set up a standard of length of residence in this country far greater than that laid down in the Act. Early in the year the anti-alien agitation was fomented by a series of articles in The Times to which Lord Rothschild, on behalf of the Deputies, wrote a reply. Hundreds of stranded transmigrants still languish at Atlantic Park, Eastleigh, near Southampton, though the Shelter and other Jewish bodies (among them the B'nai B'rith and the Union of Jewish Women) are doing much to lighten their lot and secure their gradual dispersion. The special Jewish committee formed in the United States to deal with this problem is contributing monetary, but little political, relief, the cruel immigration laws in the United States, with the iniquitous quota system, being as rigidly enforced as our own.

The building and opening of a new "Liberal" synagogue with the magnificent structure in St. John's Wood Road, to which we have referred, give to that body the largest synagogue in this country. The movement called forth very generous gifts from the members of the congregation, notably from Mr. Bernhard Baron, whose munificence to hospitals and other charities has made his name a household word. Under the auspices of the "Liberal" congregation a joint conference of Jews and Christians was held for the discussion of religious topics of mutual interest. The gathering aroused widespread attention, and its promoters claimed that it did much to remove prejudices and misunderstandings. THE JEWISH CHRONICLE had occasion to criticise the lack of discrimination shown in extending an invitation to a priest of the Catholic Church, who makes conversionist activities among Jews his life work.

The Deputies had a full and busy session. The Constitution was altered to enable that body to participate in the proposed extended Jewish Agency for Palestine, and after the triennial elections the anomalous and ill-assorted Joint Press Committee was abolished, though the time was not yet deemed ripe for doing away with the Joint Foreign Committee, which is composed of representatives of the Deputies and the Anglo-Jewish Association, though the latter body is now itself represented on the Deputies. A new enquiry was held on the subject of the price of kasher meat, but the committee has not yet finally reported, as discussions are pending with the Board of Shechita, which at first refused co-operation in the enquiry. Foreign Jewish affairs continued to engage the careful scrutiny of the deputies, who more than once paid tribute to the able work performed by Mr. Lucien Wolf, the secretary of the Joint Foreign Committee. The Anglo-Jewish Association, now relieved of financial embarrassments by the munificent bequest of the late Sir Ellis Kadcorie, continued its valuable educational work in the East, and is planning extensions in Iraq, which was visited during the year by Mr. O. E. d'Avigdor Goldsmid, the President.

The committee appointed to consider the proposed co-ordination of Metropolitan Jewish charities presented its report, which is now under consideration by the charities concerned. The report envisages the formation of a Central Charities' Council, which will collect funds and make grants. Another scheme which may have a beneficent influence on communal life in future is the ministers' superannuation scheme adopted during the year by the Council of the Jewish War Memorial.

Several new institutions were formed in London. The St. John's Wood, Stoke Newington, and North London synagogues added much-needed classroom accommodation and halls. The Jewish Free Reading Room is now housed in splendid new premises in the Whitechapel Road. A new Infant Welfare Centre was opened in Stepney under the auspices of the New West End Synagogue League of Social Service. A new Talmud Torah was opened in Lambeth. The Hambro Synagogue celebrated its bi-centenary, and the foundation stone was laid of a new synagogue in the New North Road. The Adath Yisroel congregation acquired a new cemetery at Enfield.

The London Jewish Hospital continued to appeal to the sympathies of Metropolitan Jewry, and good progress was made in the collection of the sum needed for the completion of the main block of the building. Mr. Bernhard Baron donated ten thousand pounds for this purpose. A new department for artificial sunlight treatment is being built and equipped by the family of the late Mr. Abraham Davis. While speaking of the hospital, mention should be made of the completion of the endowment of the first "Y. L. Cot." Our young readers are now busily engaged in collecting a second £500 for another cot.

New synagogues were established during the year in Manchester, Newcastle, Harrogate, Liverpool, and Glasgow. At Leeds new premises were acquired for the Talmud Torah, and at Dublin the synagogue in Adelaide Road was extended—all of these signs of a vigorous communal life.

The year saw a revival of Jewish national interest in this country. A successful campaign was held on behalf of the Keren Hayesod, marked by big meetings at the Kingsway and Great Assembly Halls in London, and at several provincial centres. Great interest was taken in the Keren Hayesod film, depicting Jewish life in its many phases in Eretz Yisrael. During the year also the Jewish Drama League was founded, with Mr. Zangwill as president. It gave an excellent first performance in English of "Nathan the Wise," and has enrolled a large membership. The Union of Jewish Literary Societies again held a successful course of lectures, to which eminent authorities contributed, while the Jewish Historical Society also held a busy session. The Arthur Davis Memorial Lecture this year (delivered by Mr. Philip Guedella on "Napoleon and Palestine") was rendered memorable by the presence of Mr. Lloyd George, who paid a notable tribute to the services rendered by Dr. Weizmann to Great Britain during the war, and told of their influence upon the issuing of the Balfour Declaration. The Jewish Lads' Brigade, which held two successful camps in the summer, again emerged as Cadet Boxing Champions of Great Britain in the competition for the Prince of Wales' Shield.

Among minor matters of interest which deserve to be recorded in this survey, mention should be made of the presentation to the Royal Exchange of a fine portrait of Nathan Mayer Rothschild (the founder of the English branch of the house) by his great grandsons, Messrs. Lionel and Anthony de Rothschild, and the broadcasting of excellent addresses by the Chief Rabbi (on the Jewish festivals) and Mrs. Philip Snowden (on Jewish progress in Palestine). There was an extraordinary outcome to the proceedings for libel brought against THE JEWISH CHRONICLE by Mr. Alexander Levison, a brother of the missionary, Sir Leon Levison. We had challenged his claim to the title of Rabbi and his fitness to act in that capacity. After long and tiresome proceedings, documents on which we relied to substantiate our plea were abstracted from the Court file while in possession, by leave of the Court, of the plaintiff. The Judge (Lord Ashmore) made strong comments on the plaintiffs and stopped the case against THE JEWISH CHRONICLE (as well as one which Levison had brought against Rabbi Dr. Salis Daiches, and which covered much of the same ground), with costs against plaintiff. The colours of the "Judæans," the Jewish Regiment, were deposited at the Great Synagogue, pending removal to Palestine. A new edition of Singer's Authorised Prayer Book was decided upon; of this liturgical classic over 100,000 copies have been sold.

Personal.

There were no less than 39 Jewish candidates at the General Election held in the spring, but only 14 survived the polls—nine Conservatives: Major J. B. Brunel-Cohen (Liverpool, Fairfield), Mr. Samuel Finburgh (Salford North), Sir Walter de Frece (Blackpool), Sir Frank Meyer, Bart. (Gt. Yarmouth), Capt. R. Gee, V.C. (Leicestershire, Bosworth), Major Isidore Salmon (Middlesex, Harrow), Mr. Arthur Michael Samuel (Surrey, Farnham), Mr. Samuel Samuel (Wandsworth, Putney) and Sir Philip Sassoon, Bart. (Hythe); three Liberals, Mr. Percy A. Harris (S.W. Bethnal Green), Major Leslie Hore-Belisha (Plymouth, Devonport), and the Rt. Hon. Sir Alfred Mond, Bart. (Carmarthen); and one Labour, Mr. Harry Day (Southwark Central). Sir Philip Sassoon was made Under-Secretary for Air, and Mr. A. M. Samuel Parliamentary Secretary to the Board of Trade in the new Government. Mr. Leon Simon, well known for his literary and educational work in the Zionist Movement, was made Assistant Secretary of the Post Office. Another ardent Zionist worker, Dr. Selig Brodetsky, was appointed Professor of Applied Mathematics at Leeds University. Three co-religionists were elected mayors in the Metropolitan area. Miss Petty Howitt, who assisted her father as Mayoress of Richmond, had the distinction of being the youngest mayoress in England. A number of Ministerial appointments were made during the year. The Rev. John S. Harris was appointed a Welfare Minister in the East End for the United Synagogue; the Rev. J. Rabbinowitz, of the Higher Broughton Synagogue, Manchester, was appointed to Dalston; the Rev. P. Fertleman, also of Manchester, to Finsbury Park, and Dr. A. E. Silverstone, a third Manchester "incumbent," was appointed Rabbi in Sunderland. Mr. Aron Stoutzker, of Amsterdam, succeeded the Rev. E. Spero as Reader of the Central Synagogue; and the Rev. David Wallach, of Utrecht, was appointed to the Wellington Road Synagogue. The Rev. W. Esterson, of the Hambro Synagogue, and the Rev. W. Stoloff, of Hampstead, both received presentations on completing 25 years in their respective posts. The Rev. J. F. Stern, who retired from the Stepney Borough Council, celebrated his 60th birthday, and that veteran philanthropist, Mr. Isaac Seligman, received many congratulations on his 80th birthday. Presentations were made to Mr. Henry Lhmith on his completion of 50 years in the service of the Jewish Board of Guardians, and to the Rev. Isaac Goldston, the newly-elected Reader of the New West End Synagogue, on his retirement from the headmastership of the Lower Chapman Street School. A like presentation was made to Mr. E. Norden, on his retirement from the headmastership of the Stepney Jewish Schools, where he was succeeded by Mr. J. L. Jacobs. Mr. Isidore Wartski was appointed to the "Achad Haam" lectureship in Hebrew at the London School of Oriental Studies. The Institute of Chemistry awarded the Meldola Medal to Dr. Leslie J. Harris, son of the Rev. John S. Harris. Mr. I. Statman was appointed Secretary of the Jews' Hospital and Orphan Asylum, where grave irregularities, on the part of the late secretary, Mr. D. Spero, were brought to light. Mr. Montague Burton, of Leeds, was made a Justice of the Peace. Reference has already been made to the princely benefactions of Mr. Bernhard Baron. Lord Bearsted also earned the gratitude of several charities for generous gifts during the year. Sir Herbert Samuel, after occupying the post of High Commissioner during five eventful years in Eretz Yisrael, retired, and was succeeded by Lord Plumer. Sir Herbert has since accepted the chairmanship of the Commission appointed to investigate the state of the coal industry. Lord Reading, who continues his brilliant service to the Empire as Viceroy of India, came home to confer with the Cabinet, thus creating a new precedent, special legislation having been found necessary to enable a Viceroy to be absent from India during his term of office. Major Isidore Salmon, C.B.E., M.P., was elected a Treasurer of the United Synagogue in succession to the late Mr. S. H. Emanuel, K.C., and was succeeded as chairman of the Building Committee by Sir Herbert Cohen, O.B.E.

Eretz Yisrael.

The past year was an eventful one for Eretz Yisrael. It saw a general improvement in the economic conditions of the country, permitting an increased Jewish immigration which rose to 4,000 in one month. Unemployment steadily declined to almost vanishing point, and a much more cheerful spirit prevailed throughout the whole of the Jewish settlements in Palestine. The solemn inauguration of the embryo Hebrew University in Jerusalem, in the presence of Lord Balfour and the representatives of the chief universities of the world caused Eretz Yisrael to loom large in the public eye. Lord Balfour was received with tremendous enthusiasm by the Jewish settlers. The Arabs proclaimed a strike as a sign of their continued dissatisfaction with the Balfour Declaration, but its author's tour of Palestine was marred by no untoward incident, though in Damascus he was the object of a threatening demonstration. The ceremony on Mount Scopus, over which Dr. Weizmann presided, was deeply impressive. Sir Herbert Samuel and Lord Balfour delivered notable addresses, the religious aspects of the function being solemnised by Rabbi Kook and the Chief Rabbi of the British Empire, who delivered the concluding address. At a luncheon in connection with the ceremony Lord Allenby delivered a notable speech, in which he said how much he had been encouraged in his campaign by Dr. Weizmann's optimism. The cause of higher education in Palestine was well served during the year. Sir Alfred Mond opened the Technical Institute in Haifa, which from its first year was placed under the experienced direction of Mr. Arthur Blok, of the English Patent Office. The Institute of Jewish Studies was also opened and the foundation stone laid of the Einstein Institute of Physics and Mathematics—both in connection with the University. The opening of the University attracted a number of distinguished visitors, and at other times during the year Palestine received Mr. Asquith (now Lord Oxford) and Baron Edmond de Rothschild, the father of the Jewish colonies. An official visit was paid by Mr. Amery, the Colonial Secretary. In receiving an Arab deputation he endeavoured to allay Arab fears as to the results of a Jewish majority, by scouting the possibility—either by way of prophecy or promise. This utterance was in strange contrast to Lord Balfour's address shortly before. Sir Gilbert Clayton, who had won golden opinions as Chief Secretary to the High Commissioner, retired and was succeeded by Colonel Symes, the Governor of Northern Palestine. Two notable ordinances were promulgated during the year, one laying down the conditions for the acquisition of Palestinian citizenship, and the other amending, and in some respects, considerably improving, the immigration regulations.

Palestine came somewhat prominently before the League of Nations during the year. Sir Herbert Samuel attended, on behalf of the Government, a meeting of the Mandates Commission and presented a report, being closely cross-examined as to the administration of the country. The Zionist Organisation prepared an elaborate memorandum for the information of the Commission, but by a breach of the somewhat obscure regulations governing the mode of approach it was not officially received. The Commission presented a somewhat curious report to the Assembly of the League containing some critical suggestions concerning the character of the Jewish immigrants' and Mr. Austen Chamberlain deemed it necessary when the report was brought up to correct the impression which it evidently sought to convey. The League Court of International Justice was occupied with the consideration of the claim for compensation submitted by the Greek Government on behalf of its national, a Mr. Mavromatis, who had been granted a concession for the supply of electricity to Jerusalem. This had been superseded by the Rutenberg concession. The Court held that there was no ground for compensation, but that Mr. Mavromatis should be given the right of exercising his concession if he so desired.

Dr. Weizmann continued his negotiations for the extension of the Jewish Agency, and at the second of two sessions of a "non-partisan" conference of leading American Jews convened by Mr. Louis Marshall, it was decided to participate in the Jewish Agency. The Zionist Congress held in August in Vienna passed resolutions affirming the proposed extension of the Agency under certain safeguards. The Congress, which was held under the threat of anti-Semitic disorders, was marked by severe criticism of Dr. Weizmann's leadership, and, in consequence of Congress passing only a minority vote of confidence in him, he and the entire Executive resigned. A further vote called upon Dr. Weizmann and Mr. Sokolow to remain at the head of the Organisation, and the Congress took the entirely unconstitutional course of leaving the formation of the Executive in their hands, a precedent that did not pass without strong protest.

The year saw the winding-up of the Jewish Territorial Organisation, at whose obsequies Mr. Zangwill delivered an eloquent appreciation. His colleagues, in turn, paid a generous tribute to his work for the cause.

Abroad.

The Jewish position in Eastern Europe remained gloomy in the extreme during the past year, with only here and there a rift in the clouds. One such was the conclusion of an agreement between the Polish Government, together with most of the political parties and representatives of the Jewish community, aiming at the termination of the bitter feud which made the lives of our Polish brethren a misery and gravely impaired the economic and political stability of the Republic. Mr. Lucien Wolf, who was invited to Poland by the Government, contributed towards this happy consummation. A series of ordinances affecting the cultural and religious rights of the Jews is to be passed by the Sejm, and the Jews have undertaken to support the Republic politically. The entente is so far only on paper, and it remains to be seen if the old spirit of hatred, which found its principal expression in economic boycott, can be eliminated by conferences or even by legislation. In Lithuania, which had begun its career as an independent State by remarkable goodwill towards the Jews, reaction set in and the last vestiges of Jewish autonomy were destroyed. The Ministry of Jewish Affairs was abolished, and Sunday closing legislation threatened the already precarious position of the Jewish traders. A wave of anti-Semitism also swept over Bulgaria, in spite of the benevolent attitude of the Government. In Roumania, where it was hoped that a new era had been inaugurated, Jew-hatred again held full sway and terrible pogroms were only averted by the proclamation of martial law. Hungary, too, was distinguished for the virulence of anti-Semitic activity, the application of the numerus clausus being one feature of the cultural persecution of our people. In Russia the suppression of Judaism proceeded apace, and it is to be feared that Jewish Communists took a leading part in the campaign. Every effort was made to suppress Hebrew, and Zionist activity was regarded as "counter-revolutionary." In Germany and Austria anti-Semitism also raged, and in the capitals of both States, as well as in other centres, Jews were subjected to physical violence. In Germany Jews started an organisation to be known as the "Red Magen David," a Jewish equivalent of the Red Cross. Thus deeds of mercy are the Jewish answer to hatred. In Holland the ancient Sephardic Synagogue of Amsterdam celebrated the two hundred and fiftieth anniversary of its establishment. In the Dominions Jewish life pursued a peaceful course, our co-religionists displaying a welcome tendency to take an ever-growing share in the burdens of world-Jewry and to draw nearer to "the old paths." In Australia, for example, drastic measures were proposed for dealing with the admission of proselytes and to check mixed marriages. In Egypt a Jew, Youssef Cattaui Pasha, was made a member of the Cabinet, first as Minister of Finance, and then as Minister of Ways and Communications.

Obituary.

The death roll of the past year was grievously heavy, both in point of numbers and the quality of those who were taken from us. The year saw the passing of Sir Isidore Spielman, lover of the arts; Nina Salaman, poetess and Hebraist; the Rev. Isidore Harris, until shortly before his death Senior Minister of the West London Synagogue of British Jews, distinguished as a preacher, a writer, and a communal worker; S. H. Emanuel, K.C., a brilliant advocate and an earnest servant of the community, a Treasurer of the United Synagogue, and one time Chairman of the Council of Jews' College; Albert M. Woolf, O.B.E., a Vice-president of the United Synagogue, who accompanied the Chief Rabbi on his memorable tour of the Dominions; the Right Hon. Edwin Montagu, formerly Secretary of State for India, and a son of the first Lord Swaythling; J. M. Ansell, a devoted worker for the Jewish Board of Guardians and the Home for Jewish Incurables; Sir David Lionel Salomons, a distinguished scientist; Samuel Levy, warden of the New Synagogue, Stamford Hill; Ascher L. Sims, warden of the Dalston Synagogue; Sir Edward E. Sassoon, one of the heads of the famous Anglo-Indian family; Mrs. A. Sebag-Montefiore, the gracious chatelaine of the former seat of Sir Moses Montefiore; J. Millhoff, a generous supporter of Jewish charities; Bernard de Bear, a noted figure in the sphere of commercial education; Angel Rosen, a devoted worker for the Federation of Synagogues and for East End institutions; Joshua Hands, who rendered useful service to the Home for Incurables and other charities; Arthur D. Lewis, a much esteemed Zionist worker, social writer and journalist; S. E. Samuel, associated for many years with the South Hackney Synagogue; Mrs. Bertha Jacobs, at one time headmistress of the Bayswater Jewish Schools; Miss Sarah Solomon, formerly headmistress of the Stepney Jewish Schools; Mrs. Sara Levy, beloved in the East End as the superintendent of the Sick Room Helps Society; Philip Gutmacher, beadle of the New Synagogue; Jose Kuby, a former warden and treasurer of the Richmond Synagogue; Wahlener Benscher, who served successively the Finsbury Park, Dalston, Hampstead, and Brondesbury Synagogues; Miss Millie Dove, the first matron of the Jewish Friendly Societies' Convalescent Home; Henry Wolff, an ardent supporter of the London Jewish Hospital; and Michael E. Lange, who, with his wife (nee Nita Bentwich), settled and worked on the land in Palestine. A large number of noted provincial communal workers passed away during the year. Of these may be noted Ellis K. Yates (Liverpool), Mendel Foner (Swansea), Rev. A. Schloss (Margate), David Rottersman (Newcastle), Lionel Spiers (Birmingham), Dr. Joseph Dulberg, J.P., and Jerome Jacobs (Manchester), H. N. Curlender (Liverpool), Mrs. Betsey Goodman (Leeds), Louis and Jacob Berwitz (Belfast), Ald. Moses Abrahams (Grimsby), Leo Joseph, J.P. (Cardiff), Rev. S. Manson (Leeds), L. H. Aronson (Bangor), Isaac Berliner (Bournemouth), J. Cohen (Leeds), Mrs. Celia de Meza (Manchester), Morris Hyman (Leeds). Among the distinguished Jews who passed away overseas may be recorded: E. M. Lillien, the famous artist; Dr. M. Scheinkin, a noted Zionist, who was killed in a tram accident in Chicago; Dr. Jacques Oppenheim, jurist, of the Hague; Alexander Brands, one of the defenders of Beilis in the famous blood-accusation trial, and librarian of the Leningrad National Library; Herman Heijermans, Dutch playwright and novelist; H. Louis Israels, a noted advocate in Amsterdam; Samuel Gompers, the famous American labour leader, President of the Federation of Labour of the United States; Rabbi Jacob Mase, of Moscow, a heroic defender of his people; Dr. David Neumark, Professor of Jewish Philosophy at the Hebrew Union College, Cincinnati, and author of several notable works; Leon Bakst, the famous theatrical designer; Ezekiel Joseph Gourgey Shemtob, of Bagdad, who left all his large fortune to the Keren Hayesod; Rabbi Isaac Bloch, Emeritus Chief Rabbi of Nancy; Rabbi Emanuel Weill, head of the French Sephardim and doyen of the French Rabbinate; Rabbi Abraham Danon, former director of the Rabbinical Seminary in Constantinople; Rabbi A. Van Loen, Chief Rabbi of the Hague; Gerald Levy, an earnest communal worker in New York, as he had previously been in London; and Professor Elijah Lattes, Orientalist of Milan. The year saw the passing, too, of the Hon. Mrs. A. E. Gordon, a sincere friend of our people, who furnished the funds required for sending an expedition to East Africa when the territory was offered to the Jewish people by the British Government. Mr. Godfrey C. Isaacs (brother of Lord Reading and head of the great Marconi enterprises) had left the Jewish faith before his demise.

The World's Most Popular Gramophone

IMPROVED—BUT LOWER IN PRICE

The NEW Columbia GRAFONOLA

Indisputably a Revolution in Gramophone TONE!

AN ingenious Automatic "Repeater" Device and Automatic Stop is a new refinement exclusively to be found in this season's high class models of the famous Columbia Grafonola—an advance that places these instruments still farther ahead of all other gramophones.

By this device, at the touch of a button, a record will play, without attention, two or three times in succession, and automatically stop at the conclusion.

In its operation, this invisible device is almost uncanny. Its action is fascinating to watch. Its performance is a certainty.

It is a refinement that gives added pleasure in the automatic repetition of favourite records, and for doubling or trebling the playing of records used for dancing.

It is part of the new regular equipment of all Columbia models from £35 upwards.

THE CALL OF THE PAST.

satisfied. So often and often I ran to his house. And when I grew up he brought me here."

"But that was no reason why you should have brought me here," cried Mendel, springing up, his eyes hot with anger.

"Hear me before you condemn," said the Father, his head hanging in the abjectness of contrition. "I was so lonely. You reminded me so much of a younger brother of mine. I had to do something to still the hunger gnawing at me here—here." And with clenched fist he smote his chest violently.

"I understand," said Mendel with a sigh which was almost a sob.

"You saw me weep when you sang to me the 'Vinesanneh Tokef,'" the Father went on softly. "I wept, not because of past memories, but because of my cowardice. I thought of the heroic Rabbi who composed that sublime prayer while being cruelly tortured to death—do you know the story? Alas, I am no Rabbi Amnon, who stood firm in the face of doom and death. No, I am a knock-kneed renegade, an apostate, and in my veins there runs not blood but water."

And here he suddenly sprang to his feet and a beatified joy suffused his face and made it beautiful.

"But something at least I can do that may be set down to the account of my atonement," he cried. "Yes, Mendel, you shall go free."

"Anshel, Anshel!" exclaimed Mendel, throwing his arms round the other's neck—not so much from gratitude, but from a keen desire to instil some comfort into that agonised heart.

"My brother, my brother!" whispered Anshel, pressing Mendel to him. And then he pushed Mendel away and assumed a very practical air. "It is too late now, but I shall come again to-morrow and then we must talk of this. It is in my mind to send you out into the world well equipped, so that you may have provision for your tender years and may need no man's charity. And now, sleep well, brother mine."

And he went in great haste.

It stands to reason that Mendel did not sleep well that night, and, indeed, it was bad sleeping for all who were in the monastery. Restlessly Mendel tossed on his couch. To tell the truth he was rather terrified by the thought of having to venture out again into the great noisy world. Living all those years in this quiet backwater of life his ears and nerves had become disused to tumult and multitudes.

Also another, and perhaps still greater fear possessed him. The first thing, of course, he would do would be to go to his mother. How would she receive him? What welcome would she extend to him after the slight, the pain he had inflicted upon her? Perhaps this uncertainty was but one form of the punishment that was to be his portion. For could there be a greater torment than to yearn for a well-loved object with all one's heart and might and at the same time to shrink from the attainment of it?

These problems were of sufficient intricacy in themselves to keep him awake. Presently, however, there came another factor which added to his sleeplessness. Through the keyhole, through the interstices of the door an acrid smell assailed him. The smell became more and more pungent. Gradually it assumed a tangible form in a kind of fog that crept into the room. The fog became denser. A feeling of malaise came over Mendel. He was just darting towards the door when it was pulled open from without and Father Anselm appeared, pale and dishevelled.

"Quick, Mendel," he said, "the place is on fire."

They made their hurried way through the corridor, filled with billowing clouds of smoke, into the open. In the courtyard stood the monks clustering round their prior, wringing their hands despairingly at the destruction of their home. Suddenly a dull murmur ran through their ranks, and then the cry leapt forth:

"The Grand Crucifix—the Grand Crucifix!"

The prior raised his hand, demanding and obtaining silence.

"Who will save the Grand Crucifix?" he shouted.

"I will," Father Anslem replied instantly, stepping forward.

"Anshel, Anshel!" cried Mendel, holding him back by the skirt.

One moment Anshel paused, stooped and kissed Mendel full on the mouth. Then he dashed forward into the roaring holocaust. They saw him disappear into what seemed the jaws of a red ravening monster. Almost in the same instant the roof crashed in, and a huge pillar of spluttering sparks shot up into the night sky.

The monks stood silent. Only Mendel sobbed. He knew more than the monks. He knew that Anshel had not gone to save the Grand Crucifix. He had gone to atone for his sin, and the soul of Rabbi Ammon had gone with him. God would know the right and wrong of it. And all at once the question rose to Mendel's mind: Would he ever be able to square his own account with God?

III.

The conflagration had settled down into charred and smouldering remnants, and the monks had all disappeared. Mendel alone was keeping vigil on the spot. He was not waiting for Anshel. Anshel had heard the call of the past and had followed it. Probably he would not even come back if he had the choice.

To Mendel, too, the past was calling; but perhaps it would be granted him to obey it at a lesser cost than that other one. If he remained here after everybody else had left it was partly an act of piety, a due of reverence to the friend whom, alas! he had discovered so late. But more especially it was because there might come to him some sign from this same friend, who was now all-wise, having penetrated the transcendent mysteries. Yet no such sign came, unless it was the rising of the sun, which brought to Mendel the call of the waking world.

So here he was back in the present. He must take action. He was now his own master; there was no one to say him yea or nay. He was free to come and go as he pleased. Therefore he would go.

Whither? He was at the mercy of the world. The provision Anshel had promised him he had had no time to make. He must fend for himself. As he walked towards the neighbouring town he considered that there he would probably find some co-religionists. As he had not yet reached the stage of acolyte, he fortunately still wore his ordinary clothes.

As soon as he met some passers-by he enquired the locality and situation of the place where he was. And he learnt, to his dismay, that it was many, many hundreds of miles from Ushansk. But he soon recovered his spirits as he remembered that he possessed a valuable asset which would earn for him all he needed—that glorious voice of his. He would first make his way to the chazan of the place.

When he got there he happened to find the choir assembled and practising.

"You have a good voice? Well, let us hear," said the chazan.

Mendel struck an attitude, opened his mouth, gave forth a sound—and the whole room burst into loud laughter. He tried again, and the laughter became louder. But the chazan seized a stick and made a threatening move towards Mendel, who turned and fled. And he heard the chazan calling after him opprobrious words, and asking furiously how a young jackanapes dared come and make mock of him.

Mendel had to admit that the man was right. He knew that when he had tried to sing he had only given out a cracked, wheezy noise like the croaking of a bullfrog. God in heaven, what had become of his voice? Poor Mendel, wholly ignorant of the climacterics of nature, did not know that he had reached the age when boys' voices usually break. The disturbing incidents of the previous night had perhaps accelerated that event.

And now, he had to own, he was indeed forlorn. How was he to get food, how was he to obtain the railway fare to Ushansk? That night he slept in a ditch, and his only meal consisted of two turnips which he had purloined from a field. And that day was but the precursor of many such days. Here and there he met with a little kindness, but it did not last long, and soon he was adrift again.

Drifting, drifting, all the time towards Ushansk. What a wearisome road it was! For all his foot-soreness and fatigue he seemed to be getting no nearer to his destination. Time and again, misguided by mischievous persons, he blundered in his direction, and went many miles out of his track. Months and months he spent in prisons, whither the police sent him as a homeless vagrant. Often he fought for offal with dogs in the streets. Sometimes he was lucky enough to earn a little money by rendering some menial service. His clothes were in rags. All during the summer he walked barefoot to save the wear of his shoes.

He lost count of time, but he knew that years must be passing, for he saw himself growing very tall. And it was as quite a manly young stripling that one blessed day he found himself entering the outskirts of Ushansk. He passed through the well-known streets, unrecognised, his heart beating faster and faster the nearer he approached his mother's house. How would he find her? What would she say to him—what was he to say to her?

Drawing a deep breath he stepped into the open passage, and turned the handle of the door on the right. He was confronted by a strange woman with a red, angry face, who snarled at him:

"What do you want?"

"Riffka—Moyshe Aaron's widow—where is she?" he stammered.

"Rifika?" replied the woman, softened somewhat by Mendel's distress. "Ask me where is yesternight's day. Gone—disappeared, like a stone into the water. She went from here a few months after that rascally son of hers ran away."

And that was the only information Mendel obtained from all others whom he asked. Slowly he passed through the town, till he came again to the open fields, and there he sat down and tried to weep out of him some of the anguish of his broken heart. Gone—disappeared! She was lost to him. He would never see her again. In her wrath she had taken herself away, leaving no trace, so that he might never find her. More than ever he realised the heinousness of his offence, the justice of his punishment.

And what now? Back again to the weary tramp, the endless pilgrimage. But somehow it did not seem so irksome to him now. His occupation was gone, he had no goal towards which to strive. It did not matter to him now if he dropped by the roadside like the carrion he so often came across. On, on, ever on—God, if he could only go far enough to escape from himself!

He avoided the towns, living on roots and scraps flung to him from friendly farms. But one summer's day he was seized by a mighty longing to hold again communion with his kind. There was something about the aspect of the town to which he came which pleased him. Since he could not make an end of life, he would at least make an end of this vagabondage. He might seek admission to some Talmud school, he might hire himself out as a water-carrier or scavenger. As he limped through one of the streets he suddenly saw a broad back walking in front of him—that is to say, a man with a broad back that looked strangely familiar to him. He hastened up, and the man turned on him a blank eye.

"Don't you know me, Torba?" quavered Mendel.

And then Torba gave a great shout, and flung himself upon him and clasped him in a bear's hug.

"Come quickly—Chayim is waiting for you," Torba said breathlessly.

"Waiting for me?" asked Mendel, drawing back. "What for?"

"Because he is just—oh, never mind! Chayim will tell you all about it. We are quite close. Here it is."

And catching Mendel by the hand, he dragged him into Chayim's presence. Chayim, less demonstrative, calmly took stock of Mendel.

"So he is back again, the good-for-nothing! Well, judging from his length by now sing, Mendel!"

With a despairing gesture Mendel pointed to his throat.

"Gone—gone!" he whispered.

"Gone, gone? Nothing's gone. I can see by the look of you. Don't you try to teach me my business, you ragamuffin!" said Chayim severely.

"Try, Mendel, try!" Torba urged him importunately.

And so, with a rueful smile, Mendel tried. Never was an attempt so brilliantly vindicated, never a forlorn hope turned into such signal victory. The notes came from Mendel, limpid, clear, heart-piercing—a marvellous tenor voice. Mendel had never before heard the story of the ugly duckling who turned into a swan, but if he had he would have known that he offered a splendid realisation of it in his own person. Chayim and Torba looked at each other in astonishment, and Mendel was more astonished than either of them. But Chayim did not give him time to express his feelings.

"Pack up—not that there seems much to pack—and come along at once," said Chayim.

"Where, where?" asked Mendel, utterly dumfounded.

"Haven't you told him?" Chayim asked irascibly of Torba.

"They have written to Chayim from America, and sent a whole lot of money, to come and conduct the services there over the High Holidays," Torba hastened to explain.

Mendel, of course, did not require much urging. He saw that the finger of destiny had guided him here. He had come into his own again. And, more than anything, he saw the practical nature of this adventure. How was he ever to find his mother in this immense land? A needle in a haystack. But if he went to America he would be well paid, he would come back with a big pocketful of dollars, and then he would be well prepared for the search.

Three weeks later Chayim, with Mendel and Torba, arrived in New York, where they were received with acclamation. Mendel was quite disconcerted when he was shown the huge hall which had been engaged for the services, but he tried his voice in it, and the echoes came in a mighty volume of sound from the most distant corners of it.

It was a fine advertisement for Chayim, and days before the holidays every seat had been taken. A choir was speedily formed. Everything promised well—and then Satan Mekatrig, the Accuser, the Malicious One, stepped in, and performed a more spiteful trick than he had ever accomplished in his long and successful career. The day before Rosh Hashanah Chayim woke up with a great soreness in his chest, hoarse as a crow. The doctors laboured unceasingly, but they were helpless. The illness would have to take its course. A deputy was found for Chayim, and the ticket-holders, though greatly disappointed, bore themselves with great restraint and tolerable good humour, for word had gone forth that Chayim would be well again to take his place on the Day of Atonement. And everybody resolved to recoup himself handsomely on that day for the treat of which they had been robbed.

And so it was. Two days before Yom Kipur Chayim was out and about again, busily rehearsing his choir. Marvellous tales had got about concerning this choir. It was said to include a tenor who was even more of a prodigy than Chayim himself.

Mendel took no notice of the high expectations he had aroused. He went about pensive and introspective, and not even Torba's jests were able to bring a smile to his lips. Mendel had indeed much food for reflection. This was the first White Fast when he was taking a public part in the service. But he deemed that he would not so much be facing the opinion of men as standing forward at the tribunal of God. His soul was weighed down by the burden of transgressions which lay upon it. Would he receive pardon for them?

A great hope rose within him that he would. Had he not been paying the penalty? He had been paying it with interest ever since the day when he had learnt that his mother was lost to him. Lost indeed! What prospect was there of ever finding her again, even with the vastest resources at his disposal. And God was just, and He would surely take this ordeal of despair and pain he had gone through these many days for part of his atonement. That ordeal had been a no less fiery furnace than that wherein Anshel had cleansed his soul. And that it might be given him to cleanse his own soul Mendel felt in the calm and consolation which had descended upon him, as if the hand of the Divine Dispenser had laid itself healingly on all his wounds.

The Kol Nidrei had come and gone. And now the congregation, rapt and thrilled to its inmost core, was already on the Mussaph Service. And the supreme moment of the day was at hand for Mendel. It was he who was to intone the "Unesanneh Tokef," to the wonderful melody his father had composed. He had hummed it to Chayim, and Chayim, enraptured with it, had insisted that Mendel must sing it as a solo, with the other choristers, and chiefly Torba's superb bass, giving to it colour and fullness by their undertones.

And now he was standing up before that myriad assembly, his heart almost bursting with the poignancy of the occasion. He remembered again how he had sung that melody to his mother, how he had sung it to Anshel, and by it had led him on to the road to salvation. And so he began. But he had got no further than the middle of the first verse when there rang through the hall a strange scream, a scream which hardly seemed human, which had in it a quality of unearthliness as though it came from another world. There was a commotion in the gallery. It appeared that some one was being carried out up there. There was an angry hushing of the disturbance, and soon the vast congregation was again wrapped in a trancelike silence.

Mendel himself had sung on, seemingly unconscious of it all, carried away by the fervour of his own inspired chanting, but into his voice there had come a glow, a resonance which made even the phlegmatic Chayim look round at him in wonder, and reduced the rumblingly sonorous hum of Torba's bass to utter quiescence. When Mendel ceased men forgot to breathe for some long seconds, and then, leaping, as it were, a big gap the service swept on in its tremendous devotional rush.

The Mussaph was concluded, and the choristers left their places to snatch a few mouthfuls of fresh air after their arduous exertions of so many hours. But Mendel remained where he was, his eyes glued on his prayer-book. He was eager to eke out to the full the joy and exaltation of this beautiful day. And so sitting he suddenly felt a touch on his shoulder, and he twitched impatiently. An attendant had come up, and said something to him which he did not catch. Good heavens, another of those agents and intermediaries, who these last few days had made efforts to lure him from his allegiance. Could they not even give him peace at his devotions?

The attendant was still talking to him.

"And she's behaving so queerly—laughing and crying all in one," he said.

Mendel sprang up. At these last words a secret chord had begun to vibrate in his heart, resounding deafeningly, a veiled presentiment obscured his vision. Oh, God, was it possible? With quick steps he followed the attendant, groping his way, as though blinded, in the broad daylight. And there, standing at the exit, he saw her, saw her and recognised her instantly, despite the furrows in her face, and the silvered streaks in her hair. There she stood; not moving towards him, her arms stretched out wide. In a moment he had come up to her, thrown himself at her feet, clasped her tottering knees. And then she stooped, also without a word, without a cry, and their lips met as if they would never separate again. Many people stood round them, watching, wondering, not knowing what to make of it.

At last Mendel led her into the vestibule, and there they sat down, holding each other close.

"My brother here sent for me soon after you went away," said Riffka, speaking as one in a dream.

"Yes, like a stone into the water," Mendel whispered back.

"If I had stayed there I should have died of my loneliness, my sufferings. Even here . . ."

"You suffered, mother? Will it be any comfort to you if I tell you that I suffered a hundredfold?"

"Would you still be cruel to me, my son? Do you think that your sufferings, had I known of them, would have relieved mine, would not have doubled them? But, hush, say no more about it. There is no suffering in the world, there never has been."

"I only speak of it to make sure that you forgive me."

"Forgive you, forgive you? Lord of the World, what does not a mother forgive her child?"

North London Synagogue.

OPENING OF NEW CLASSROOMS.

On Sunday, the "John I. Jacobs Memorial Hall" and Classrooms attached to the North London Synagogue were consecrated. The ceremony was attended in state by the Mayor of Islington (Councillor Sydney C. Harper, J.P., L.C.C.) and the Aldermen and Councillors of the borough, including the four Jewish Councillors, Major Henry Lyon, Mrs. Rosa Essex, Messrs. A. Levison and Louis Lewis.

Mr. ALFRED SOLOMONS, Warden, in declaring the building open, said that all those who had worked for its erection had been actuated with the desire to promote the best interests of Jewish religious education and the development of the social welfare of the Jews of the district.

The consecration service was conducted by the Revs. Walter Levin and A. Slavinsky, assisted by a choir.

The Chief Rabbi's Address.

The CHIEF RABBI OF THE BRITISH EMPIRE delivered an address. He said that it was a gratifying circumstance that during the past week six Jewish houses of worship had been consecrated. In every one of these ceremonies he had been invited to take part. But great as was his joy in consecrating a new synagogue, his pleasure was even greater when he was asked to consecrate a school-house. In Judaism the school was regarded in many respects more highly than the synagogue. The school was the vestibule, the only door that led to the synagogue. It taught the men and women of to-morrow the everlasting truths which the synagogue had brought down to them through the ages. The school was the life-insurance of any community. Without a religious school the synagogue would end with the lifetime of the adult men and women that worshipped there. The synagogue was the great expression of the religious feeling of the past in the present. The school made it possible for that institution to have a future; it epitomised the great eternal truths of which the synagogue was the everlasting witness. Some of the highest of those truths were contained in the ideas of the Seliehoth triology of Repentance, Prayer, and Charity. Addressing the children, he said that they were fortunate in having the great texts of religion and morality which they would learn in those classes illustrated for them by lives. That school was associated with the name of one who strove to lead a life of beneficence, of love towards his fellow-men. That evening they would be holding a service in memory of Albert Woolf, a man whose entire life had been devoted to helping others, to the defence of the name of Israel and the glorification of the name of God. He knew that, as far as lay in human power, their Minister and his assistants would do what they could to make that school fulfil the noble ideals that were set before every Jewish school. The Chief Rabbi concluded by offering up the following prayer:

Sovereign of the Universe, look down from Thy holy habitation, and in mercy and favour accept the prayer and supplication of Thy children, who are assembled here to consecrate these new classrooms and this Memorial Hall to Thy service. We meditate upon Thy loving kindness and truth and bless Thy holy Name, who hast kept us in life, sustained us and enabled us to witness this day שהחינו וקימנו והגיענו לזמן הזה. We dedicate this house unto Thee as a well-spring of Jewish instruction and a rallying-ground for Israel's sons and daughters dwelling under the shadow of this Tabernacle. May it be Thy gracious will that here they may feel the thrill of Thy truth and Thy love. Here may they be taught the wondrous beauties of Thy law. Here may they be strengthened in their allegiance to their Faith and in their knowledge of holiness and righteousness. Within these walls may those things be instilled into them that shall equip them with hope, faith and fortitude for life's struggles and temptations. Rock of Israel, grant Thy blessing of light, life and health to the religious guide of this congregation and unto all who aid and assist him in the sacred task of religious instruction and religious inspiration to young and old. We also call to mind at this hour Thy loyal and faithful servant John I. Jacobs—no longer in the land of the living, whose memory this hall is to perpetuate. Oh, shelter him in the shadow of thy wings and grant him Thy recompense for all his meritorious deeds on earth. As for those who are still with us, bless with thy comprehensive blessing all those who busy themselves in faithfulness with the needs of the religion classes of this congregation. Inscribe them, and all Israel, in the Book of Life for a year of tranquillity and blessing, a year of prosperity and honour. Bless the civic authorities of this borough; bless our beloved country, and spread over all Thy children everywhere, the tabernacle of Thy peace.

Mr. Charles Living, jnr., architect of the building, presented Mr. Solomons with a gold key as a souvenir of the occasion.

Mr. SOLOMONS, in acknowledging the gift, testified to Mr. Living's skill and the very pleasant relations which had subsisted between him and the Board of Management. He proceeded to give an account of the movement which had led to the erection of the classrooms, a project which had been in their minds for many years. Two years ago Mr. Hyam Barnett had placed the matter on the agenda of the annual meeting. Fortunately a piece of ground at the rear of the synagogue had been left vacant for the whole fifty-seven years of the existence of the synagogue. Sir Adolph Tuck had given them a large contribution towards starting the fund. Although they had been told that it would be impossible to collect more than £500 locally, the actual sum which they had collected was over £1,118. (Cheers.) The various classrooms had been named by individual donors. The first room had been named by Lady Tuck in memory of her parents, William and Julie Flatau. As her daughter had laid the foundation-stone, three generations were thus associated with that building. Other rooms had been named in memory of Arthur Kauffmann, a pupil of the classes, by his parents; Martin Van Straaten, a generous benefactor of the synagogue and a victim of the Lusitania disaster; the parents of Mr. Silverman, one of the treasurers of the fund; Isaac Phillips by his sons; and in memory of his own younger son. Another room had been named by the old pupils. The main hall had been named by Mr. J. H. Jacobs, in memory of his brother. The kitchen equipment had been contributed by the Ladies' Association, the library by Mr. and Mrs. Gottfried, pictures by Mr. and Mrs. Epstein, electroliers by Mr. and Mrs. Lang and Mr. and Mrs. Hobart, and chairs by Messrs. Glass and Barnett. The present pupils had presented a headmaster's desk. He also acknowledged the work in collecting funds of the Rev. Walter and Mrs. Levin and Mr. and Mrs. David Van Praagh. He expressed the gratitude of the Board of Management for the presence of the Chief Rabbi, the Mayor and Councillors of Islington, and the Rev. Morris Joseph, the first Minister of the synagogue. In conclusion he announced that Miss Rose Jacobs had given £100 towards the equipment of the classes.

The Institute of Jewish Studies.

MEETING OF GOVERNING COUNCIL.

[COMMUNICATED.]

The third Conference of the Governing Council of the Institute of Jewish Studies in connection with the Jerusalem Hebrew University was held at Basle on the 2nd inst. There were present: The Chief Rabbi of the British Empire (Chairman of the Council), Dr. A. Büchler and Mr. N. Sokolow, representing the London Committee; Mr. D. Yellin, Dr. J. L. Magnes, and Professor H. Pick, representing the Jerusalem Committee; Chief Rabbi Dr. I. Lévi and Dr. Liber, representing the Paris Committee; Rabbi Dr. L. Baeck, Dr. Martin Buber, Professor I. Elbogen, Professor A. Freimann, and Professor I. Horovitz, representing the German Committee; and Judge Julian Mack, representing the American Committee. There were also present Professor Dr. S. Klein, of the professorial staff of the Institute, by special invitation, and Mr. L. Kohn, Secretary of the Governing Council.

The Conference considered the report of the sub-committee appointed at the preceding Conference to define the character and scope of the Institute. A definition adopted by the Conference of July, 1924, had described it as an Institute of higher research destined to promote the knowledge of Judaism in the broadest sense of that term. This definition was further elaborated by the present Conference. The aim of the Institute shall be to promote the knowledge of Judaism by the work of an élite of teachers and scholars. Its object shall not be to impart secondary education to a large number of students, but rather to promote scholarly effort and to train research workers. It shall, on the one hand, enable Jewish scholars to pursue work of research and to publish their results, and, on the other hand, to train younger men in the methods of higher research. The curriculum of the Institute will include both lectures and research classes. Admission to both will be restricted to a select number of students, who, in addition to possessing a sufficient knowledge of Hebrew and Jewish literature, must have passed at least a matriculation or an equivalent examination. Exceptionally, Palestinian students may be admitted after passing a special examination held by the Board of Professors. Provision is made in a small measure for University extension lectures on Jewish subjects suitable for a popular audience, but these will not be allowed to interfere with the principal work of the Institute.

As the aim of the Institute is to train scholars, and not to impart professional education, it will not confer degrees upon the students. Certificates in regard to the research studies executed under the supervision of the professors by the more advanced students may be granted. These studies, if suitable, will be published in the "Publications" of the Institute; and the Board of Professors will be at liberty to charge these students with the conduct of courses at the Institute for any period not exceeding one year.

The subject matter of the Institute's teaching and research work comprises the whole range of Jewish studies in the broadest sense of the term. In establishing new chairs the Governing Council will be guided in the first place by the availability of scholars of first rank. It will, in other words, not proceed on the basis of a hard and fast programme, but will extend the scope of the Institute in accordance with the availability of scholars to fill these professorships.

The Institute will enjoy complete autonomy within the University in the matter of the establishment of chairs, the appointment of professors, and the fixing of the Budget. The direction of the Institute will remain vested exclusively in the Governing Council until the teaching staff is sufficiently strong to form a faculty.

After having adopted the above principles the Governing Council proceeded to consider the appointments and calls sanctioned by the preceding Conference. In the the case of several of those invited the negotiations had not yet been completed. The programme of work for the coming year will be published only when these negotiations have been concluded.

The Governing Council further considered the establishment of the section for Biblical studies. It was resolved to appoint a sub-committee to review the whole question and collect materials for the next conference of the Governing Council. The following were appointed on the sub-committee: Professor Dr. Büchler, London (Chairman), Professor Dr. Perles, Königsberg, Professor Dr. Chajes, Vienna, Dr. Isidor Lévi, Paris, Professor Dr. M. Margolis, Philadelphia, and Professor Dr. S. Klein, Jerusalem. A further sub-committee consisting of Messrs. David Yellin, C. N. Bialik, Professor I. N. Epstein, E. Lipschutz, and Dr. I. Loew, was appointed to examine and report on the establishment of the branch of Hebraic studies.

The Rev. MORRIS JOSEPH proposed a vote of thanks to the Chief Rabbi. He paid a tribute to the great work which Dr. Hertz was doing day in and day out for the highest good of Anglo-Jewry. He recalled his own early association with the North London Synagogue, and said that the early history of the synagogue had been far from peaceful.

Mr. F. D. BENJAMIN seconded the vote, which the Chief Rabbi briefly acknowledged.

Major ISIDORE SALMON, C.B.E., M.P., proposed a vote of thanks to the Mayor and Councillors. He recalled the fact that he had begun his own public life as representative of West Islington on the L.C.C.

Dayan Dr. FELDMAN, in seconding the vote, said that while they could hold out no hope that that building would make any contribution to the rates, it would help to raise the rate of social progress in the borough.

The MAYOR, who was received with loud cheers, said that he and his colleagues regarded it as a great privilege to have been permitted to be present, and if they had only heard the eloquent address of the Chief Rabbi they would have been more than rewarded for coming. Several of them had been present at the jubilee celebrations of the synagogue and had been greatly impressed on that occasion. They greatly appreciated what the Congregation was doing to train good citizens.

The Rev. W. LEVIN presented Mr. Living with a gold pendant as a mark of appreciation of his services as architect.

Mr. LIVING, in reply, said that the builder and his workmen had shown a fine spirit in hastening the work. The whole of the original flooring had been destroyed by fire, and had had to be replaced at short notice.

American and European Contrasts.

The Work of the American Jewish Congress and Young People's Associations.

BY IRMA KRAFT.

American Jewry may be young, but none can deny us initiative. We may make the mistakes of youth, but none can deny us courage. We may make many false steps on the path of progress, but none can deny that we do blazon a path. We may be replete with faults; the vivid searing faults of a vivid, dazzling people; nevertheless, American Jewry is alive, urgent, tense with serious ambition.

Where in Europe does one find such organisations as the Young Men's and the Young Women's Hebrew Organisations of the United States? Where in Europe does one find so brilliant, so farseeing, so earnest a group of people as the American Jewish Congress? These two great movements alone are sufficient to place American Jewry on a plane entirely superior and unusual!

We may have the conceit accruing from isolation. Cæsar and Alexander and Napoleon did not blush to be accused of conceit. In the realisation of the "ego" Socrates found much to praise and much that was worthy. And it is in the might of this conceit, perhaps, that young American Jewry finds its greatest stimulus to achieve!

One can roam the cities of Europe in vain for such organisations as a Young Men's Hebrew Association. There may be clubs of young people who meet for pleasure or for study. But where in all Europe does one find associations assembled for the purposes of pleasure, progress, the assimilation of education?

I have been travelling Europe for the past five years. In almost every city I have sought a central meeting place for the Jews—places where young and old Jews should meet to discuss events of Judaism—of world interest, buildings devoted to social study or halls for all sorts of interesting meetings. I have found dance clubs, or places for social affairs, with small adjunctive rooms for lectures or conferences. But where in all Europe does one find the handsome, monster buildings which constitute the great "Y.S." of America?

Magnificent buildings contain facilities for every form of culture; pleasure, amusements, courses of study, dance halls, swimming pools, theatres, cafés, debating societies, newspapers being published, public forums, educational films, tennis tournaments, or basket ball matches. In all of Europe there is no place comparable to the "Y" in Philadelphia which has a membership list of over twenty-thousand, and which cannot accommodate the applicants for admission.

And these "Y.S." are in constant use. They are not show places for the casual visitor. They are component parts of the daily lives of American Jewish young people. On their stages young dramatists find opportunity for expression; in their lecture halls great lecturers tell of travel; in their classes young men and women find adequate preparation for a trade or a profession.

This solidarity of young people interested in a better expression of themselves cannot fail to elevate the race in general. Educators look upon these associations as important assets in the formation of public opinion. Political debates wax heated in the open forums; and the clean, fine spirit of young Judaism finds its clean, fine space under the sun!

In addition, every Synagogue, whether Orthodox or Reform, has its own Social Service Organisation. And many Special Organisations for all forms of Jewish culture are intertwined in their activities to become a vital part of everyday life.

Undoubtedly with this intertwining of the Synagogue into the daily life should come the greater power and growth of the Synagogue itself. When the young Jew finds his needs catered for; his love of study, drama, debate, of association with the more cultured people of the faith tended to, subconsciously there enters into the inner corners of his spirit a deeper pride in Judaism itself. Compared with the Young People's Associations of Europe, the monster affairs of America are Brobdingnagian; as giants to pygmies, as tolerant, secure supermen to the frail, yet undeveloped children of the Old World. Jewish leaders in America have seen that the future of the race lies in the sinews of the young; that the potency of future leaders lies in the seething aspirations of ambitious students.

One of the noblest of the older Associations is the American Jewish Congress. In its halls and at its Conferences world problems of the Jew are handled, considered, adjusted. The American Jewish Congress with its long list of prominent Jews, is like an elder brother smiling benignly down on the younger Associations. In its conferences every form of European persecution is weighed and considered, and measures taken for its adjustment. The situation of the Jew, the world over, is discussed and contemplated. The position of the Jew is clarified by world students, leaders in the world of Jewish thought. The horrors of the Ku-Klux-Klan, racial prejudice, and efforts to curtail the freedom of the Jew are bitterly opposed. Appropriations are made for the assistance of emigrants in far-off ports and countries. Problems of immigration, legalisation and alien occupation are considered by a fine, thoughtful, unselfish body of highly educated men from many callings and professions.

Rabbis elucidate at these Congresses the needs of Judaism; immigration experts tell of new problems, representatives of Welfare Organisations tell of the rate of Jewish progress. Here in all its clarity is the ever flaming problem of the Jew; his education, his present and his future! Here the helping hand is extended. . . the sympathetic attention concentred on perplexities, needs and difficulties. . . . in every land. . . everywhere!

All honour to the young, the middle aged, and the older Jew who finds himself in any or all of these Organisations animated by a nobility of purpose; a simplicity of heart, and a vision broad enough to see the endless horizon of the Jew to-day!

European Jewry's Distress.

"Hias" President's Report.

[From our Correspondent.] NEW YORK.

Mr. John L. Bernstein, President of the Hebrew Sheltering and Immigrant Aid Society of America ("Hias,") has just returned from Europe, where he has been making a study of conditions in France, Germany, Poland, Latvia, Danzig, and other countries. He paints a sad picture of Jewish conditions in Europe, particularly in Poland and Lithuania. "In Poland," he says, "the poverty of the Jew beggars description. The economic crisis particularly affects Jewish industries and commerce for various reasons. Business is at a standstill and unemployment is very great. The earnings of those who are fortunate enough to be employed are exceedingly small, whilst the prices of commodities are higher than in America. It is very rare to come across a Warsaw Jew whose clothes are whole or who has not a pair of patched shoes. Jews are going in tatters and misery is indelibly impressed upon every face. They all have a look of desolation and of starvation."

Mr. Bernstein said that he was unable at this time to tell all the plans that have been made for relieving the refugees, and which were discussed at conferences with Mr. Louis Marshall, President of the American Jewish Committee and Chairman of the Refugees Emergency Aid Committee, Dr. Stephen S. Wise, President of the American Jewish Congress, and Vice-Chairman of the Emergency Committee, the leaders of the Ica, and representatives of the United Jewish Emigration Committee. These plans must first be ratified by the Directors of the Emergency Committee and other participating organisations.

The St. James Protestant Episcopal Church in Long Branch has been saved from being sold at auction by the action of a Jew, Mr. Ernest Levy. The church was about to be sold because it lacked the sum of 650 dollars for taxes. Mr. Levy paid the required sum, and subsequently a number of other persons collected a fund of 3,000 dollars for the church.

Jewish Immigration to America.

One-Fifth of Last Year's Figure.

The number of Jewish immigrants to the United States during the quota year of June, 1924, to June, 1925, was one-fifth of that of the previous year, according to statistics of the Bureau of Immigration of the United States Department of Labour.

According to the statistics of the Labour Department, in the quota year 1924, 49,989 Jews were admitted. For the quota year 1925, 10,292 immigrants and 2,945 non-immigrant Jews entered, making a total of 13,237. During the year 1924, 260 Jews emigrated from the United States, and during the year 1925, 291 emigrated and 846 non-immigrants left the country. This makes the total increase in the Jewish population of the United States 12,100 for the fiscal year 1925.

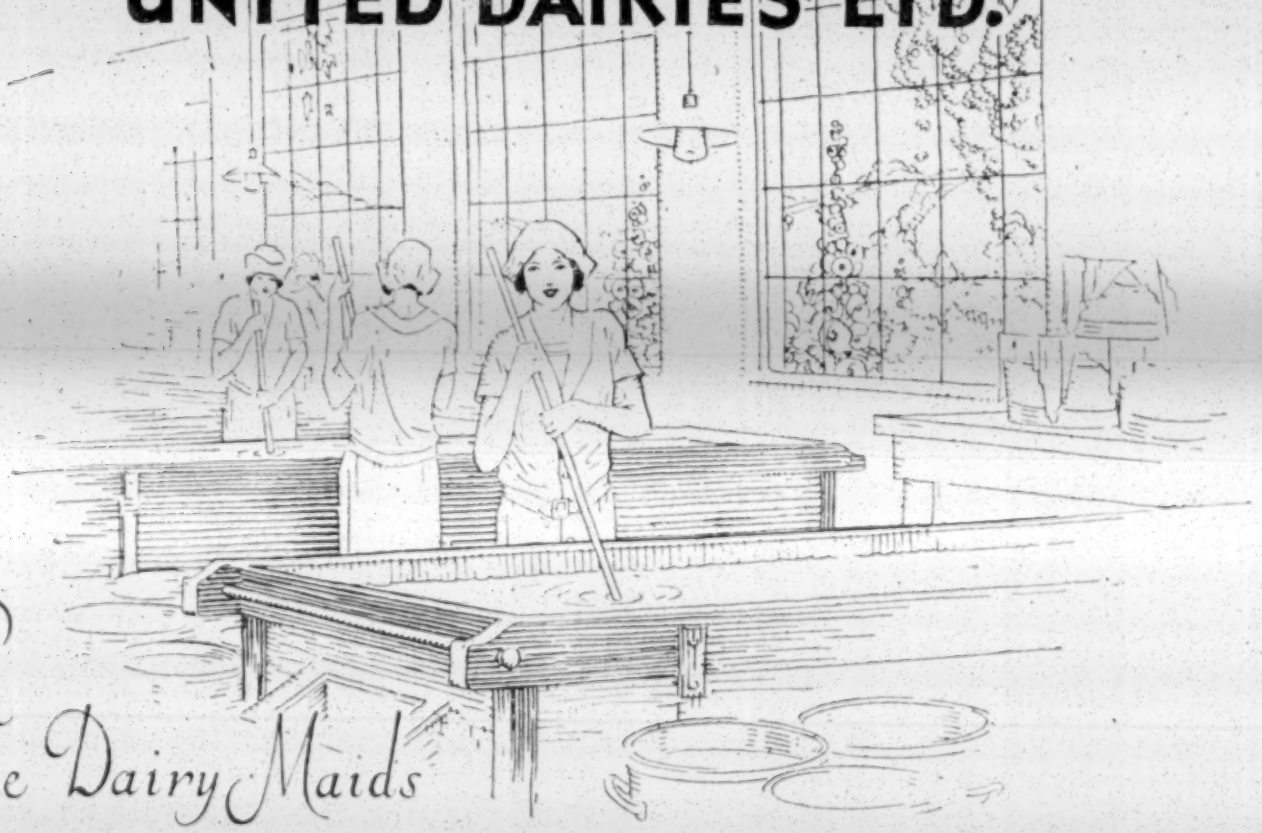
COUNTRY MILK FOR LONDON TOWN

PASTORAL SCENES IN THE WORK OF UNITED DAIRIES LTD.



No 3

The Dairy Maids

SHE may be a whole-time worker, a graduate of Reading or some other famous dairy college, in which event she is a young woman with a headful of science under her pretty mob-cap.

Or she might be a part-time cheese-maid, a farmer's daughter who works at home most-whiles but is happy to come to the United Dairies' local milk-depot when required and turn her practical hands to cheese-making, which, as a true farmer's lass, she knows from A to Z.

• • • • •

This arrangement of whole-time and part-time working fits in very well with a seemingly perverse order of things by which there is milk to spare for cheese-making some weeks and none at all others—a perverseness for which the weather's vagaries and London's varying demand for liquid milk are jointly responsible.

• • • • •

The cheese-maids develop a comely sturdiness. To keep 700 gallons of milk and rennet astir for an hour or more as the curd slowly forms in the vat; to cut up that curd into tiny pieces with a sort of knife-rake and keep it on the move; to lift out the spongy, new-formed cheese (in masses looking just like white-folded blankets), and get it away to the cheese presses, is work that calls for strong arms—and a woman's patience.

• • • • •

Meanwhile, the more scientific cheese-maid in charge of the process is busy at a side-table carrying out tests for this and that with queer instruments, some of which are woefully scientific to look at, though one, at least, is most homely. Without using technical words it may be described as a little appliance for toasting a bit of cheese and then seeing how far it will stretch. And this, mark you, is one of the most delicate known tests for acidity—a matter on which the goodness of a cheese very largely depends.

• • • • •

In a dozen English counties United Dairies Ltd. are making every year many thousands of tons of cheese—Cheshire Cheese, Cheddar Cheese, Stilton Cheese, crustless cheese, cream cheese, and all the famous British cheeses. And capital cheese it is. But they make it only as one part of a vast co-ordinated scheme for assuring that day in, day out, dry weather, wet weather, winter, summer, London may get fresh country milk to the fullest extent of her need.

Six hundred shops and dairies in the London district supply United Dairies milk
—the pure, rich milk of the English country-side, in freshest condition.
And from these centres may also be ordered U.D. cheese, the making of which is a parallel industry,

An examination of the figures of the Bureau of Immigration shows that the Jewish immigration has adjusted itself to the new quota law. The number of East European Jews who entered the country has shrunk to a very low figure, and the majority of Jews who entered, came, most probably, from Western Europe. According to the figures, 4,857 immigrants were born in Poland. Of these 3,178 are Poles. This makes the maximum of Jews who entered from Poland 679. Of the 2,943 immigrants entering the country from Russia, 1,225 are Russian by race. The greatest possible number of Jews from Russia would therefore be 818. During the fiscal year 1925, 1,137 Jews were debarred as compared with 1,754 in 1924.

New York Governor's New Year Message.

Jews an Asset to America.

Mr. Alfred E. Smith, Governor of New York State, has issued the following Rosh Hashana message to Jews:

The sacredness of the Jewish New Year has impressed me from my boyhood days on the East Side of New York. I still recall the patriarchs and their families spending the day in the crowded synagogues offering up earnest prayers to Almighty God. These early experiences impressed me with the fact that the Jewish New Year is no day of vulgar celebration, but of solemn thought about how one's life in the past year has measured up in the judgment of the Maker of us all.

A people like the Jews, to whom religion is the bread of daily life, is an asset to any country in which they live. If I ventured to give any New Year's message it would be to the younger generation of Jews, some of whom sometimes forget that what made their people great in history was their religion. By adhering to its principles they become better Americans. The separation of Church and State is an American principle in which I profoundly believe, but I do not believe in the separation of our faith from our daily lives.

Unfortunately, there are some, happily a minority in our fair land, who are intolerant of races and religions other than their own. They think that is American. On the contrary, it is most un-American and unpatriotic. In wishing my Jewish fellow-citizens of the State of New York a good New Year, I join with them in prayer that Almighty God will help them strengthen the time-honoured American principles of toleration and religious freedom.

Jewish Colonisation in Russia.

Fifteen Million Dollar Campaign Endorsed.

A national conference was held by the Joint Distribution Committee at Philadelphia on Sunday to consider the renewal of relief activity in Europe generally, and the question of Jewish Colonisation in Russia in particular. A resolution was adopted endorsing the fifteen million dollar campaign, the money to be spent in aiding industrial and agricultural settlement in Russia, medical assistance, care of war orphans, support of refugees, help for artizans and tradesmen, and in assisting cultural institutions generally.

The question of Palestine and the effect which the fifteen million dollar drive may have on the Keren Hayesod in America was discussed, and the following resolution was passed: "The conference regards it as self-evident that American Jewry whenever called upon is prepared generously to support the work of Jewish resettlement in Palestine. It is persuaded that through the Jewish Agency and other instruments, the Jews of America will always give adequately and generously of their strength and substance to the performance of this great historic task."

The Russian colonisation scheme, submitted by the leaders of the Joint Distribution Committee, led to a heated discussion, in which Dr. Stephen S. Wise, Mr. Louis Marshall, Mr. Jacob Fishman, Mr. Jacob de Haas, and others participated. All the speakers expressed themselves in favour of a renewal of constructive relief work in Eastern Europe, but a number of them criticised the Russian colonisation plan. Dr. Wise characterised the scheme as dangerous to the well-being of the Jewish population in Russia, in view of the unsettled condition of the country and the unfriendly attitude of the peasants. Mr. Jacob de Haas warned the conference to be careful about taking such a step, as the possibilities of pogroms against the Jews in Russia were not excluded should there be a change of régime. The chance of conflict with the neighbouring peasants was also not to be overlooked.

Mr. Louis Marshall, replying to the opponents of the scheme, who expressed fear that the new campaign would unfavourably affect the endeavours of American Jewry to support the rebuilding of Palestine, said that Dr. Weizmann, whom he had met in Geneva, had in a conversation with him expressed his approval of the "Joint's" scheme. The supposition that the campaign of the Joint Distribution Committee would conflict with the work carried on in the United States by the Zionist Organisation was baseless. Not only would the Joint Distribution Committee's drive not interfere in any way with the Zionist work in the United States, it would in the long run help. "We are also going to help the Jews of Palestine," he said. Further, Mr. Marshall, on his own behalf and on behalf of his friends re-affirmed their determination to carry out the plan for the extension of the Jewish Agency by the participation of the American non-partisan leaders, as had previously been arranged with Dr. Weizmann.

Mr. Joseph Barondess, Vice-President of the American Jewish Congress, suggested the appointment of a special committee to consider the problem and prepare a resolution which would unite the whole of American Jewry on the question of relief activity. His suggestion was agreed to, and a Committee, consisting of Messrs. Felix M. Warburg, Louis Marshall, Rabbi Dr. Stephen S. Wise, James N. Rosenberg, David A. Brown, Jacob Fishman, Maurice Samuel, Carl Sherman, Nathan Straus, Herbert Lehman, Jacob de Haas, and Joseph Barondess, was elected. While the Conference continued the debate, the Committee met and drafted a resolution which the Conference passed by a big majority.

Mr. Julius Rosenwald, the well-known Chicago philanthropist, announced that he was prepared to give one million dollars to the fund as soon as the first nine millions were subscribed, and subject to the condition that his contribution should be devoted to relief activity in Russia. Mr. Rosenwald said that he believed in a local solution of the problems confronting Russian Jewry, but not in assisting emigration, and for that reason he had withheld support for the work in Palestine.

American Orthodox Rabbis' Opposition.

Opposition to the scheme of Jewish colonisation in Russia was expressed at the Assembly of Orthodox Rabbis of the United States and Canada which is holding its annual session at Lackawaxen, Pa. There are ninety Rabbis attending.

After a short discussion, the following resolution, moved by Rabbi Glazer of New York, and supported by Rabbi Z. W. Margolis of New York, was unanimously adopted:

"It is the opinion of this Convention that the Assembly of Orthodox Rabbis of the United States and Canada shall participate in every relief work which may be organised for our oppressed brethren, together with other Jewish organisations. However, when it comes to efforts aimed at settling Jews on the land, this Convention stands for Palestine alone and will in no sense recognise any other appeal to the generosity of American Israel; this Convention furthermore believes that it is dangerous to trust the present de facto powers in certain parts of the world which recognised colonisation of Jews outside of Palestine."

More American Opposition.

A joint meeting of the Administrative Committees of the American Zionist Organisation and the American Jewish Congress was held in New York last Friday. The question of Jewish colonisation in Russia and the Ukraine was thoroughly discussed, and a resolution was passed to the effect that the Russian colonisation scheme, as at present outlined by the Joint Distribution Committee, be opposed. It was decided, however, that both organisations should give their utmost support to the renewed relief activity on behalf of European Jewry.

A special committee, consisting of Dr. Abraham Kotalnik, Dr. A. Rongy, and Mr. Karl Sherman, has been appointed by the Administrative Committee of the American Jewish Congress to study, in conjunction with experts, the problem of Jewish colonisation in Russia.

German "Knights of the Fiery Cross."

New Anti-Semitic Organisation.

[From our Correspondent.] BERLIN.

A new militant anti-Semitic organisation, styled "The Knights of the Fiery Cross," has been discovered in Berlin. It is run more or less on the lines of the American "Ku-Klux-Klan," and three Americans are said to be at the head of it. The suggestion has also been made that Mr. Henry Ford is, directly or indirectly, concerned in the movement. Eighteen Knights have been arrested, and although they declare that the organisation deliberately rejects methods of violence, the statutes of the "Fiery Cross" contain passages that can only be interpreted as direct incitement to murder. For instance, the oath taken by members includes a promise "to take up the struggle with all the means at my disposal against the enemies of my Germanic Fatherland, especially against the hereditary foe, the Jews, the French, and their supporters, the black, yellow, and other coloured races. Further, I swear to despise my enemies and hate them with deadly hatred. Their insidious gold shall not blind my eyes, but I will destroy their possessions, and avoid them like putrefying carrion. If, as a miserable wretch I betray the aims of the Order to anyone, I will take upon myself the most horrible tortures. All my bones shall be broken, my eyes shall be put out, my body shall be cut up, torn in fragments, and thrown to the crows as their proper food."

Among the papers seized by the police were photographs of the ceremony of the swearing-in of members. All present at these gatherings were robed to the feet in white, their features being concealed by cowls. Full lists of the members were also discovered. They contain about a thousand names. The Berlin membership was about 350. All the younger members belonged also to one or the other of the old militaristic and anti-Semitic organisations.

The police made their first discovery while searching for the nineteen years-old son of an official, who disappeared some weeks ago, and has not since been heard of. Whether any foreigners have already been killed is not yet known. Many of the members were found armed with pistols, revolvers, life preservers, and other weapons.

The Polish-Jewish Understanding.

Dr. Reich's Visit to America.

[From our Correspondent.] WARSAW.

At a recent meeting of the Jewish Parliamentary Party the question of the Polish-Jewish understanding was discussed. The representatives of the Mizrachi, the Orthodox Jews, and the Jewish Labour Party criticised Dr. Reich, the Chairman of the Party, in regard to the failure of the Government to give effect to the terms of the understanding. They maintained that the anti-Jewish policy of the Cabinet was still being pursued, and demanded that during his visit to America Dr. Reich should not refer to the Polish-Jewish understanding.

In his reply, Dr. Reich said that he had had that week satisfactory interviews with the Premier and the Minister of Education, who had assured him that the Government would fulfil its promises to the Jews, and that in the near future the numerus clausus circulars would be abolished and new decrees promulgated meeting the demands of the Jews on the problem of trading in Government monopoly articles and on the question of the Jewish Communities Law. Dr. Reich added that during his stay in America he did not intend to agitate in favour of the Polish-Jewish understanding, but merely to state the facts of the case dispassionately.

In connection with the approaching High Festivals, the Orthodox

Gas Fires are Beautiful

The gas fire is a decorative asset in any room to-day if chosen to harmonise with its surroundings, and there are many artistic designs from which to select. Burning silently, and ventilating perfectly, the gas fire gives you immediate and readily controllable heat, lasting only as long as you desire and leaving no ashes.

Rabbis of Poland have issued a manifesto prohibiting women wearing "immodest dresses" from entering the synagogues.

A conference of Polish Rabbis and Tsadickim will be held in Warsaw in November. A number of foreign Rabbis are also expected to attend.

The Polish Government has declined to allow the "Maccabi" football team from Tel-Aviv to enter Poland.

Mexican Immigration.

Stringent Policy to be Adopted.

According to statements made by the Secretariat of the Interior in Mexico, no "open-door" immigration policy is to be carried into effect by the Mexican Government.

Intending colonists will need more than a statement of intention to gain admission to the country, and foreign consuls and immigration authorities have been so instructed. The immigrant into Mexico must prove his complete solvency, his good health, and his good faith, before being allowed to enter. Only skilled workers with facilities for carrying on their work will be allowed to enter the country without any difficulties.

The action of the Mexican Government is due, it is officially stated, to a sudden and undesirable wave of immigrants. Many of the newcomers, especially from Czecho-Slovakia, were found to be entirely without money or came to spread undesirable propaganda.

Roumanian Anti-Semitic Conference.

Professor Cuza's Political Ambitions.

[From a Correspondent.] BUCHAREST.

A conference of Roumanian anti-Semites was held last week at Tecuci. At a public meeting held in connection with the conference, Professor Cuza, the leader of the anti-Semitic students' organisation, said that he hoped shortly to gain political leadership, when he would immediately dissolve the Chamber and the Senate and govern the country by means of special decrees. One of his first acts would be "to clear the Jews out of the country," especially those Jews who had come to Roumania since 1914. He would exclude all Jews from the army and would restrict their activities in certain professions.

An anti-Jewish demonstration was arranged after the meeting and a number of Jews were attacked and severely injured.

During his stay in Kishineff, the King of Roumania paid a visit to the Great Synagogue, where he was welcomed by Chief Rabbi Deputy Zirelsohn, who delivered a sermon. Special prayers for the King were offered during the service.

Hungarian Tzadick Arrested.

Charge of Forgery.

[From our Correspondent.] BUDAPEST.

A great sensation has been caused in Hungary by the arrest of the aged Tsadick of Olsaszliszka on a charge of being associated with his sons in manufacturing false bank notes. The aged Tsadick was brought to Debreczin, and during the examination in his cell he was seized with a heart attack. The authorities went so far as to open the grave of the Tsadick's famous grandfather, who died fifty years ago, and to search it for hidden treasures. The action of the police has produced a painful impression in the town.

Rabbi Herbert J. Samuel.

Appointment to Montreal Congregation.

The Rev. Herbert J. Samuel, of the Congregation Shaarey Zedek, Winnipeg, Canada, has been appointed Rabbi of Temple Emanuel, Montreal, in succession to Rabbi Max J. Merritt, who has been called to the pulpit of Temple Beth Israel, Portland, Oregon. Rabbi Samuel has been in Winnipeg since March, 1914, having been previously, since 1906, Minister of the Swansea Hebrew Congregation, South Wales. He will take up his new post in time for the High Holy Days.

A New Accumulator.

Russian Professor's Invention.

Professor Joffe, a member of the Russian Academy of Science, has invented an accumulator which is said to have solved the problem of the maximum condensation of electrical energy. The new accumulator, although so small that it can be carried in the waistcoat pocket, contains, it is reported, sufficient electrical energy to run the biggest motor-car for ten days without the accumulator having to be changed.

Dutch Queen's Birthday Honours.

Knighthood for a Chief Rabbi.

[From our Correspondent.] AMSTERDAM.

The names of a number of coreligionists figure in the Queen's Birthday Honours List, not the least interesting being that of Rabbi Salomon Heertjes, Chief Rabbi of the province of North Brabant and Limburg, who has been created a Knight of the Order of Orange-Nassau. Mr. B. Prins of Dinxperlo, a well-known public worker, has been similarly honoured. The following co-religionists were created officers in the above Order: Mr. I. Israels, painter, Dr. J. Mendes da Costa, sculptor, and Mr. S. J. W. Van Buuren, social worker, of Amsterdam. Mr. J. I. de Casseres and Miss A. Van Esso has been awarded the silver and bronze medals respectively of the Order.

Federation of Ukrainian Jews.

New Year Appeal.

[COMMUNICATED.]

As a result of the Relief Conference held last week at the Cannon Street Hotel, an intensive campaign for the raising of funds to help the suffering Jews in the Ukraine has been launched by the Federation. An urgent call has been made to every congregation in the United Kingdom to participate in this work. All Presidents and Wardens are asked to carry out a personal canvass among their members during the High Festivals. A special appeal has been made to the ministers to devote part of their sermons to the need of Ukrainian Jewry, and to help towards the success of the campaign. The appeal has been endorsed by the following special message to the community from the Chief Rabbi of the British Empire: "The need for help in the Ukraine is still very urgent, and I hope and trust that the response of Anglo-Jewry will be commensurate with that need." Messages in support of the appeal have also been received from Rabbi Sir Hermann Gollancz, Mr. Israel Zangwill, Dr. D. Jochelman, and Haham Dr. M. Gaster.

Mr. S. Jacobi, a member of the Council, has left for the provinces to visit the congregations and organise the campaign locally.

A number of booklets, pamphlets, slips, etc., have been issued in conjunction with this effort, and will be sent gratis, together with the recent report of activities of the Federation, on application to Mr. A. M. Kaizer, Secretary, 26a, Soho Square, W.1.

Famine in Bessarabia.

The Federation has received further information from the "O.Z.E." in Berlin with regard to the famine now spreading in consequence of the bad harvest, in the towns and the colonies in Bessarabia. The information at present relates only to nineteen towns, containing in all 20,880 Jewish families comprising 98,775 souls. Out of this number, 6,980 families, or 35 per cent., are already affected by the famine. Epidemic diseases are rampant and increasing from day to day, and medical assistance is urgently needed.

Irish Free State.

Dublin.

The new synagogue of the United Hebrew Congregation was consecrated by Rabbi Dr. I. Herzog, M.A., D.Litt. The ceremony was attended by a large congregation. Mr. Morris Ellis was presented with a gold key. The service consisted of psalms chanted by the Chazan, the Rev. M. Rosenfield, and a choir led by Mr. L. Brill. There was an orchestral accompaniment directed by Mr. Jack Rubinstein, of the Gaiety Theatre, Dublin. After a prayer for the Royal Family and the Irish Free State had been read by the Rev. B. Jaffy, Rabbi Herzog delivered a sermon. Subsequently, a reception was held. Mr. Joseph Zlotover presided.

Mr. Morris Ellis, who was presented with a gold key similar to that with which he opened the synagogue, proposed the toast of the Irish Free State; Mr. J. Elyan, P.C., the trustees and committee; Mr. W. Baigel, the clergy; Mr. A. Zolkie, the Architect; Mr. H. A. Newman, the Ladies' Committee (to which Mrs. G. S. Wigoder responded); the Rev. Mr. Roith and Mr. L. Epstein, the Choir and Choirmaster. A vote of thanks to the Chairman was accorded, on the motion of Mr. A. I. Newman, P.C.

Lace curtains washed with Sunlight Soap last many times longer

Many women have given up lace curtains, because, although they like them, they have not solved the problem of washing them. If fine lace curtains are boiled they soon fall to pieces. If they are rubbed and twisted they lose their shape; threads break off and unsightly gaps add their ugliness to a sagging line.

The right way to wash curtains is the easy Sunlight way—a gentle steeping in water, then an all-over soaping, followed by further steeping in warm water, then rinsing, squeezing out the water without wringing or twisting, and lastly, a slow drying, followed by ironing with an iron not too hot. Remember there is very little ground-in dirt in curtains. It is mostly loose dust or sticky smuts. Long steeping in Sunlight lather is all that is necessary to remove dirt of this kind.

Lace curtains washed the Sunlight way will last a lifetime and will always look white and shapely.

Women are often judged by the curtains in their windows. Be sure that your curtains are a standing testimonial.

To keep the shape of curtains after washing, hang them with an equal length on each side of the line.

Sunlight Soap is used all over the world

Some Zionist Congress Recollections.

UNDER AMERICAN DIRECTION.

BY IDA SEIGLER.

To quote the words of a popular American advertisement, "This is America's century." In Art, in Music, in the Sciences, in the Drama, in all those things that have been driven by Europe's deflated currency to seek their recompense in more profitable fields, America has begun to take the lead. America provides the setting and undertakes the stage-management of all those who seek the limelight for their activities. It has become the fashion to be stage-managed by America, and we Jews are nothing if not fashionable.

Now take our Zionist Congress, that great biennial event, looked forward to by the travelling business-man, the Zionist honeymooners and the ladies who need an excuse to take the cure at Central European watering-places, not to mention the budding politician and the "Lefts" who attend the Congress "to let off steam." Up to August 18th last, thirteen of these gatherings had been held. Under the inspiration of the idealism, the optimism, the dignity and the poetry that distinquished Herzl, the gatherings were marked by an impressive beauty, that lent force and distinction to all Congress pronouncements. Delegates and visitors alike, went to their respective homes, inspired by what they had heard and seen, and were strengthened in their desire to continue to work for the great ideal. True, there were rumours that the Thirteenth Congress already began to show the strain of keeping up with the traditional dignity of traditional procedure. I cannot vouch for the veracity of the rumours, as I was not present at that particular gathering. But that the Fourteenth Congress made several definite steps away from traditional procedure, was evident even to the most casual observer.

But then the Fourteenth Congress was consisting of forty-three delegates. Forty-three sounds like a formidable number, but most of these among the number were mere ciphers. Here and there one saw a personality, grown familiar in the realms of American Zionism, such as Stephen Wise (who remained only three days), Rabbi Abba Hillel Silver (of whom only a few favoured individuals were permitted to catch a fleeting glimpse, ere he too, disappeared from Vienna), Henrietta Szold (who stands as the symbol of Women's great achievement in Palestine), Louis Lipsky, who watched all the proceedings very carefully and who seems to have become the prop and mainstay of the World Zionist Organization, Morris Rothenberg, and Judge Bernard Rosenblatt.

By no means least among the well-known figures of the American delegation, was Mr. "Abe" Goldberg, who did his best to give the impression that he was the whole Zionist Executive, combined with the Palestine Administration and the Colonial Office! While he may not wholly have succeeded in creating the desired impression, he certainly succeeded in making the delegates from Europe feel that he was the whole American delegation to the Congress, the American Zionist Executive, and "The Voice of the Jewish People of America" all rolled into one. All those poor, benighted delegates who had come to the Congress not knowing of "Abe" Goldberg's existence, went away very much enlightened, for it was "Abe" Goldberg who was responsible for most of the stage-management of the Congress. While he does not possess great height, being at the utmost five feet five, he is a prolific speaker. He speaks German in the jargon, he speaks English like a Russian, and he speaks Hebrew with a mixture of accents and pronunciations that makes it sound like a new language. But the main thing is that he speaks, he speaks, he speaks—on any and every occasion. He might be called the impresario of the Congress. Obviously, he set the tune to which the others danced.

Besides the few well-known Zionists, the rest of the American delegation consisted of "just people" who, very likely, were "doing Europe" in the fashion made memorable by Americans. It was a constantly shifting delegation, constantly changing its make-up. Its members were coming and going, or rather, I should say, that they were going and coming, since its full quota of forty-three was never minimised. New faces replaced each other with startling rapidity, as newcomers were taken into the group to replace those who had left, and were initiated into the mysteries of "voting with the party." At the height of the tourist season, there is no dearth of obliging Americans to be found in Europe. Thus, the American delegation never suffered the arithmetical disadvantage of two minus one leaving one. Its numerical strength was as unbreakable as its obedience to discipline was unshakeable.

Personally, I have no quarrel with the American delegation. On the contrary, being a Canadian I feel very "neighbourly" towards all Americans. And I must admit that I admire them for "walking off" as they did with the Fourteenth Zionist Congress. For after all is said and done, forty-three is not such a large "fraction" in three hundred and fifty, the number of delegates actually present at the Congress. True, it was the largest single fraction there, but it lacked both the hirsute picturesqueness, that distinguished the Polish delegation, and the loud-voiced vociferousness that proclaimed the right of the "Lefts" to a place in the sun. Nevertheless, it stage-managed the Congress in accordance with what was evidently a well-arranged programme. It was, too, a triumph of discipline, that little body of forty-three. The American people, accustomed to being "legislated" into everything concerning both their private and their public life, respond to "efficient" leadership, and we must give the American Zionists the credit of possessing an efficient machine.

The most remarkable fact is not that the American delegation worked as a coherent, well-disciplined body, though that in itself is remarkable enough for any Jewish group, but rather that it was able to impress its will upon the rest of the Congress delegation, which consisted of as many diversified shades of opinion as there were groups. That it was able to achieve this triumph without appearing to do so is but another proof of

THE EFFICIENCY OF THE AMERICAN MACHINE.

True, the American delegates were everywhere. They were distributed among all the special committees, mainly as presiding officers. They held numerous meetings of their own, meetings which were graced by the presence of prominent members of the Executive, who came especially to "explain" to the Americans all those intricacies of Congress procedure that might puzzle the simple American mind. And, lastly, the Americans carried off all the special prizes, among which must be mentioned the clause in the resolutions regarding the Jewish Agency, which states that 40 per cent. of the membership of the Jewish Agency must be American.

Surely the great joke of the Congress lies in the fact that practically all the resolutions were placed before the gathering and adopted in the last 24 hours of the Congress sittings—some of the most important ones between the hours of midnight and six a.m., when the last Hatikvah was sung and the weary delegates dispersed, and the Fourteenth Congress wrote finis to its deliberations. Naturally, during these last hectic moments, no debate and no deliberation can be allowed. Most of the delegates are too tired to care to find out what they are voting for, the "machine" drives triumphantly through its pre-arranged programme, committees are elected, budgets are adopted, new puzzles are undertaken, while old problems are left unsolved, and, all the while, the hardy ones drink stimulating draughts of black coffee and their weaker brethren snore unashamedly through the grey hours preceding the dawn. Thus is the real business of the Congress transacted.

Having stage-managed the Fourteenth Congress to their hearts' content, we do not expect that the American machine will now be content to rest on its laurels. The heads of the American delegation are not that sort. Their present success will, in all likelihood, stimulate their ambition. Possessing 40 per cent. of the membership in the Jewish Agency, their sense of power will be greater than ever. That they will exploit it to the utmost is absolutely obvious. I am no prophet, and yet I do not hesitate to prophesy that the Fifteenth Congress will be "Made in America."

BY A LOOKER-ON.

Whether it was a good Congress or a bad Congress depends on the point of view. Those who regard the Congress as an entertainment certainly had their money's worth, and it was big money that the visitors had to pay for the privilege of seeing how the cleverest people in the world can mismanage a great gathering. The thousands of visitors who thronged the Concert House at every sitting seemed thoroughly to enjoy the spectacle and applauded impartially. They cheered Dr. Weizmann whenever the tip of his beard showed round the wings; they hailed Jabotinsky when, with grim intensity and sonorous phrase, he exposed the political weaknesses of the Zionist situation; they roared with glee when Robert Stricker, with bitingest acerbity read the funerailles of the Actions Committee; they rose at Sokolow as, in classical Hebrew, with unending parentheses, he said little at great length; they crowed over Ben Gurion's tight-lipped denunciation of the "give-away" of the Congress. And they enjoyed the long intervals as much as the long sessions. There were attractions in the lobbies as well as in the hall. Half bazaar, half exhibition, with a restaurant and a buffet thrown in; so one could spend a pleasant time wandering up and down looking, buying, exchanging pleasantries with Nationalist "flappers." These youngsters showed great powers of endurance. They sat out the latest sessions. Even when their mothers and fathers gave in, and retired to their flats in the Leopoldstadt, these enthusiastic sons and daughters would refuse to budge, such was the fascination of Congress oratory and the clash of personalities.

The Congress building was flooded with Ordner, sturdy young stewards, who examined tickets at every door and every stairway, patiently tolerant of the exasperation which their fidelity to duty sometimes caused. There were a few plums among the Ordner's duties. A specially coveted task was to wander round the building and spray disinfectant. Another was to supply the tribune with mineral water, a job that required great deftness, for waving arms and gesticulating hands often spelt an aqueous catastrophe. There was subtlety in it, too. A boring speaker would find his supplies of refreshment withdrawn. If he was dry he would be subjected to drought, and he dried up.

"HEBREW AND YIDDISH BILLINGSGATE."

It was internally an orderly Congress on the whole. Occasionally there would be a recrudescence of the old feuds between the Socialists and the Mizrachists, with Hebrew and Yiddish Billingsgate hurtling across the heads of the buffer-state Centre. Of the two sections, the Rabbis were the more explosive. One old gentleman with white whiskers comes to mind. Something had happened to cause him grave concern, and he shouted unintelligible protests at the platform, and bounced out of the hall. A further idea occurred to him, and he bounced back again. This jack-in-the-box method of denunciation gave great delight to the gallery.

There were moments of great intensity when the air was highly charged with electricity. The vote on the tactically absurd "Absolutorium," the resignation of the Executive, the vote on the "way-out" formula, Jabotinsky's speech, Weizmann's reply—these were some of the thrills of the Congress.

The proceedings threw up one or two memorable phrases. Perhaps the most delightful was Arlosoroff's description of Dr. Soskin's scheme of intensive cultivation as "a cosmic tomato philosophy and vegetable politics." Weizmann's suggestion that the Churchill memorandum might be converted from a White Book to a Blue-White Book was neat, if improbable. The "fourth Aliyah" was a pre-Congress coinage, but it was on everyone's lips.

The brunt of the chairmanship was borne, as usual, by Mr. Motzkin, who knows the standing orders by heart and is popular and respected. When he was absent the train went off the rails. The worst Chairman was Rabbi Meir Berlin, who used his hammer like an apoplectic auctioneer and called "Order!" with the staccato regularity of the multiplication table. Mr. Kaplan was more successful because he belongs to the Left, who had to support him—there was no such obligation in the case of the Mizrachi Rabbi.

The only English delegate who was articulate was Dr. Brodetsky, who was quite a success as Chairman of the Organisation Committee, and whose German was, at least, intelligible, which was more than could be said for that of Mr. Israel Cohen, who occasionally was called upon to translate the English speeches and resolutions. Some unkind delegates called for a German translation of his German! Mr. Finburgh, M.P., was obviously impressed with the Congress, which in private conversation he compared in point of personnel with the House of Commons to the disadvantage of the latter. Mr. Burton did not appear. The Rev. J. K. Goldbloom, Mr. Bentwich and Mr. Sacher did not speak.

"SIDE-SHOWS" OF THE CONGRESS.

Some of the "side-shows" of the Congress were impressive. The gymnastic display was superb. The Palestine exhibition in the Congress building attracted thousands of visitors, the pictorial section being highly appreciated. Palestine is obviously to be the home of bright colours. Abel Pam had an exhibition of his own at the "Secession" gallery, a fortress-like building in the heart of Vienna. Another exhibition was one arranged by the "Maor" publishing company, of Paris, who are producing a monumental pictorial work on Palestine which, from the exhibits shown, promises to be a marvel of the printer's art. It is to be published in English, German and Hebrew and will be completed by the end of the year. The Judischer Verlag and R. Löwit, of Vienna, had book displays which also attracted much attention, while individual Jewish artists showed their sculpture and paintings at odd corners of the building.

The "riots" were treated with strange unconcern by the delegates and visitors, who viewed the array of police with amusement and read the anti-Semitic placards with contempt.

At the Congress are gathered all types of the Jewish people, intellectuals and materialists, Communists and bourgeois, parvenus and idealists, politicians and patricians. It is a great joy to meet old friends, divided ordinarily by seas and frontiers, but united in common devotion to a great cause. The cafés resounded to a cosmopolitan exchange of confidences, and often a Congress in petto would be held over cups of café melange. Only one restaurant took its courage in both hands and, in defiance of Hakenkreuzler, played Hebrew music and even Hatikvah, the non-Jewish guests being somewhat startled as the Zionists present stood at attention. This café had had a window smashed on the eve of the Congress!

The Congress did not end; it fizzled out! The last session was a farce. A wearisome wrangle over unimportant things dragged the proceedings out till long past dawn. The appointment of the Executive had been placed in Commission, Weizmann had left, all spirits were depressed, all bodies physically exhausted. Mr. Sokolow had been absent till the last few moments, but even he, fresher than the rest, failed to arouse enthusiasm, and the final Hatikvah lacked spontaneity and verve. It was a dirge rather than a soul-stirring anthem!

Two hours later the trains started bearing delegates homewards, and the Concert House was being dismantled.

Mr. Jean Fischer on the Zionist Situation.

THE POLITICAL POSITION.

In a recent issue we reported very briefly the speech of Mr. Jean Fischer, President of the Belgian Zionist Federation. He spoke during the political debate on August 21st, and said that he belonged to no party, and therefore felt that he was speaking to the whole Congress. Continuing, he said he had not risen to depreciate the merits of the Executive, but in his Zionist work he had a small heritage, a precious heritage, which he represented. He advocated the creation of a "reserve fund," not merely in connection with the bank, the National Fund, etc., but also a reserve fund in Zionist policy. He recorded with pleasure the fact that that Congress was gradually drawing nearer to political Zionism, and that political Zionism was coming more and more to the front. That was proved by Mr. Sokolow's article (in the WIENER MORGENZEITUNG) entitled "Back to Herzl." It was proved also by passages in the opening speech of Dr. Weizmann. Their policy must really be directed in this sense. The Twelfth Congress had been very impatient because he had spoken of political Zionism. At the present Congress there were very many Zionists with much more radical demands. He welcomed the change with satisfaction, but regretted that the change had been brought about by certain failures. He did not belong to the defenders of the Weizmann policy, but it was not right that people should attack Weizmann for his policy who were responsible for that policy, and had approved every step. When there was time to influence that policy in a different direction these gentlemen had not done this; to assail Weizmann now was not fair. He (the speaker) was to-day not the most radical present; Jabotinsky was there, who had rendered good services to the Zionist cause, especially in connection with the Legion. If, however, Mr. Jabotinsky appeared as prosecuting counsel against the Executive he was not justified, because as a member of the then Executive he shared the responsibility for the acceptance of the Churchill Memorandum. What was to happen now? The Congress should declare that the Executive had accepted the Churchill Memorandum under duress, and that the Congress could not accept responsibility, and did not regard itself as bound by that decision. The Executive might find this way out acceptable. They would not affront the Mandatory Power, and would demand no withdrawal, but would provide the Government with an opportunity for a more favourable declaration and the restoration of the rights accorded in the Mandate. The opening of the University was being exploited as a political success; if it was so it was merely in an Achad Ha'am sense. But the Balfour Declaration was a political success in the Herzl sense. The British Government obviously preferred the Achad Ha'am line to any other. Since 1918 Zionist policy had been governed by Dr. Weizmann's formula "We create facts." There was no objection to the creating of facts, but facts were not the same as deeds. Deeds had more value than facts, and the policy of facts was the policy of the old "Chalutz" Rothschild, and they all knew that they had not agreed to that policy. Facts also had their negative side. Of that they had had many painful examples, among them the Churchill Memorandum and the appointment of Lord Plumer. These were facts which proved that they had no solid ground beneath their feet. It was said that all this was done in order that they might live at peace with the Arabs. That was the desire of everybody, but they did not go to Palestine in order to benefit the country, they went to Palestine because it was the one land in the world to which they had a right. Zionism denoted the complete recognition of this right, which they would in no circumstances abandon. Otherwise they might just as well remain in the Galuth. The English people would doubtless recognise their standpoint, and all right thinking people in the world would approve it. At the last Congress he had demanded that the question of the Jewish Agency should be removed from the Agenda, but negotiations had proceeded. To-day it was not possible to repudiate these negotiations, which had been conducted on the authority of the Congress, and to declare that they would have nothing to do with the Agency. He agreed with all the arguments against it, but there was one argument which overruled them. They were unfortunately really too weak to solve the economic problem in Palestine unaided. But he warned them against any provisional character of the Agency. It would merely carry the germ of annihilation within it. They must not show any lack of confidence in the Jews whom they approached, but must meet them with confidence and strengthen their confidence in them. The organisation needed reconstruction. The Group system must be entirely altered. Otherwise they would have at the Congresses only a Right and a Left. The real Zionists, declared Mr. Fischer, in conclusion, were to be found in the Centre and not in the two wings, because the two wings represented other interests which they often placed above those of Zionism, which were made secondary. Their work in Palestine also needed thorough overhauling. Enthusiasm was all very well, but they must work sensibly in a systematic way.

Great Britain and an Arab Confederation.

"SPECIAL OBLIGATIONS" TO JEWS IN PALESTINE.

[From our Correspondent.] GENEVA.

In connection with the rumours that Great Britain is championing the Arab claim for a Confederation of Arab States, as a reward for the Arab support of the British attitude on the Mosul question, Lord Cecil of Chelwood has informed Dr. V. Jacobson, the Zionist representative here, that he knows nothing of any Confederation plan.

Mr. Amery has assured a number of Press representatives that Great Britain cannot make any decision in favour of a Confederation of Arab States without the consent of France. As regards Palestine, Britain has special obligations there to the Jews, which it is bound to fulfil; and consequently that country must be treated separately in considering such a Confederation.

The Palestine Loan.

COMMISSION APPOINTED.

The Actions Committee has appointed the Palestine Loan Commission. The members are Dr. Ruppin, Senator Dr. Ringel, Mr. Nauditch, Dr. Halpern, Dr. Barth, Mr. Arlosoroff, and Dr. Jacobson. Dr. Ruppin is being proposed for the chairmanship. The Commission is to be formally constituted at a meeting to be held shortly in Paris.

Jewish National Fund.

CHANGES IN DIRECTORATE.

An important change has been effected in the Directorate of the Jewish National Fund. Professor Otto Warburg and Dr. Adolph Boehm, both agricultural experts, who were previously on the Directorate, have been replaced by two party representatives, Mr. Berl Katznelson, of the Palestine Labour Party, and Rabbi Meyer Berlin, of the Mizrachi.

AGUDATH YISRAEL MANIFESTO.

[From our Correspondent.] WARSAW.

A painful sensation has been caused in Poland by the issue on the part of the Agudath Yisrael, of a manifesto, signed by a number of orthodox rabbis including the famous Geyer Tsadick, appealing to the Rabbis not to support the campaign in aid of the Jewish National Fund. The manifesto was issued in connection with the arrival in Warsaw of a number of Palestinian delegates to assist in the National Fund campaign.

Zionist Split in Austria.

RESIGNATION OF EXECUTIVE.

The Executive Committee of the Austrian Zionist Organisation has tendered its resignation, pointing out that it is unable to carry on the affairs of the Organisation any further, in view of the differences of opinion between it and the majority of the Zionists in Austria, who are in favour of the Weizmann administration and, in general, of the policy of the present leaders of the Movement.

It has been decided to convoke an extraordinary conference of the Austrian Zionists in the middle of October to elect a new Executive and to consider ways and means of reorganising the Organisation, which has been disrupted on account of the differences of opinion between the Executive and the members of the Organisation.

Professor Rappard.

HONOURED BY AMERICAN ZIONISTS.

The Administrative Committee of the American Zionist Organisation gave a luncheon last Friday in honour of Professor Rappard, member of the Permanent Mandates Commission of the League of Nations, on the eve of his departure from America for Europe. Dr. Weizmann and Mr. Louis Lipsky cabled greetings to Professor Rappard, expressing thanks for his support of Zionism.

Soviet Government and the Congress.

REPORT SENT TO MOSCOW.

It is reported that the Soviet Embassy in Vienna closely watched the proceedings of the Zionist Congress through a number of observers. Not only did they attend the public meetings of the Congress, but also the conferences of the various organisations and parties, especially the deliberations of the Russian Zionists. A complete report of the Congress, containing the texts of the resolutions which were passed protesting against the persecution of Zionists in Russia, and a list of the Russian Zionists assembled in Vienna, is said to have been sent to Moscow.

American-Palestine Line's Failure.

The American-Palestine Line, formed about a year ago to establish a direct shipping line between the United States and Palestine, has failed to meet its financial obligations, and the affairs of the Company are now in the hands of a receiver. It will be recalled that the Company's first steamer, the "President Arthur," made a number of voyages between New York and Haifa.

The Druse Rebellion.

PALESTINE FRONTIER GUARDED.

The growing rebellion of the Djebel Druses has led the Palestine Government to take steps to guard the northern frontier of Palestine against possible penetration by the Druses. British aeroplanes are closely watching the frontier district of Metullah, where the northernmost Jewish colony in Palestine and twenty-six Arab villages are situated.

The Government has announced its intention of arming the inhabitants of Metullah and the district.

Jerusalem University Library.

[COMMUNICATED.]

The Jewish National and Hebrew University Library has recently received a request with which unfortunately it could not comply. The Blind Institute of Jerusalem has asked for books in Brail type. The Budget of the Library does not provide funds for buying books, so that they could not be acquired through the usual channels. The Council of the Library appeals to the many friends of the blind the world over, to send them Brail books so that the blind in Jerusalem may have the solace of reading. These should be forwarded to the Hebrew University Library, Jerusalem, Palestine.

The statistics of the Library on the first of Ellul show that the volumes catalogued number 100,241.

A Palestine Tour.

GERMAN FIRM'S ENTERPRISE.

A twenty-six-days' trip to Palestine is being arranged by the Reederei Viktor Schuppe, Dorotheenstrasse 30, Berlin, N.W.7, in the luxurious steamer, "Peer Gynt," which, it will be remembered, made the same voyage in the spring of this year. The vessel will leave Genoa on October 29th, and the passengers will proceed viâ Messina, Athens, Constantinople, Haifa, and Bethlehem to Jerusalem, making the return journey by way of Nazareth, Port Said, Cairo, Memphis, Naples, Pompeii, and Capri. The arrangements provide for 350 passengers, and in all cases first-class accommodation is provided. The fare, inclusive of full board, is from 1,250 marks upwards.

Land of Israel News in Brief.

MR. ALBERT M. HYAMSON, Controller of the Permits Section of the Palestine Secretariat, has been appointed Chief Immigration Officer. A new order entitles the District Commissioner and Assistant District Commissioner of the Jerusalem and Southern District and of the Northern District, and the Inspector General of Police and Prisons, to make deportation orders.

THE Arab Executive has submitted to Lord Plumer a petition asking that the display of the Jewish flag in Palestine may be prohibited.

DURING the month of August, 3,696 immigrants entered Palestine, an increase of 796 over the previous month.

STEPNEY CLUB'S CRICKET RECORD.

The "J.A.A." cricket season concluded last Sunday, when the final games were played in the various leagues and in the "knock-out" competition. The final game of the latter was played between Stepney and Hutchison House, and ended in a win for the former after an interesting match, by 47 runs to 30. For the winners A. Olstein took 4 wickets for 6 runs, and I. Mednitsky 6 wickets for 21 runs. J. Soskin, the wicket-keeper of the Stepney "under 19" team, has shown very good form. The Stepney Club has created a unique record in "J.A.A." cricket, by securing the four competitions arranged by the Junior section, namely, the "knock-out," under 19, under 17, and under 15½ Divisions, and winning every match in which they have participated.

The Annual Swimming Gala of the Club Sections (Senior, Junior and Girls) will be held at the Holborn Baths on Saturday evening, October 17th. Tickets of admission can be obtained from the Secretary of the Association, Camperdown House, Aldgate.

West Central Ladies' Guild.

The first report of the activities of the West Central Ladies' Guild, 14, Manette Street, Charing Cross Road, from December, 1923, to May, 1925, has been issued by the Committee. It shows a total income of £440, and a balance at the bank of £143. The Guild has a membership of 250. At a dance held in aid of its funds over £106 was realised. The sum of £125 was given to necessitous cases, and 1,000 lbs. of Matzoth and groceries were distributed at Passover. The Committee expresses its gratitude to the Rev. A. Amias for his work in connection with the Guild, and to all the ladies and gentlemen who have from time to time given their services for its benefit and supported its funds. The principal officers are Miss Rose King, President; Mrs. R. Isenberg, Vice-President; Mrs. Betty Green, Treasurer; Mr. S. Greenbaum, Hon. Secretary; and Miss M. Davis, Collector.

Central Education Committee Report.

From Mr. Herbert M. Adler, M.B.E., M.A. (Director of Jewish Education).

To the Editor of THE JEWISH CHRONICLE.

SIR,—I see that Mr. J. H. Taylor, in his very practical observations on my annual report to the Central Committee for Jewish Education, differs from me on one point—my predilection for teaching the Hebrew letters by their names. He considers that this entails an unnecessary expenditure of effort in the early stages, and that the letters can be more conveniently taught as sounds. I accept his premise that Hebrew is a phonetic language, its words being pronounced uniformly as they are spelt. But there is a pitfall. If each letter of the alphabet denoted a separate sound, there would be considerable force in Mr. Taylor's contention. And no doubt this was the case in the remote past. But at the present day, at any rate, an "s" sound may be represented by שׂ or ס or (among the Ashkenazim) by ת. A "k" sound can be reproduced equally by כ or ק, a "t" by ט or ת. If, therefore, we talk to a child about an "s" sound, he may think that we mean any of three letters. We shall have to explain to him which we mean, and without names to differentiate them, it will be hard indeed to keep them separate in his mind.

With the vowels the case is different, and there is not the same need for troubling about their names. No two vowels have the same sound, and in this respect, therefore, there is no risk of confusion. In the second place, the actual names of the vowels present a difficulty which is entirely absent in the case of the consonants. The initial letter of every consonant's name gives the clue to its sound. Bes stands for "b"; Lamed stands for "l." It is all plain sailing. But the characteristic sound of the vowels is not proclaimed in the same unmistakable note. Kibbuts, though it contains a "u," might stand for many other sounds. That, I believe, is why children do not take to the vowel-names so readily. In this case what is sauce for the goose is not sauce also for the gander.

Yours faithfully,

HERBERT M. ADLER.

Halibut, 1 large or 2 small slices.
One lemon.
Salad oil, 1 teacupful.
Brown crumbs, 3 tablespoonfuls.
Capers, 1 tablespoonful.
Salt and pepper.
Pistachio nuts.

PUT the halibut on to a fireproof dish; pour over the lemon juice, sprinkle with chopped capers, salt and pepper, and cover with the brown crumbs. Pour over the oil, and bake in a moderate oven for half an hour. Serve on a hot dish, and garnish with chopped pistachio nuts.

Fried Sweetbreads.

Two sweetbreads.
Egg.
Breadcrumbs.
Fat for frying.
Stock.

BLANCH the sweetbreads by putting them into cold water, bring the water to the boil, then strain. Return the sweetbreads to the saucepan, cover with well-seasoned stock, and cook gently for three-quarters of an hour; then press between two plates till cold. Cut into slices, dip in egg, coat with crumbs, and fry in boiling fat a golden brown. Garnish with fried parsley.

Honey Tart.

Good short pastry.
Fresh breadcrumbs, 4 tablespoonfuls.
Honey, 3 tablespoonfuls.
One lemon.

LINE a sandwich tin with good short pastry; trim and decorate the top edge. Warm the honey in a saucepan, add the breadcrumbs, and mix together. Remove from the fire, and add the grated rind of the lemon and half a teaspoonful of juice. Mix thoroughly, and let it get cold; then spread evenly over the prepared tin. Decorate with strips of pastry across, and bake in a hot oven for about twenty minutes.

Savoury Tomatoes.

Six tomatoes.
Two hard-boiled eggs.
Six anchovies.
Seasoning.

CUT a slice off the top of each tomato, and scoop out the middle. Chop the eggs finely, and pound the anchovies. Mix the egg and anchovies together with some of the tomato pulp. Season with salt and pepper, and fill up the tomatoes with the mixture.

To Combat Anti-Semitism.

EAST END CONFERENCE.

A conference convened by the Central Committee of the Jewish Workers' Circle, was held last Sunday at Circle House, Great Alie Street, to discuss the methods of combating anti-Semitism.

A number of Jewish labour organisations and various other Jewish societies were represented at the conference, at which Mr. I. Piltchik presided.

After explaining the object of the gathering, a discussion ensued as to the means to be adopted to fight anti-Jewish agitation in this country, which was increasing.

It was ultimately decided by the Conference to form a Defence Committee composed of representatives of Jewish bodies willing to co-operate in the work. It was also resolved that the Provisional Committee elected at that meeting should convene another conference for further discussion.

Consecration of Cemetery.

In 1892 the Old Hebrew Congregation transferred its Shechita department to the newly established Shechita Board, and among the obligations imposed upon the new body was the burial of the deceased poor whose means did not permit membership of any synagogue. These burials were provided for by means of the payment of an annual sum by the Shechita Board to one or other of the synagogues having cemeteries of their own. As the expenditure became excessively heavy, the Board decided to purchase a burial ground of its own and to constitute a Communal Burial Board. About six years ago an Appeal Committee was formed, of which Mr. Nathan Laski, J.P., was Chairman, and Mr. Levy Davis Treasurer, and an appeal to the community was made for £2,500, the approximate cost of about seven acres of ground secured at Prestwich, and adjoining the cemeteries of the Higher Broughton and North Manchester Synagogues.

On Sunday afternoon last the new burial ground was consecrated. The proceedings opened with the presentation of a gold key to Mr. Isaac Cansino, President of the Shechita Board, by Mr. B. Rubin, the Treasurer.

Mr. Spiro then unveiled a marble tablet inscribed as follows:—

"This tablet is erected in recognition of services rendered by Mr. Nathan Laski, J.P., and Mr. Levy Davis in securing the ground for the use of the community."

Psalms were recited, during which the ministers and others present walked round the cemetery. Addresses were delivered by Rabbis Dr. Salamon, Yoffey, Levene, Shachter, and Gaguine.

Rabbi Dr. Salomon, in the course of his address, said that with minds pregnant with lofty thoughts, solemnised and subdued by the presentiment and expectation of another and a better world, they were assembled to consecrate a place where man shall find a last refuge from the troubles and anxieties of life. At that solemn moment when they were standing on ground where the richest hopes of man would be interred along with his lifeless remains; where men "are carried away as with the flood; the wind has passed over them and they are gone"; where the green turf equalised every disproportion in life; where rich and poor meet together, where all discrepancies in the account of life were for ever balanced, let one thought penetrate all their minds: love for their Heavenly Father, and love for their fellow men. Judaism had always declared the spirit to be the chief and most excellent part of man—it was the spirit which proclaimed itself in the unceasing movement of life and in the quiet resting-place of the dead; it was to free the spirit from every trammel that might check its lofty flight, that "the silver cord is loosed, the golden bowl is broken." Let, then, the thought possess them, when they entered the gates of the cemetery, that it was there that they first began to live a life of eternal bliss. It was the house of life, the house of eternity. Elijah prayed on Mount Carmel, but his prayer was only heard when he remembered the dead; Moses remained forty days and nights on the mountain, to obtain remission of the sins of his people, but that was not granted to him until he had remembered the dead. Therefore he who desired to rouse himself to deeds of love towards the living, could not do better than assist in perpetuating the memory of the dead.

Rabbi YOFFEY alluded to the various Biblical names given to a burial ground. The one most used Beth Chayim "the house of the living," was given with the express object of conveying a vital lesson embodying some principles of the Jewish religion. It reminded people that the soul was immortal and existed after the departure of the body. Science gave convincing proofs that the soul was imperishable, and that nothing in the world passed entirely out of existence. The Beth Chayim was a place the living should often visit, because thereby they would be reminded that the span of life was very short, and therefore man should utilise his years for the right purpose for which he was created.

A number of sacks of שמות were then cast into an open grave by the clergy.

Mincha having been read by Rabbi Gaguine,

Mr. I. CANSINO gave a resumé of the steps which led to the securing of a Communal Burial Ground. The Board was indebted to the North Manchester Synagogue, whose President, Mr. Balaban, and his executive, had shown an admirable public spirit in permitting their Mortuary House to be used by the Shechita Board whenever required. They were also grateful for the services rendered by Mr. B. Rubin, who had saved the Board a large sum of money in the building of the wall which he was able to effect for £350. Mr. Cansino thanked those who had contributed to the fund for the purchase of the ground and for the gift to him of a gold key.

Mr. NATHAN LASKI, J.P., acknowledged the compliment paid to him and Mr. Levy Davis, and said that most of the work had been done by Mr. Davis. He alluded to the establishment of the Shechita Board over thirty years ago, when it took over the obligations previously carried out by the Old Hebrew Congregation, and of the part taken in that work by the late Mr. Barrow Belisha, uncle of Mr. I. Cansino. He felt sure that those who would serve on the Committee to be appointed to manage the new Communal Burial Board would show every kindness and sympathy to the poor people who came to them in the time of their trouble.

Mr. LEVY DAVIS said that he felt glad he had been able to take some part in so important a work for the benefit of the community.

Mr. SPIRO proposed a vote of thanks to the ministers for their services that afternoon. Rabbi Dr. SALOMON responded,

Mr. R. BARROW SICREE moved a vote of thanks to the Executive of the North Manchester Synagogue for the use of their mortuary house, which was acknowledged by Mr. B. BALABAN, the President, who paid a tribute to Mr. Henry Cohen for defraying the cost of a wall.

Home for Aged Needy and Incurable Jews.

The first meeting of the newly-elected Board of Management was held last week. Upon the unanimous request of the subscribers, the Executive, Messrs. E. Nove, President; Henry Cohen, and Bernard Cohen, Vice-Presidents; Nathan Marks, Treasurer; M. Feinmann, Hon. Secretary, with the addition of Mr. Levy Davis, as a Vice-President, agreed to remain in office for the ensuing year. Mr. Harry Levy was re-elected Hon. Investigator. The following were elected: Drs. R. W. Marsden, N. C. Haring, R. W. Douglas, B. Hirson, and R. Green, and Mr. Cyril Jacobs, Medical Board; Mr. Ernest Royce, Hon. Chartered Accountant; Mr. Laurence Marks, Hon. Solicitor; and the Rev. N. Isaacs, Hon. Chaplain. The monthly accounts, which showed a deficit of £150 for August, were submitted by the Treasurer, Mr. Nathan Marks. Drs. B. Hirson and R. Green paid forty visits to the Institution during the month, and Mr. Cyril Jacobs, the Ophthalmic Surgeon, also visited the Homes. The Treasurer reported the receipt of a legacy of £50 from the Executors of the late Mrs. L. Ellison.

The outing, recently given to the inmates of the Home for Aged and Needy Jews, was under the auspices of the North Manchester Ladies' Benevolent Society. The expenses were obtained from the public, and the general arrangements were made by Mrs. Cohen.

Jewish Institute.

The half-yearly meeting of the Institute was held on Sunday, Councillor H. Morris presided. The balance-sheet was submitted by the Hon. Secretary, Mr. Gerald Cohen. After a discussion, in which Messrs. Barfield, B. Nathan, L. Saipe, D. Rosenblum and A. Ginsburg participated, the balance-sheet was adopted, on the motion of the Chairman, seconded by Mr. J. S. Walsh.

A motion, by Mr. A. Caplan, to allow card games in the club, was subsequently withdrawn after a discussion.

The Chairman pointed out the trouble and anxiety which the Committee were having in connection with the new club scheme. The question had been considered in every phase, and Mr. Goldman had worked very hard towards its success.

Mr. I. Goldman expressed his disappointment at the support received. At the same time, he said, the deposits on subscriptions amounting to £5,000 had been paid, which indicated that there was a substantial realisation of the necessity of a new club. He was certain that a concerted effort now would end successfully.

Messrs. Mendelsohn, A. W. Brackup, M. Ginsburg, L. Saipe, M. Cohen, A. Ginsburg, J. Gross, I. Goldberg, and J. S. Walsh also spoke.

Mr. J. S. Walsh, LL.B., suggested that a meeting of the community should be called as there was now something definite to put before them, in the sum that had been subscribed.

Mr. M. Ginsburg expressed the hope that the re-formation of the concert party would materialise.

Ladies' Benevolent Society.

The annual meeting of the Society was held on Sunday last in the vestry room of the New Briggate Synagogue. The report and balance-sheet were adopted. The following were elected: Mesdames J. Cohen, President; Mendelssohn, S. H. Lyons, and D. Rosenblum, Vice-Presidents; Miss F. Raisman, Hon. Secretary; and a committee. On the motion of Mrs. Rosenblum, seconded by Mrs. J. Cohen, thanks were accorded to the retiring President, Mrs. Mendelsohn, and Mrs. Makofski, Hon. Secretary.

The tombstone, erected to the memory of the late Rev. S. Manson, was consecrated on Sunday last, before a large gathering, at the Gildersome Cemetery. Rabbi H. Hurwitz delivered an address, and spoke in eulogistic terms of the splendid work which the late Mr. Manson had accomplished during his forty years' service in the local community. The Rev. C. Kahan intoned the Hazkarah.

The general meeting of subscribers of the Yeshibah will be held on Sunday evening next, at eight o'clock, to consider the question of moving the Yeshibah into the Talmud Torah rooms.

Board of Guardians.

Mr. Herbert W. Levy, C.C., President, was in the chair at the monthly meeting of the Board held last week. After the ordinary business of the meeting had been dealt with the President, on behalf of the Board, congratulated the Secretary, Mr. Aaron Levy, and his wife, on the occasion of the celebration of their Silver Wedding. He had been associated with Mr. Levy in the work of the Board for four years. His assiduity and kindness to the poor were well known, and nothing was too much trouble to him. To mark the occasion, an address and a testimonial were to be presented that day to Mr. Levy as a small token of the esteem in which he was held by the Board.

Mr. S. H. Gluckstein (Vice-President) said that he had found Mr. Levy to be a valuable asset to the institution and to the community.

Mr. E. A. Behrend (a Past President), Mr. Herbert Woolf (the

Exhausted Nerves

SLEEP comes at last after many hours of wakefulness. But it is restless sleep. You wake at the slightest noise. When morning comes you feel more tired than when you went to bed.

Your nerves are fagged out and exhausted. They are starved for lack of nerve-restoring nourishment.

Avoid drugs. Only nourishment will restore frayed and worn nerves and recharge them with vital energy.

"Ovaltine" is supremely rich in nerve-restoring nourishment. In addition to the wonderful nutriment obtained from ripe barley malt and creamy milk it contains the protein and phosphorus wealth of fresh eggs. "Ovaltine" is therefore abundant in all the vital properties for building up healthy brain and nerve tissue.

Take a cup of delicious "Ovaltine" regularly before retiring. The nerve-restoring elements pass at once into the system. The nerves are soothed and sound refreshing sleep quickly follows.

While you sleep new energies are created to carry you through the work and worry of the coming day.

"Ovaltine" contains all the vitamins, and these are present in correct ratio; furthermore, it is emphasised that "Ovaltine" contains, also in correct ratio, all the other equally important factors of a complete and perfect food.

Treasurer), the Revs. Lewis Phillips, A. B. Coleman, and I. Freeman, Dr. J. Ellenbogen and Messrs. A. Fagin, David Black, S. I. Levy, Baron Stern, and M. Greenberg associated themselves with the tributes.

Mr. Philip Ettinger, who was mainly responsible for organising the tribute, said that the presentation had been contributed to by practically every member of the Board, which showed the high esteem in which Mr. Levy was held by them. Mr. Ettinger then read the address. Telegrams and messages of congratulation were received from the Rev. S. Frampton, B.A., Messrs. Herbert J. Davis, C.C., M. Eschwege, J.P., Alfred Levy, D. Gabrielsen, Lionel Collins, D. Cantor, A. Ventura, I. Silverberg, S. Broude, and I. Dover.

Mr. Levy, in responding, thanked the officers and members of the Board for their congratulations to his wife and himself, and for the good wishes which had been expressed. The tributes which had been paid to him were far greater than he deserved. He was overwhelmed by the great kindness of the Board, and he could only promise that in the years which followed whilst he was Secretary he would continue to discharge his duties to the satisfaction of all, and to merit the confidence which the Board placed in him.

The address, which was framed in silver, recorded the fact that for a period of eighteen years Mr. Levy had laboured unselfishly in the cause of the poor and the suffering ; that he had ever shown a conscientious fervour and zeal in his very onerous work, and a patience, sympathy and tenderness of feeling which had brought comfort and solace to countless numbers of co-religionists ; that he had elimated all consideration of self in carrying out his sacred and holy task, and had merited the thanks and appreciation of every member of the Board, and particularly of the Liverpool Jewish Community.

The Board has issued an appeal for the New Year, and an urgent call is made for a liberal response. The relief granted to the Board continues on an unprecedentedly high scale. The privation and distress among the Jewish poor in the Community show no sign of abating and the outlook for the coming winter gives cause for grave concern. Donations to the appeal will be gratefully received by Mr. Herbert Woolf, Treasurer, 5, Oxford Street.

Diamond Wedding.

Mr. and Mrs. H. E. Rensburg, of 12, Ivanhoe Road, celebrated their diamond wedding on Sunday last. They have been members of the Old Hebrew Congregation, Princes Road, for very many years, and Mrs. Rensburg, despite her years, regularly attends the services in the synagogue. Ardent lovers of the arts, and especially of music, Mr. and Mrs. Rensburg have for very many years exerted a quiet but powerful influence in the encouragement of these pursuits in this city, their home being "Liberty Hall" to famous artists visiting Liverpool. Mr. Rensburg was born at The Hague eighty-four years ago, and came to Liverpool at the age of twenty-two, joining the bank of Edward Yates and Co. A little later he met his future wife, Miss Samuel, a member of one of the oldest Jewish families in Liverpool, and a cousin of Sir Herbert Samuel. They were married three years after Mr. Rensburg's arrival in the city. Eventually Mr. Rensburg became a partner in the banking firm, but some time later went into business on his own account as a stockbroker, retiring in 1913, after half a century of strenuous business activity. Both he and Mrs. Rensburg are in excellent health, and occupy their time with many interests. Mr. Rensburg has been a member of the Committee of the Liverpool Philharmonic Society since 1880, is one of the oldest members of the Philomathic Society, and for twenty-five years a member of the Committee of the Liverpool Stock Exchange.

Jewish Centre.

The annual meeting of the Liverpool Jewish Association, Limited, in which is vested the management of the Jewish Centre, was held last week at 5, Princes Avenue. Mr. Bertram B. Benas, B.A., LL.B., the Chairman, moved the adoption of the report, which showed that the Centre had had an active year. The Jewish Literary Society and the University Jewish Students' Society has held several meetings during the Session, as also had the newly founded Liverpool Lodge of the Independent Order B'nai B'rith. As the Commemorative lecture, verse translations from poetry of the Chinese, rendered into English by the late Mr. B. L. Benas, J.P., were read by Mr. Bertram B. Benas. The Library had steadily progressed both in extent and utilisation. Thanks were accorded to the Rev. Lewis Phillips for his services in connection with the Library. The year's working of the Centre showed an excess of expenditure over income of £76, which, together with the accruing excess of the previous years, amounted to £697. The founders have granted further loans to the Liverpool Jewish Association, Limited, to enable all current expenditure to be met. Thanks were accorded to the Hon. Secretary, Mr. Sydney W. Price, LL.B., and to the Auditor, Mr. L. King. The Association placed on record the great bereavement the Centre had sustained in the passing away of the late Miss Helena Benas, one of the founders, by whose gifts, in conjunction with her brother (Mr. P. A. Benas) and her nephew (Mr. Bertram B. Benas), the establishment of the Centre (in memory of the late Mr. B. L. Benas) had been rendered possible.

Association of Old Boys.

The Rev. M. Rosenberg, a former Headmaster of the Liverpool Hebrew Schools, who is on a visit from South Africa with his wife after many years absence from this country, was cordially welcomed last Sunday by the officers and Committee of the Association of Old Boys. Mr. Rosenberg expressed his pleasure at the opportunity of once again meeting a number of his former pupils. As he is remaining in this country for some time, it is hoped shortly to arrange a function to enable all Old Boys and Old Girls to renew acquaintance with their former Headmaster.

Garnethill Congregation.

After having been closed for three months for renovation and re-decoration, the synagogue was re-opened last Friday evening with a re-dedication service. A circuit of the synagogue was made with the Scrolls of the Law, to the accompaniment of appropriate psalms sung by the choir. The interior of the synagogue now presents a pleasing aspect, the creamy shade of the three walls and ceiling throwing into prominent relief the east wall decorated in rich oriental colourings. Mrs. I. M. Speculand has presented the synagogue with an embroidered mantle for the Sepher Torah.

Ta'mud Torah.

A large gathering attended the Siyum of a Sepher Torah (the gift of Mrs. H. B. Langman, of 95, Albert Road, Langside), held recently. The Rev. M. Fomin officiated, and addresses were delivered by Rabbis Lurie and Balkin. Thanks for their services were accorded to Mesdames L. Daets, L. Isaacs, A. Segall, A. Goldberg, H. Shulman, and H. Isaacs. At the subsequent supper, provided by Mr. and Mrs. Langman, Mr. E. Isaacs presided. Among the speakers were Messrs. Langman, A. Goldberg, N. Morris, H. Finestone, and L. Daets. An appeal was made for financial support of the Institution. The Sabbath morning services for children began last week. One of the pupils, instructed by the Rev. I. Hirshow, read the service. Mr. Maurice Bloch, J.P., delivered an address to the four hundred children present. Refreshments were provided by Messrs. M. Morrison and S. Bercott.

The Congregation.

A confirmation service for girls was held at the Singer's Hill Synagogue last Sunday. The service, which was choral, was the first of its kind held in this City, and was attended by a large congregation. In the course of an address, the Rev. Dr. A. Cohen, M.A., dwelt on the wonderful part played by women in the preservation of the Jewish People, and showed how emancipation to-day had made conditions totally different by according women a vast amount of freedom. In these new circumstances there was a grave danger that the Jewish woman might discard her traditional characteristics as the Priestess in the Temple of the Home and the guardian of the citadel of Judaism. The Jewish girl at the present time did not get that intensive training which her ancestress obtained automatically. It had, therefore, become a matter of paramount importance that steps be taken to impress upon her the place she should occupy in Jewish life, the great duties which devolved upon her, and the valuable opportunities for rendering service to her faith and people, which would be in her hands. That Confirmation Service, and the course of instruction which preceded it, aimed at achieving that end. In congratulating the six daughters of Israel as pioneers in that congregation in a sacred cause, Dr. Cohen expressed the hope that their example would be emulated year by year in increasing numbers.

Mr. E. P. Hollander, President, in presenting the Chief Rabbi's Certificates to the girls, paid tributes to the teacher, Mr. Phillip Pizer; to Mr. Albert Albury, the Chairman of the Hebrew and Religious Instruction Board; and to the Rev. Dr. Cohen, who had ably supervised the work.

The following received certificates: Muriel Aaron, Madge Cassell, Myra Cohen, Eileen Levy, Gwenda Levy, and Lily Stern.

Union of Jewish Women.

In connection wth the Conference of the National Council of Women that is being held this week in Birmingham, arrangements have been made for the holding of a meeting of Jewish women at the College of Nursing Club, 166, Hagley Road, Edgbaston, on Wednesday evening next, at eight o'clock. The subject for discussion will be "Co-ordination of Social Effort," and the speakers will include Mrs. Model and Mrs. Eichholz, both of London. Mrs. S. Abrahams, Chairman of the local branch of the Union, will preside.

The Rev. Mendel Woolf, of Bialystock, will conduct the services during the holy days at the New Synagogue, Hurst Street.

Jewish Children in Council Schools.

A deputation, consisting of the Revs. H. Jerevitch and M. S. Simmons, and Messrs. B. Janner, B.A., T. Shepherd, L. Feldman and A. Minski, waited upon the Schools Management Committee last Friday, at the City Hall, and asked for permission for Jewish teachers to give instruction in Jewish subjects to children of the Jewish faith in the Council schools during the time Scripture is taught to the children in the mornings. The Committee told the deputation that the matter would be considered. The Rev. H Jerevitch asked that Jewish children should be allowed to leave school during the months of November, December, and January, at least a quarter of an hour before the Sabbath began.

EDINBURGH.

Barmitzvah Presentation.

At a function in celebration of the Barmitzvah of the younger son of Rabbi Dr. and Mrs. Salis Daiches, a bound set of Festival Prayer Books was presented to the boy last Sunday in behalf of the Hebrew Congregation. Mr. D. Kissenisky, who presided, referred to the bond of genuine friendship which united the members of the congregation with their learned Rabbi. Mr. S. Rosenbloom, the Treasurer, conveyed the felicitations of the community to the Barmitzvah and his parents. Master Daiches suitably responded. Mr. S. Sklovsky proposed the health of Rabbi and Mrs. Daiches. Other speakers were Messrs. M. Kissenisky, S. S. Stungo, J.P., E. H. Furst, J.P., A. Phillips, L. Lipetz, and the Rev. J. M. Teitleman. Dr. Daiches, in responding, expressed his appreciation of the kindness shown to him and to his family by the members of the Congregation. It was a great encouragement to him in his work to know that he had so many real friends in the community and that his efforts to advance the cause of Judaism in Scotland were so much appreciated.

Western Synagogue.

A confirmation service for girls was held on Sunday last, the confirmees being Rose Boguslavski, Eva Gordon, Florence Lipshitz, Edith Baker, Rose Black, and Millicent Lavine (of the Hebrew Girls' School). The Rev. I. Aarons officiated. Rabbi L. Miller, in the course of an address, stressed the vital need for Jewish education for girls, and paid a high tribute to the work of the girls' school. He appealed to the girls to prove by their future conduct that the confirmation service that day had been no empty ceremony. They must never lose their pride of race, but always stand firm for the ideals and principles of Judaism. They must let "right thinking, right feeling, and right doing" shine forever in their horizon, and always endeavour to emulate the example of the great women in Jewish history. Mrs. B. S. Jacobs briefly addressed the girls, and presented to each of them the Chief's Rabbi's certificates, signifying that they had passed the special examination in Hebrew and religious knowledge and history.

Jewish Girls' Club.

A successful session was reported at the annual meeting of the Girls' Club held last week, with Mrs. G. Bishop in the chair. Thanks were accorded to Mrs. L. Miller and Miss B. Berkowitz for their services. The winter session began last Tuesday at the club's headquarters, the School-rooms, Linnæus Street. A Jewish girl guide company has been formed at the club. The following were elected: Mesdames G. Bishop, President; B. S. Jacobs, Vice-President; L. Miller, Treasurer; D. Sadofski, Hon. Secretary; and a Committee.

GRIMSBY.

At a meeting of the Council of the Congregation held last week, the Chairman, Mr. B. Levinson, presented a gold cigarette case to Mr. Harold Rosenberg, Hon. Secretary, for valuable services rendered to the congregation. Tributes were paid to him by the Chairman and Messrs. L. Bennett, R. Aarons, and A. Asher.

HARROGATE.

At the Dinner held at "The Hollies" (Englander's) on Wednesday in last week, in celebration of the opening of the New Synagogue, Mr. N. Cohen presided. Mr. J. W. Myers proposed the health of the Chief Rabbi of the British Empire. In responding, Dr. Hertz paid a tribute to the members of the Community for their successful efforts in raising the Synagogue. Mr. L. Salberg proposed the health of Sir Adolph Tuck, who responded. Mr. S. Bodlender submitted the toast of Mr. M. Jacobson (Newcastle), who laid the Foundation Stone. Mr. Jacobson having responded, the Rev. Dr. J. Abelson proposed the health of the Rev. E. Kahan, B.A., the Minister, who also responded. Mr. N. Cohen then presented a gold wristlet watch to Miss E. Opet, Hon. Secretary of the Ladies' Committee. The Rev. E. Kahan, B.A., paid a tribute to the conscientious and painstaking work of Miss Opet, who replied.

A meeting of the Committee was held last week. Thanks were recorded to the Rev. C. Kahan (of Leeds), the Rev. E. Kahan, B.A., and Mr. Nathan Cohen, for their services in connection with the opening of the Synagogue, and to Mr. and Mrs. A. Hirshfeld (of Birmingham) for their presentation of a gold key.

LLANDUDNO.

At the Synagogue last Sunday, the Siyum of a Sepher Torah (presented to the congregation by Mr. Morris Wartski, in memory of his daughter, Gertrude Sions, and his son Charles) was held. The service, which was choral, and well attended by Jewish residents from all parts of North Wales, was conducted by the Rev. E. Berry, and an address was delivered by Rabbi A. Hyman, of London. Mr. and Mrs. Wartski subsequently entertained the congregation at their residence. The Rev. B. Morris, of Bangor, proposed the health of the host and hostess.

"The Jewish World."

Yesterday's issue of THE JEWISH WORLD, which was the New Year Number, contains, in addition to all the usual features, a number of special articles. Prominent among these is "Whistling God's Word through the Keyhole," in which Rabbi Joel Blau deals with the American "Centre" movement of lay work for ethical uplift. Other noteworthy features are "Jews in 'Colonial' America," in which Mr. Maurice Bergman gives an interesting account of the life of the early Jewish settlers in America, and an article on Shabbethai Zebi, the notorious pseudo-Messiah. A new departure is "Our Youngsters' Corner," in which the history of Rabbi Jochanan ben Zakkai is recounted for boys and girls.

Autumn Fashions.

By MYRA.

The season which is about to begin sees the conclusion of a most tantalising spring and summer. Women's fashions have suffered in common with women, and with men, too, for that matter, from the sporadic vagaries of meteorological conditions.

Spring was nipped in its bud figuratively no less than actually, and, alas! offered few opportunities for women to display new gowns. It is always difficult to set one's finger exactly on the point of origin in each year's fashion. But, more than at any other time, spring brings forth the new idea whose influence is felt right through the year, even in the sere autumn and the chilly winter that follows. The failure of a year's spring has a definite result on the fashions of that year. They somehow get mislaid and jumbled up when there is no definite spring cult. This time, with the exception of the introduction of the brick-red colour which has spread like a measles' rash all over the suburbs of London and throughout the provincial towns, the definite lead was missing, because the seasons passed quickly from coldest winter, when all smartness was enveloped in a furred cloak, to a tropical heat, which occasioned the discarding of garments, the display of the scant fashions that from time to time, with the heat waves, have visited us this year. Extremes of weather do not favour smartness. When it is very hot we escape mercifully from our clothes and don any light diaphanous garment we may possess, very often irrespective of its cut or date.

And providing the result is that the wearer appears cool and fresh in it, her choice is justified. In the same way, intense cold scatters to the winds our terrific fear of embonpoint. Women who for months have anxiously counted every sixteenth of an inch in their circumference, when the Arctic winds threaten to redden their noses, cheerfully assume extra woollies under their coats to avoid such a horror. Everybody gets accustomed in very cold weather to see everybody else enveloped more or less in bundles of clothes, just as they get accustomed in hot weather in these latter days to meeting their friends in perpetual undress. That is why the spring and autumn fashions are the only ones that really count. That is why when the clerk of the weather inadvertently mislays either of those seasons a serious effect is felt not only in trade, but also in the great councils of Madame La Mode.

The autumn of this year is the jumble that could have been expected to follow a spring that never came off. The only important modification is the flare or godet that has come into our skirts. Instead of the much-yearned for straight line to which our eyes have become attuned, we may permit just a ripple to trail off at the foot (or rather actually just below the knees) to-day. The question arises, was "the line" ever achieved with all the rubber corsets against which physicians have fulminated? Is the flare the "white flag" of woman who admits the impossibility during life and activity of enshrouding herself like a mummy. Was it ever possible to maintain the line in movement? These questions arise in contemplating the new silhouette. Waistlines, it seems, have become hopelessly lost during the mêlée of the seasons. The autumn styles show them a little higher and less accentuated in their unnaturalness than was decreed six months ago. There is a movement in certain quarters to revive the natural figure. There are models for the autumn which even hint, with a wistful sigh, at the Gibson figure.

However, any such hankerings become quickly translated into terms of modernity by a sturdy expression that is now the attitude of woman to her clothes. Impossible to imagine her cramped into eighteen inches at the waist or trailing yards of unsanitary skirts in the dust behind her. The new models built on these lines have waists that are merely hinted at. They resemble at least the mannish costume of a female impersonator, or the essayed waist-line of a pre-war officer of the Hussars. As for skirts, if they are any longer than those of the summer, it is a matter of but an inch. Long coats, as well as suits, are all cut just over knee-length, while the flare affords ample freedom for walking. For those who still cling to the straight line, it is, of course, no doubt excessively smart and is provided for in many models. But to many women the new relaxation will be hailed with delight, since it results in greater becomingness for all but the excessively thin. The colours for the autumn are headed as is so often the case for that time of year by the greens. Bottle green is the most popular. Brown for the time being has suffered a set-back, except in one shade, a lovely, if sombre hue, called Chippendale. The trouble with green as a dominant colour is that while suiting many, there are a good few to whom it is unbecoming. There are however, other fashionable shades this autumn. Magenta, Mulberry and Bordeaux are three variations of red that are popular. While it must not be forgotten that black remains still the safe hue for women to whom other colours are "dangerous." The tendency in materials is to become thinner and thinner. Women have discovered the fact so persistently disregarded by men, that weight does not necessarily mean warmth. A modern woman clad in silk and soft, fine wool is probably warmer than was her predecessor, enveloped in face cloth dresses and gowns of cumbersome stuffs of great weight. That the modern woman's dress is more hygienic every scientist will allow, since its light and porous nature renders it far more permeable to the beneficent rays of the sun. No doubt, because of its practicality, stockinette will continue to be in the same great demand that it has been for months now. The vogue for ensemble costumes has without doubt come to stay. There are appearing ensembles costumes consisting of a long coat of black-faced cloth, fur trimmed, of one colour, the facings of which are of kasha. The frock worn beneath is of finely pleated shaded kasha, and the hat is of either velour or velvet of the dominant colour, to match the lining of the coat. Other ensembles are of silk, and, later on, velvet suits or velvet coats, over contrasting suits, will be seen, if we have bright cold days in store for us.

As regards millinery, felt hats promise to be, in general, the most popular wear. Models, of course, will be expressed in velvet and silks, but the average woman has ceased to regard her hat as a crown to her toilette, except on very special ceremonial occasions. Utility is the keynote of millinery to-day, and smart women can no longer afford creations that a shower would ruin, a puff of wind demolish. Altogether, fancy millinery is becoming eschewed by smart women.

Barkers.

Dress fabrics for the manufacture of beautiful autumn and winter gowns are of absorbing interest just now. Messrs. Barkers have a great show of French and English dress goods in the piece. The immensely popular Kasha productions of the famous house of Rodier figure importantly in the Barker stocks. In the natural colour, and in wonderful shades of grey and brown with Indian borderings in black, these original fabrics have an enormous appeal. Kasha and Zibli Kasha, two favourite productions of the Rodier looms, are stocked in plain natural colour and also in a wonderful range of new designs, including the pleated, bordered check effects. The prices are 21s. to 45s. 9d. per yard. Paris Ottoman cords, in fold and heavy cords for smart restaurant wraps, is made in various weights in a full range of the latest colourings from 6s. 9d. to 14s. 11d. per yard. Chenille velours in prevailing shades, with silver flake, giving a beautiful velvety effect, are the craze of Paris to-day. This fabric is 54 inches wide and costs 16s. 11d. per yard.

Debenhams.

Prominent among autumn displays are two-piece costumes, which are most practical for early autumn wear. A tailor-made two-piece costume is of soft light-weight velour-finished cloth. The frock has a front and revers of corded silk to tone, and the skirt has a pleated front. The well-tailored coat is red, and has inserted panels and collar of gazelle-marked kid fur. It is lined throughout with silk to tone. It is obtainable in a good range of colours, and priced at 16½ guineas. Another example of this practical style consists of a becoming frock having loose panels and a pleated crêpe-de-chine cravat vest. The long, well-tailored coat has the new pressed godets, and is lined throughout with silk. It is priced the same as the previously described model.

Dickens and Jones.

Fur coats for the winter are already making their appearance and are very suitable for the present style and line. A model coat, seal musquash is made of very fine selected skins and portrays the new godet flare in accentuated form in front, with an almost straight back. It is priced 98 guineas. A model coat of seal-dyed musquash and ermine displays quite the smartest combination of furs. This coat is slightly shaped on the hips, and is made from the best quality skins, the collar being of finest Russian ermine. Its price is 95 guineas. In Persian lamb, a model coat is trimmed with grey squirrel. The attractive combination is carried out in a novel form. Wide collar and cuffs and a deep hem of squirrel trim the coat, which is cut on extremely elegant lines. Its price is 139 guineas.

D. H. Evans.

"Twilfit" corsets for every conceivable occasion are displayed at Messrs. Evans. The "Twilfit" model, 7,272, has a special uplift belt for abdominal support. It is manufactured of strong coutille, and may be had in sizes 23 in. to 32 in. waist, at 15s. 11d. The Fashonese is a garment that may be well described as a "Twilfit" triumph. It is skilfully designed to give graceful lines to the figure and to ensure fashion, ease, control, and freedom. It is actually a brassière and corset combined. It may be had in strong white broche batiste, light in weight, for 25s., or in a plain material, for 15s. 11d. It is fitted with unbreakable spiral steels, and is fully guaranteed. A dance corset, with buttons at front, is made of broche and has elastic inlets at the waist. It may be had in pink, white, and blue, in sizes 21—28 in. waist, for 11s. 6d. A brassière of strong broche is admirably suited for full figures It fastens at the side, is boneless, and is firm and strong. It is marked in sizes 34—44 in., at 5s. 11d.

Emme.

At the Salons in Shaftesbury Avenue, model gowns, hats and frocks are shown at most reasonable prices. Madame Emmé is constantly displaying French models, and all her stocks are stamped with an undeniable chic. There is really no reason for any woman to remain dowdy when she can repair to this convenient West End Atelier, and there clothe herself most economically and with splendour.

Harrods.

Autumn suit styles displayed by this house include the Ganston, a perfectly tailored two-piece garment of suiting velour, suitable for early autumn wear. The skirt is finished with a belt and box-pleated front and is obtainable in rust, brown, black or grey at 9½ guineas. A dress and coat in ribbed velour has a plain face-cloth finish. The upper part of the gown is of crêpe-de-chine with strappings of material. The coat is lined throughout with crêpe-de-chine and is finished with a fur collar. This costume is obtainable in bottle, rust, navy or black for 14 guineas. Gowns that "slenderize" the full figure are specialised in by this house. An entirely new line is secured in a black georgette gown with its full godet inlets and jet trimmings. The price of it is 12 guineas, and it is designed in every detail for the full figure. A simple gown of good quality georgette has a full skirt inlet of tinsel lace and is finished with a two-inch border of pleating while at the waist there is a sash and a diamante ornament. It may be had in coral, saphire, flame, yellow or black, for 8 guineas.

Harvey Nichols.

New tailored coat frocks are shown this week at this establishment. One model is of fine quality rep, cut on straight lines, buttoning down the centre. This fact makes it easy to slip on, and the fashionable flare effect is obtained by the skirt having big box pleats across the front. Inlet pockets finish off this smart garment, and it may be had in purple, red, wine and bottle, and many other bright colours for 8½ guineas. Another example is cut on well tailored lines, and is made to slip on coat fashion with a wide wrap to the skirt. The bodice is finished with fine embroidery in Roumanian colourings. This frock may be had in bottle, tan, rust, and navy, and is priced 8½ guineas. A new coat-frock of fine quality rep has a skirt in which two sets of fine pleats are arranged on either side of the front, and the simple, well-tailored bodice is finished with collar and cuffs of fine cloth in contrasting shades. The frock is obtainable in tan, navy, mole, and bottle for 9 guineas.

Marshal and Snelgrove.

Smart restaurant and dinner gowns have been adapted by this house from Paris models, and are made from materials which are guaranteed to give satisfaction in wear. A gown of rich velvet-brocaded ninon over crêpe-de-chine has an attractive bodice with wide sleeves and a V-front. The skirt has panels graduated in front, and is obtainable in black and a range of colours at 8½ guineas. At the same price may be had a gown of good quality georgette over a lining of georgette and crêpe-de-chine. The long waisted bodice has a loose strap at the back, and has a full skirt with gauged panels which is worn over a higher foundation, finished at the edge with gold galon. It is obtainable in black and a good range of colours. This house calls ladies' attention to their hair-dressing department which is luxuriously appointed, and is one of the most up-to-date in London.

Mentone House.

This exceptionally smart new Oxford Street house is under the personal supervision of Mr. Joseph Mendelsohn, the Managing Director. Here amidst surroundings suggestive of the smart resort, whose name it bears, in tastefully appointed Salons is the most up-to-the-minute display of all the latest models imaginable. The corner shop, with its cheerful striped curtains, is a veritable oasis, flourishing as it does at a juncture where the West End is beginning to fade into the Suburbs. Extremely smart jumper suits, specially made in France for this house, cost 75s. In the millinery department, the smartest felt hats available are moderately priced; all goods are marked in plain figures throughout the store. Autumn coats of great variety are displayed, and among them there are many French models at half the original price. Evening gowns that every woman would desire are shown in a profusion, and are of alluring luxuriant fabric and colour. The petal frock at 75s. which this house has created has proved to be quite one of the sensations of the West End.

Pontings.

The Osmode models which this house is showing are designed to fit every conceivable figure and are the outcome of many years of scientific investigation and experiments. A smart Osmode model of fine quality suiting for autumn wear embodies all the special designing features that produce the illusion of figure reduction in a remarkable manner. "S" is the shape for the smart outsize figure. "R" is the shape for the round full figure, and "F" is the shape for the small-hipped and full-busted figure. In shades of browns, fawns, greys, etc., these cost 7½s. 6d. An Osmode model designed for the smart full figure in all-wool gabardine is tailored throughout on scientific lines to produce a slender effect. There are 14 sizes arranged to fit any figure in three special shapes as above. The shades obtainable are navy, black, new autumn brown, and grey. The price up to 48 inch bust is 5½ guineas and the 50-54 inch bust is 10s. 6d. extra.

Robinson and Cleaver.

This world-renowned linen house announces an autumn sale to begin on September 28th. However, to commemorate the New Year, real Irish linen will be offered at sale price. This week, in advance of the official date, to readers of THE JEWISH CHRONICLE, linen and damask tablecloths of good Greco-Roman scroll design cost from 15s. 9d. (2 yds. by 2 yds.) to 23s. 3d. (2 yds. by 3 yds.). Linen napkins to match are 14s. 3d. per dozen. Linen towels of fine huckaback, 24 in. by 36 in., are 21s. per dozen. Pure linen huckaback guest towels with striped centre and scroll border, measuring 15 in. by 22 in., are 20s. per dozen. Pure linen and hemstitched sheets of heavy quality, recommended for hard wear, measure 2 yds. by 3 yds., and are 40s. per pair. Hemmed cotton sheets of useful quality, guaranteed pure and free from filling of any kind, are 16s. 3d. per pair.

Swan and Edgar.

Abdo corsets are an important item of women's purchase. They provide the perfect foundation essential to the prevailing mode, at the same time affording the greatest amount of comfort possible to the wearer. Abdo model 810 has a four-tier skirt with a high back for support, which is graduated under the arms to a very low bust. Small elastic gussets are inserted in the bust. This corset is obtainable in spot broche, in sizes 25 to 40 inches waist, at 42s. The Abdo buskless model 2564 is specially designed for short average figures. Elastic sections under the bust give additional comfort. It is obtainable in pink coutille, in hip sizes 32 to 44 inches, at 11s. 9d. Abdo buskless model 2574 is a most attractive full figure corset. It is designed to maintain a perfectly straight form with the fashionable flat back, in stout white coutille, it costs 15s. 11d., sizes 36 to 40 inches hip.

Shoolbreds.

This firm caters specially for the needs of young folk returning to school. It should be borne in mind that a great deal of the success of school boys and girls may depend on such external things as their clothes. Boys' rugby suits in various tweeds specially selected for hard wear are priced from 27s. 6d. Youths' overcoats, double-breasted with half-belted back and inverted pleat may be had in all shades of grey. They are thoroughly recommended for hard wear and cost 49s. 6d. Law Cases.

Fined for Smuggling.—At New York, last week, fines and forfeitures amounting to £298 were imposed on Mrs. DAVID BELASCO, wife of the famous theatrical producer, by the Customs authorities, for smuggling. It is stated that when she returned aboard the liner "Paris," on September 1st, she brought men's and women's clothing worth £195, which she failed to declare. Her lawyers have signified that she will not contest the decision.

Worth £3,000 and Fined for Begging.—At Belfast on Wednesday, Mrs. Jacobs, a well-dressed woman, who admitted that she was worth £3,000, was fined 40s. for begging. She was arrested outside a picture house, and previously, it is stated, had successfully prosecuted seven men for raiding her villa on the outskirts of the City. There were previous convictions against her.

Mother Accused of Murder.—Last week, at the Southampton Police Court, Mrs. SARAH HYAMS, 31, of High Street, Walthamstow, was remanded, accused of the murder of her six-months' old son. The body was found near the railway line between Southampton and Portsmouth. Mrs. Hyams, who had been missing from her father's house at East Park Terrace, Southampton, for nearly a week, was found by the police wandering in Branksome Park, near Poole. To the policeman who found her suffering from the effects of exposure through sleeping in the open, the accused is stated to have said: "I had a baby once, but I don't know what has become of it."

Charged with being a Suspected Person.—Arrested in the grounds of St. Paul's Church, Covent Garden, MAURICE GREENBERG, a kitchen hand, staying at a Salvation Army Shelter, was charged at Bow Street, last Friday, with being a suspected person. A detective said that he followed Greenberg through a gateway to the back of the church, and saw him climb up the fire escape attached to St. Peter's Hospital. At the first landing he tried unsuccessfully to open a window, and then tried to reach another window by means of a stack pipe. Failing in this, he went to a back door of the church and pushed it open. Accused was remanded.

Alleged Burglary Charge.—MICHAEL SPELLMANN, 58, diamond merchant, of Richmond Road, Hackney, and RICHARD GOODMAN, 52, dealer, of Brunswick Buildings, Aldgate, were charged at Marylebone Police Court, last week, with committing a burglary at the residence of Mrs. Margaret Hince, in Hyde Park Street, and stealing jewelry, etc., valued at £250. It is alleged that the police found in Spellman's possession fifty nine £1 notes, three pearl tie-pins, packets of loose diamonds, a necklace, and a pair of pearl earrings, while Goodman is alleged to have had a diamond brooch, a pearl tie-pin, two gold cigarette cases, and six gold purses. Both men were remanded in custody, the magistrate refusing to order the money found on Spellman to be handed over to him.

Gaol for a Moneylender.—Sentence of four years' penal servitude was passed upon Henry Gordon Lewin (who had carried on the business of Lendal, Ltd.) by the Common Serjeant at the Old Bailey on Wednesday. Lewin was found guilty of obtaining money under false pretences. Sir Henry F. Dickens, in passing sentence, stated that the accused had organised a very wicked fraud on a large scale, and that a great many people who could not afford to lose their money had been victimised. Reports of this case have appeared in our previous issues.

Servant's Theft from Mistress.—While shopping in Middlesex Street, Aldgate, Mrs. Solomon, of Saddlescombe Road, Fulham, saw many articles of her clothing being sold to a dealer by her servant, TERESA CONNOR, aged 40. At the West London Police Court, on Tuesday, Connor was charged with stealing the clothing, and sentenced to three months' hard labour.

Charged with Assaulting the Police.—The attack on members of the Fascisti at King's Cross had a sequel at Clerkenwell Police Court on Tuesday, when JACK GREENBERG, aged eighteen, of Pell Street, St. George's-in-the-East, was charged with insulting behaviour and attacking Police-Constable Gregory at Pentonville Road. He pleaded "not guilty." Constable Gregory said that from fifteen to twenty men were marching along Pentonville Road on Monday night. One carried the Union Jack. They were followed by a crowd of people, the majority shouting, "Up with the Reds." A man snatched the Union Jack. There was a struggle, during which, witness alleged, Greenberg struck a blow at one of the marchers who wore a black shirt, and knocked him to the ground. Gregory immediately arrested Greenberg, who struck him on the right side of the face with his fist. Greenberg alleged that while he was being taken to the police station, he was struck by the police. A witness stated that he did not see a policeman strike Greenberg or the latter strike a member of the Fascisti. Greenberg was remanded for eight days on a surety of £10.

shirts with collars attached are 6s. 6d. Boys' pull-overs, warm and serviceable, may be had in fancy patterns for 13s. 6d. Girls' school coats of navy nap made in the latest shape and of fine quality material cost 42s. 9d. Girls' blouses of twill wincey, warm and durable, and made with Peter Pan collars and buttons down the front, cost 10s. 6d. and 11s. 6d., according to size. Good quality black rubber mackintoshes of excellent cut and finish cost 18s. 6d., and the sou'-wester to match 4s. 6d. Girls' hats of well shaped velour, good quality and hard-wearing styles, cost 15s. 9d. Trunks and tuck-boxes are also available at this store in great variety economically priced.

Thomas Wallis.

The autumn display of fashions and furnishings begins next Monday. Horrockses' sheets form an interesting item at Messrs. Wallis'. Horrockses plain Wigan sheets, hard-wearing and of dependable quality, range from 16s. 9d. to 23s. 6d. per pair. Plain twill sheets produced by the same mills cost from 14s. 9d. to 18s. 9d. per pair. In the silk department natural Japschappe of heavy weight and all silk measuring 36 inches wide cost 4s. 6½d. per yard; while another quality measuring 29 inches wide costs 3s. 6d. per yard. Dyed Shantung of thoroughly dependable quality is obtainable in a large range of selected shades, 33 inches wide, at 3s. 11d. per yard. There will be a mannequin parade displaying the latest creations in frocks, gowns, and millinery on Tuesday, September 22nd.

Music and Drama.

MR. ZANGWILL'S SEASON AT "THE FORTUNE."

Mr. Israel Zangwill opened his season at the Fortune Theatre on Saturday night by resuming the run of "We Moderns," which was recently played at the New. With the exception of Miss Dora Gregory, who still plays the part of the pipe-smoking lady journalist, the cast is an entirely new one. In many cases an improvement is to be noticed. Miss Nancy Atkin is good as the modern flapper, and makes her a much more understandable and even likeable person than did her predecessor. Miss Jane Bacon is delightful as the unfortunate Dorothy Wimple, and Mr. George Owen is sufficiently villainous as the poet who ruins her. The parents are well portrayed by Mr. H. St. Barbe West and Miss Constance Robertson; and the production (which, as in all the plays in Mr. Zangwill's season, is in the hands of the author himself) is in all respects satisfactory. Pianoforte solos are rendered during the intervals by Mr. Victor Benham.

Although "Merely Mary Anne" is quite definitely dated, as much by its sentiment as by its incidents, there is a curious and indefinable charm about the play. The plot is very ordinary, and the wit of the dialogue occasionally degenerates to mere "smartness," but the principal character, in spite of her naïveté, is an entirely lovable creation. She is, too, most excellently portrayed by Miss Jane Bacon, who traces every step in the psychological transformation of the character with consummate skill, while still cleverly retaining her original individuality. Miss Dora Gregory and Miss May Grew are very good in subsidiary parts. On the whole, the men are less satisfactory, though Mr. Frank J. Randall gives a good rendering of Lancelot, the idealistic composer, and Mr. Clifford Cobbe makes a realistic unguilded youth. Mr. William Lorrimer, as Peter, never seems able to forget that he is acting. "Merely Mary Anne" makes a charming if slight comedy, and with a little judicious compression should appeal at least as much to a "post-war" as it did to a "pre-war" public.

THE EMPEROR JONES.

Mr. Eugene O'Neill's play, "The Emperor Jones," was produced at the Ambassadors last week, and a remarkably effective piece of work it proved to be. It would be difficult to conceive of any play the production of which would entail greater difficulties than this extraordinary work, which depends so entirely on the creation of an atmosphere. Even though it cannot truthfully be said that all the difficulties have been overcome, they have at least been courageously and often successfully attacked. The production is not, in fact, altogether satisfactory; but it is difficult to see how it could have been bettered. O'Neill's peculiar style, with its directness even bluntness of dialogue, calls naturally for a realistic treatment; yet the presentation of ghosts and phantoms in the style of realism, with all the paraphernalia of coloured lights and transparencies, never seems convincing. As far as the incidents of the play are concerned, an impressionistic treatment would have been better, but it would have been out of keeping with the spirit of the drama. Mr. James Light, who was faced with the task of producing, is deserving of whole-hearted sympathy and no small need of praise. As to the cast, there is only one character that really matters—Brutus Jones, the arrogant, masterful negro Emperor of a West Indian Island, whose subjects rise against him. He flees through a forest, where he is haunted by the ghosts of his past crimes, and, after wasting all his cartridges on the creations of his own imagination, is caught and killed. Practically the play is a monologue, and it is really superbly acted by Mr. Paul Robeson, who conveys every shade of the Emperor's transition from arrogance to abject terror. His voice, too, is vibrant, powerful, and extraordinarily expressive. But even Mr. Robeson could not save at least one of his dancing ghosts from being funny. It is to be feared that "The Emperor Jones," fine piece of work though it is, can never be anything more than a play for the library.

The evening was opened with Mr. O'Neill's "The Long Voyage Home," which has previously been reviewed in these columns. It is an ordinary melodramatic "thriller," very far from being worthy of the author of "Anna Christie." When the play was originally produced at the Everyman, it contained little except bad language; now the bad language has been deleted, and there is nothing left. It is neither well acted nor well produced, although Mr. Milton Rosmer is satisfactory as a Swedish sailor.

NOTES AND NEWS.

"The Punch Bowl Revue," which had so successful a run at the Duke of York's, has now been transferred to the Vaudeville, where it bids fair to enter on a new lease of life. There have been many changes in the revue since its first production, and but few of the original cast remain. That versatile comedian, Mr. Robert Hale, is the mainstay of the show, and other notable members of the cast are the Misses Joyce Barbour and Betty Nicholas, and Mr. Bobby Howes. The dancing of Anton Dolin is an attractive and artistic feature.

The kinema star, Miss Betty Blythe, who has the reputation of being the best-dressed film actress, will make her first appearance on the London stage at the Coliseum on Monday. She is to sing and tell stories of the kinema world, and will appear in what is said to be a novel and attractive setting. Another "first appearance" is to be made by Maria del Villar, a Spanish dancer with a Continental reputation. Other contributors to the bill will be John Birmingham's Band, Norah Blaney and Gwen Farrar, Ethel Hook, and the eccentric dancer, Hal Sherman. At the Alhambra, the programme will be headed by three American acts, Brooke Johns and his Oklahoma Collegians, Layton and Johnstone, and Sophie Tucker, who has been described, not without justification, as "The American Marie Lloyd." Also on the bill will be Dollie and Billie, one of the most popular of the many "sister" turns, and Gilbert and French, simultaneous dancers, who played continuously at the Folies Bergères, Paris, for well over a year. The popularity of the "Jazz Band" is evidenced by the fact that another one, the London Band, is to be seen—or rather heard—at the Holborn next week. Conducted by Mr. Emlyn Thomas, it is an "all-British" affair, and holds its own creditably against the imported variety. Also on the bill are J. W. Rickaby, the burlesque character comedian, Tex McLeod, the spinner of ropes and yarns, Hilda Glyder, and Daisy Dormer.

MUSICAL NOTES.

In some respects the concert at the Queen's Hall on Wednesday evening may be justly regarded the as greatest of this season. Miss Dorothea Schroeder sang Bruch's "Ich wob dies Gewand." Miss Schroeder's voice is excellent in quality and control, and particularly when singing in German her enunciation is admirable—such indeed that an English audience could follow every word. And, unless it was due to some acoustic excellence peculiar to the evening, Mr. Walter Widdop, who sang Tchaikowsky's "Oh, Where Has Fled," deserves similar praise for the clearness of his diction. Eric Brough and Edna Howard, who played Bach's concerto for two pianos (in C) did very well indeed in a difficult piece that is, unfortunately, not heard often enough. In this example of Bach's wonderfully balanced and thoughful artistry, it is essential that the performers "let Bach speak for himself." The difficulty is to play and to avoid "interpretation." We want to hear Bach and not anybody's idea of Bach; and seeing that all instrumentalists are ipso facto interpreters, it is to the credit of these performers that they reverently sought to allow the genius of Bach to roll out from the music with all its marvellous weaving of a very beautiful and perfectly designed musical argument.

After the serene and architectonic magnificence of Bach, it was a complete change into the dark mysterious and tragically soul-stirring symphony of Tchaichowsky (Pathetique). The enormous audience which had crowded to the Queen's Hall, mostly, we feel sure, drawn by the announcement of this symphony, tells a story in itself of the profound and lasting effect which it has on those who, having once heard it, know quite well they must hear it again—but not too soon. There is an awful majesty about the symphony, a ruthlessness, a stark realism that bites into the emotions of any who are susceptible to musical suggestion. Sir Henry Wood and his orchestra did justice to this great work—great praise indeed when this can be truthfully said. From the opening dawn-like bars through the mad hectic intense career of the piece to the sombre, silent and darkness in which it finishes, Sir Henry Wood followed up and brought out every current of thought, every twist, every phase that makes up the complex psychology of this symphony. In this sense surely one may place Wednesday's concert as something of a climacteric triumph in the Promenade Season.

CONCERTS IN THE NEW YEAR.

The prospects for the coming concert season are such as to make the music-lover's heart jump for joy. Preluded by the Promenades, the season bursts upon us in full force with the Sunday afternoon concerts at Albert Hall and Queen's Hall on September 27th, closely followed by the Saturday evening concerts at Alexandra Palace every Monday evening, from October 19th.

The Albert Hall Sunday entertainments open with a John McCormack concert, and continue with such great names as Toti dal Monte, Heifetz, Pachmann, Tetrazzini, and Hempel; whilst at the Queen's Hall a wealth of pianoforte music is promised, beginning with Miss Irene Scharrer and followed by Benno Moiseiwitsch, Backhaus, Pachmann, etc. Pachmann is evidently hale and hearty, and we all wish him many years more of health so that he may still delight us with his wonderful interpretations. What a wonderful man he is!

The London Symphony Concerts promise to be up to their usual standard, with Albert Coates, Bruno Walter, Sir Thomas Beecham among the conductors, and Cortot, Respighi and Pablo Casals among the artists. Pablo Casals, the great 'cellist, is also conducting the London Symphony Orchestra at one of the concerts, and is bringing a 'cellist, Mr. Cassadó, with him to play at that concert. This is the first time he has conducted in England.

THE MOTHER.

Morris had not told his mother of his impending engagement, and the old lady received the news of his injury and of his betrothal simultaneously in a note which Mr. Greenstone had written her at Morris's request. She was very eagerly awaiting Hertha's visit, partly because she was naturally anxious to make her acquaintance, but chiefly because she was burning to have first-hand news of her beloved son who was all-in-all to her. An affection of the legs prevented her from leaving her room, where she was tended with devoted care by her companion, Phœbe Chaucer, a buxom little Devonshire girl with a bright tongue and rosy cheeks.

Hertha was very nervous as she rang the bell. She wondered what sort of impression she would make on the old lady, whom Alec had described very tenderly.

"It's the first mother-in-law I've ever had," she said to herself quaintly as she followed Miss Chaucer upstairs, glancing curiously at the old Jewish caricatures that adorned the walls, and which she mentally resolved to ask her lover to identify for her when they were able to visit the house together.

Mrs. Morris held Hertha at arm's length when they were eventually brought face to face.

"So you are Alec's choice!" the old lady exclaimed, after a scrutiny that Hertha found distinctly embarrassing.

"I am pleased to meet you," said Hertha, rather feebly.

"And how is my poor boy!" Mrs. Morris asked, motioning Hertha to a seat at her side.

"The doctor says he is going on well, but must be kept very quiet for a few days."

"To be shot twice in one day is rather serious," said the old lady, with a twinkle in her eye.

"Twice!"

"Yes. Cupid and a burglar."

"Oh, I see. But I think Cupid must have shot Alec quite a long time ago."

"And Alec never told his mother a word about it! He is a sly boy. I think he might have taken me into his confidence, and told me he was going to get engaged."

"But he . . . . he didn't know," Hertha stammered.

Mrs. Morris looked up interrogatively.

"I mean he . . . he had to ask me first," the girl added with a laugh. "And he teased me horribly before he . . ."

"Popped the question!"

"Yes. He began by telling me fairy stories which made me cry, and then he made it up by giving me the ring. Do you like it?"

She held up her engagement ring for inspection.

"It is very nice. Now dear, ring the bell and we'll have some tea, and you shall tell me all about yourself."

Soon the couple were deep in an intimate conversation which, if it did not reveal the deeper side of Hertha's character, displayed her power of tripping lightly over the surface of commonplace domesticities where the old lady was completely at home.

Young Israel.

SEPTEMBER 18, 1925—ELLUL 29, 5685.

Auntie's Chat.

Once more I have pleasure in wishing you all a Happy New Year. Even apart from its special religious associations a special solemnity always attaches to this day which marks the progress of time. We none of us like to feel we are growing older, at least none who have reached my matriarchal age, and every New Year's Day seems to say: "Well, old lady, there's another one gone, and you are one stage nearer . . ." But these are melancholy reflections, and when I started I meant to be very cheerful.

THE LEAGUE IN 5685.

I think the League can look back on 5685 with satisfaction. We had a very big accession of members. We completed our first Cot Fund and made a good start with our second. Our Correspondence Exchange has proved more popular than ever, and through its medium, "cousins" all over the world have been linked up, and I am continually being thanked for the splendid friendships which the Exchange has been the means of cementing. We held some interesting debates and had some jolly competitions. I can testify from my post-bag that the interest of readers in Young Israel is as keen as ever, and I am delighted to receive almost every week flattering references to my Chats and other features of our little Supplement. I am especially glad to learn how much our serials are appreciated. "The Mystery Man" was good, but I think you all agree that "The Two Shots" is a splendid story. It was written specially for Young Israel, and, as it is a full-length novel, it will be running for some time yet. I hope, in the coming year, that Young Israel will be more interesting than ever, and I trust you will all help to make the League go from strength to strength, and that the Cot Fund, in particular, will beat the record of its predecessor.

"SHOFAR" NOTES.

We shall miss the notes of the Shofar on the first day of the New Year festival this year as it falls on the Sabbath, but no doubt most of us will make a point of hearing it on the second day. It is not easy to sound the Shofar, and it is not easy to listen to it without being awe-struck by its shrill reminder of all the things of life that matter. It seems to blow away the shams and make-believes and self-deceptions in

Music and Drama.

MR. ZANGWILL'S SEASON AT "THE FORTUNE."

Mr. Israel Zangwill opened his season at the Fortune Theatre on Saturday night by resuming the run of "We Moderns," which was recently played at the New. With the exception of Miss Dora Gregory, who still plays the part of the pipe-smoking lady journalist, the cast is an entirely new one. In many cases an improvement is to be noticed. Miss Nancy Atkin is good as the modern flapper, and makes her a much more understandable and even likeable person than did her predecessor. Miss Jane Bacon is delightful as the unfortunate Dorothy Wimple, and Mr. George Owen is sufficiently villainous as the poet who ruins her. The parents are well portrayed by Mr. H. St. Barbe West and Miss Constance Robertson; and the production (which, as in all the plays in Mr. Zangwill's season, is in the hands of the author himself) is in all respects satisfactory. Pianoforte solos are rendered during the intervals by Mr. Victor Benham.

Although "Merely Mary Anne" is quite definitely "dated," as much by its sentiment as by its incidents, there is a curious and indefinable charm about the play. The plot is very ordinary, and the wit of the dialogue occasionally degenerates to mere "smartness," but the principal character, in spite of her naïveté, is an entirely lovable creation. She is, too, most excellently portrayed by Miss Jane Bacon, who traces every step in the psychological transformation of the character with consummate skill, while still cleverly retaining her original individuality. Miss Dora Gregory and Miss May Grew are very good in subsidiary parts. On the whole, the men are less satisfactory, though Mr. Frank J. Randall gives a good rendering of Lancelot, the idealistic composer, and Mr. Clifford Cobbe makes a realistic "unguilded youth." Mr. William Lorrimer, as Peter, never seems able to forget that he is acting. "Merely Mary Anne" makes a charming if slight comedy, and with a little judicious compression should appeal at least as much to a "post-war" as it did to a "pre-war" public.

"THE EMPEROR JONES."

Mr. Eugene O'Neill's play, "The Emperor Jones," was produced at the Ambassadors last week, and a remarkably effective piece of work it proved to be. It would be difficult to conceive of any play the production of which would entail greater difficulties than this extraordinary work, which depends so entirely on the creation of an atmosphere. Even though it cannot truthfully be said that all the difficulties have been overcome, they have at least been courageously and often successfully attacked. The production is not, in fact, altogether satisfactory; but it is difficult to see how it could have been bettered. O'Neill's peculiar style, with its directness—even bluntness—of dialogue, calls naturally for a realistic treatment; yet the presentation of ghosts and phantoms in the style of realism, with all the paraphernalia of coloured lights and transparencies, never seems convincing. As far as the incidents of the play are concerned, an impressionistic treatment would have been better, but it would have been out of keeping with the spirit of the drama. Mr. James Light, who was faced with the task of producing, is deserving of whole-hearted sympathy and no small meed of praise. As to the cast, there is only one character that really matters—Brutus Jones, the arrogant, masterful negro Emperor of a West Indian Island, whose subjects rise against him. He flees through a forest, where he is haunted by the ghosts of his past crimes, and, after wasting all his cartridges on the creations of his own imagination, is caught and killed. Practically the play is a monologue, and it is really superbly acted by Mr. Paul Robeson, who conveys every shade of the Emperor's transition from arrogance to abject terror. His voice, too, is vibrant, powerful, and extraordinarily expressive. But even Mr. Robeson could not save at least one of his dancing ghosts from being funny. It is to be feared that "The Emperor Jones," fine piece of work though it is, can never be anything more than a play for the library.

The evening was opened with Mr. O'Neill's "The Long Voyage Home," which has previously been reviewed in these columns. It is an ordinary melodramatic "thriller," very far from being worthy of the author of "Anna Christie." When the play was originally produced at the Everyman, it contained little except bad language; now the bad language has been deleted, and there is nothing left. It is neither well acted nor well produced, although Mr. Milton Rosmer is satisfactory as a Swedish sailor.

NOTES AND NEWS.

"The Punch-Bowl Revue," which had so successful a run at the Duke of York's, has now been transferred to the Vaudeville, where it bids fair to enter on a new lease of life. There have been many changes in the revue since its first production, and but few of the original cast remain. That versatile comedian, Mr. Robert Hale, is the mainstay of the show, and other notable members of the cast are the Misses Joyce Barbour and Betty Nicholas, and Mr. Bobby Howes. The dancing of Anton Dolin is an attractive and artistic feature.

The kinema star, Miss Betty Blythe, who has the reputation of being the best-dressed film actress, will make her first appearance on the London stage at the Coliseum on Monday. She is to sing and tell stories of the kinema world, and will appear in what is said to be a novel and attractive setting. Another "first appearance" is to be made by Maria del Villar, a Spanish dancer with a Continental reputation. Other contributors to the bill will be John Birmingham's Band, Norah Blaney and Gwen Farrar, Ethel Hook, and the eccentric dancer, Hal Sherman. At the Alhambra, the programme will be headed by three American acts, Brooke Johns and his Oklahoma Collegians, Layton and Johnstone, and Sophie Tucker, who has been described, not without justification, as "The American Marie Lloyd." Also on the bill will be Dollie and Billie, one of the most popular of the many "sister" turns, and Gilbert and French, simultaneous dancers, who played continuously at the Folies Bergères Paris, for well over a year. The popularity of the "Jazz Band" is evidenced by the fact that another one, the London Band, is to be seen—or rather heard—at the Holborn next week. Conducted by Mr. Emlyn Thomas, it is an "all-British" affair, and holds its own creditably against the imported variety. Also on the bill are J. W. Rickaby, the burlesque character comedian, Tex McLeod, the spinner of ropes and yarns, Hilda Glyder, and Daisy Dormer.

LUCIFER.

MUSICAL NOTES.

In some respects the concert at the Queen's Hall on Wednesday evening may be justly regarded the as greatest of this season. Miss Dorothea Schroeder sang Bruch's "Ich wob dies Gewand." Miss Schroeder's voice is excellent in quality and control, and particularly when singing in German her enunciation is admirable—such indeed that an English audience could follow every word. And, unless it was due to some acoustic excellence peculiar to the evening, Mr. Walter Widdop, who sang Tchaikowsky's "Oh, Where Has Fled," deserves similar praise for the clearness of his diction. Eric Brough and Edna Howard, who played Bach's concerto for two pianos (in C) did very well indeed in a difficult piece that is, unfortunately, not heard often enough. In this example of Bach's wonderfully balanced and thoughtful artistry, it is essential that the performers "let Bach speak for himself." The difficulty is to play and to avoid "interpretation." We want to hear Bach and not anybody's idea of Bach; and seeing that all instrumentalists are ipso facto interpreters, it is to the credit of these performers that they reverently sought to allow the genius of Bach to roll out from the music with all its marvellous weaving of a very beautiful and perfectly designed musical argument.

After the serene and architectonic magnificence of Bach, it was a complete change into the dark mysterious and tragically soul-stirring symphony of Tchaichowsky (Pathetique). The enormous audience which had crowded to the Queen's Hall, mostly, we feel sure, drawn by the announcement of this symphony, tells a story in itself of the profound and lasting effect which it has on those who, having once heard it, know quite well they must hear it again—but not too soon. There is an awful majesty about the symphony, a ruthlessness, a stark realism that bites into the emotions of any who are susceptible to musical suggestion. Sir Henry Wood and his orchestra did justice to this great work—great praise indeed when this can be truthfully said. From the opening dawn-like bars through the mad hectic intense career of the piece to the sombre sunset and darkness in which it finishes, Sir Henry Wood followed up and brought out every current of thought, every twist, every phase that makes up the complex psychology of this symphony. In this sense surely one may place Wednesday's concert as something of a climacteric triumph in the Promenade Season.

CONCERTS IN THE NEW YEAR.

The prospects for the coming concert season are such as to make the music-lover's heart jump for joy. Preluded by the Promenades, the season bursts upon us in full force with the Sunday afternoon concerts at Albert Hall and Queen's Hall on September 27th, closely followed by the Saturday evening concerts at Alexandra Palace every Monday evening, from October 19th.

The Albert Hall Sunday entertainments open with a John McCormack concert, and continue with such great names as Toti dal Monte, Heifetz, Pachmann, Tetrazzini, and Hempel; whilst at the Queen's Hall a wealth of pianoforte music is promised, beginning with Miss Irene Scharrer and followed by Benno Moiseiwitsch, Backhaus, Pachmann, etc. Pachmann is evidently hale and hearty, and we all wish him many years more of health so that he may still delight us with his wonderful interpretations. What a wonderful man he is!

The London Symphony Concerts promise to be up to their usual standard, with Albert Coates, Bruno Walter, Sir Thomas Beecham among the conductors, and Cortot, Respigni and Pablo Casals among the artists. Pablo Casals, the great 'cellist, is also conducting the London Symphony Orchestra at one of the concerts, and is bringing a 'cellist, Mr. Cassada, with him to play at that concert. This is the first time he has conducted in England.

"Popped the question!"

"Yes. He began by telling me fairy stories which made me cry, and then he made it up by giving me the ring. Do you like it?"

She held up her engagement ring for inspection.

"It is very nice. Now dear, ring the bell and we'll have some tea, and you shall tell me all about yourself."

Soon the couple were deep in an intimate conversation which, if it did not reveal the deeper side of Hertha's character, displayed her power of tripping lightly over the surface of commonplace domesticities where the old lady was completely at home.

Young Israel.

SEPTEMBER 18, 1925—ELLUL 29, 5685.

Auntie's Chat.

Once more I have pleasure in wishing you all a Happy New Year. Even apart from its special religious associations a special solemnity always attaches to this day which marks the progress of time. We none of us like to feel we are growing older, at least none who have reached my matriarchal age, and every New Year's Day seems to say: "Well, old lady, there's another one gone, and you are one stage nearer . . ." But these are melancholy reflections, and when I started I meant to be very cheerful.

THE LEAGUE IN 5685.

I think the League can look back on 5685 with satisfaction. We had a very big accession of members. We completed our first Cot Fund and made a good start with our second. Our Correspondence Exchange has proved more popular than ever, and through its medium, "cousins" all over the world have been linked up, and I am continually being thanked for the splendid friendships which the Exchange has been the means of cementing. We held some interesting debates and had some jolly competitions. I can testify from my post-bag that the interest of readers in Young Israel is as keen as ever, and I am delighted to receive almost every week flattering references to my Chats and other features of our little Supplement. I am especially glad to learn how much our serials are appreciated. "The Mystery Man" was good, but I think you all agree that "The Two Shots" is a splendid story. It was written specially for Young Israel, and, as it is a full-length novel, it will be running for some time yet. I hope, in the coming year, that Young Israel will be more interesting than ever, and I trust you will all help to make the League go from strength to strength, and that the Cot Fund, in particular, will beat the record of its predecessor.

"SHOFAR" NOTES.

We shall miss the notes of the Shofar on the first day of the New Year festival this year as it falls on the Sabbath, but no doubt most of us will make a point of hearing it on the second day. It is not easy to sound the Shofar, and it is not easy to listen to it without being awe-struck by its shrill reminder of all the things of life that matter. It seems to blow away the shams and make-believes and self-deceptions in

"Acts like Magic"

It isn't baby's fault when he cries. The poor mite wants to sleep as much as you do. But he is naturally delicate—nervous. Or he may have digestive pains.

Woodward's Gripe Water will soothe him in either case—and cannot do him any harm. Mothers, nurses, doctors — all recommend it. Here is one written testimony from our records:—

"I have just had an experience with a very delicate child, fretful from birth. I tried giving baby a teaspoonful of Woodward's Gripe Water after the last feed at 10 p.m. It acted like magic."

That is what Woodward's has been doing for seventy years. After teething or vaccination, in all minor digestive troubles, it is a safe and certain cure.

WOODWARD'S "GRIPE WATER"

The most famous of all correctives for:—

COLIC	PEEVISHNESS
FLATULENCE	DIGESTION
ACIDITY	DISORDERED
TEETHING	STOMACH

which we indulge, and brings us face to face with stern realities and—with God. It is as if the rouge and the powder of the soul are washed away and our real moral complexions are revealed. It is well for us that we should have this moment of revelation for sometimes only a shock can bring us to our senses. The Shofar always seems to me to supply that shock. It has some subtle psychological effect on the nervous systems of those that hear it, and thus attunes them to the spiritual atmosphere of the day. The voice of God is not in the Shofar any more than it was in the rumbling of the earthquake. The voice of God is the still small voice of our own consciences. Listen to that voice! And respond to its warning! That is the message of the Day of Memorial.

A New Year Vision.

I bent mine ear unto the ground,
And heard a dread and fearsome sound,
A trumpet-blast that seemed to say:
"Who shall survive the Judgment Day?"

I turned my glance unto the sky,
And saw God's angels passing by.
In flame was written on their path;
"Who shall abide before His wrath?"

Then came to me—I know not how—
A soothing touch upon my brow.
I heard a voice in accents pure:
"His mercy shall for aye endure."

AUNTIE'S LETTER BOX.

Jennie Z. Rubinstein, Dublin.—The big "batch" duly arrived. I have heard very little about the Order, which is evidently still in its infancy. Yetta has not written to me lately. The number is now 683). Please let me see the story. It was omitted in error. I hope to start another debate soon. Write again when you have time, as I always like to receive your letters.

Ben Shenofsky, Liverpool.—It is good to have ideals and to think out social problems for yourself. I do not read that daily paper, so its opinions do not worry me. A friend of mine was present at that meeting, and was greatly impressed when the bright group of youngsters trooped in. I hope that you will be able to carry out all the duties you have to do.

Mark Silverman, Bristol.—A hearty welcome to you. I am glad that you approve of our League. My best thanks to you and Cissie for your gifts to the Cot Fund.

Muriel Sugden, Nottingham.—I am glad that you thought of others whilst having your own holiday. Thank you very much for the enclosures you sent for two of our funds. So you think that the serial story "The Two Shots," is the best that we have yet published. Of course, it is included, and that is why it is called "Go-as-you-please" competition.

Harry Waterman, Leeds.—All entries must be written in ink. Yours is disqualified, as you forgot to carry out rule 4. You have time to try again

Isidore Weinberg, Mile End.—It was indeed a long time since you last wrote. Many thanks for your usual collection. I hope the prize reached you. I congratulate you heartily on your success, and hope that it is only the first of many.

Israel Vovsianker, Constantinople.—Welcome to the League. I hope to hear more of you later.

"GO-AS-YOU-PLEASE" COMPETITION.

When I set competitions I generally fail to please everybody. If I set a drawing competition, the essayists are dissatisfied and the needleworkers disgruntled. If I offer prizes for an essay, my literary readers are elated; but those who are not Hazlitts or Addisons (I musn't speak of Bacon!) are downcast. So in this competition I am going to make an attempt to please everybody by telling you that you may go as you please. The essayist may submit an essay, the needlewoman may send in a garment or a piece of fancy work, the "conundrumist" may offer a "riddle-me-ree," the poets may send verse, the hobbyists anything they "hob." Anything will qualify for a prize on condition that the rules are carefully observed. FOUR PRIZES will be awarded for boys and girls in both senior and junior sections.

RULES.

1. Competitors must be Members of the League.

2. Juniors must be under 13 years of age.

3. All entries must be guaranteed the unaided work of competitors.

4. Entries must be marked or labelled "Competition," and must be accompanied by information as to the name, address and age of the competitor.

5. Written entries should be on one side of the paper only, and not on the same paper as a letter to "Auntie."

6. Entries should be received on or before September 30th.
